Disarmament Held Important Way For World Peace

How to achieve world peace—and whether it is worth the cost—drew the attention of a throng of Marinites at an Interfaith Peace Conference yesterday in the Civic Center.

Two principal speakers both held that disarmament is a necessary prerequisite of peace. Both held it is not the sole prerequisite.

Here are reports on afternoon and evening sessions of the conference:

By RICHARD LYTTLE

Two out of every three dollars paid in taxes by Californians goes to the federal government, and of each dollar the federal government receives, 74 cents goes to pay for past wars and new armaments.

State Controller Alan Cranston, the state's chief tax collector, cited these figures to 50 persons attending the opening session of an Interfaith Peace Conference at the Marin County Civic Center yesterday.

"The cost dwarfs all imagination," Cranston said. A new Saturn booster rocket now being designed will cost 770 million dollars to build. And it will cost 20 million dollars each time it is fired.

The conference, sponsored by the Marin Council of Churches, continued last night and this morning. Cranston's topic was "Can California Afford Peace?"

"Of course it can," he said.

He said humanity cannot afford a full-scale war and it is very doubtful that the arms race can continue at the present pace.

"The costs are astronomical, the risks immeasurable, and the outcome is not clear," he said.

Cranston said he is not a pacifist. He does not believe we should put down our arms, leave ourselves unprotected, and hope that the Russians will show good faith and follow our example.

But he believes in striving for peace and he thinks a "real peace" is possible. A real peace would be one with safe-

Hatred . . . retribution . . . fear . . . greed . . . impatience . . .sloth.

These make up the price of peace, said Byron Johnson special assistant to the director of the Agency for International Development, in a Marin Civic Center speech last night. They are "what we would have to give up to buy the things that peace requires."

Johnson spoke to about 100 persons at the after-dinner session of an Inter-faith Peace Conference sponsored by the Marin Council of Churches. The conference concluded this morning with a breakfast discussion, led by Rev. Donald Baldwin, council of churches president, on what Marin congregations can do to promote peace.

"We can be sure the human race will someday accept disarmament; the question is, whether before World War III or after?" said Johnson, former economics professor, gov-

Fire Hoses, Dogs Again Used On Negroes In South

COMBINED AP & UPI

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Firemen today turned high pressure hoses on Negro demonstrators for the second straight day in this racially-tense city.

Police followed close behind with dogs straining at their leashes.

More than 50 demonstrators, including a number of children, were arrested.

There have been more than 1,000 arrests in the past three days.

Twenty-five Negro youths were arrested today when they tried to march on city hall. The action then shifted to a park where hundreds of Negroes were routed yesterday by firehoses.

Negroes tried a diversionary tactic by bringing out small groups from a church one block from the park.

Police and firemen quickly set up the hoses and brought out the dogs.

A woman carrying an infant approximately three months old stood for awhile in the forefront of the group of church demonstrators waiting to come out. But finally, most of that group dispersed.

About 3,000 Negroes gathered in the park to confront the policemen and firemen.

Scores of Negroes, most of them high school age, were sent sprawling by the terrific force of the fire hoses. The dogs were pulled back when the water seemed to be effectively containing the main body of demonstrators within the square block confines of the park.

Officers skirted the surrounding streets and yards, however, to prevent any groups from reforming for a march toward the city hall, which was apparently the main objective.

In Washington, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy canceled a speech to remain in his office today, and dispatched two top aides to Birmingham in an effort to ease racial tensions there.

President John F. Kennedy was reported dismayed at the violence there, a visitor to his office reported.

The attorney general had been scheduled to deliver a Law Day address at the University of Virginia Law School at Charlottesville, Va. Instead, he remained in his Justice Department office to keep in touch with the situation.

C. Burke Marshall, assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Rights Division, and Joseph F. Dolan, assistant deputy attorney general, were dis-

Reporter Tells What It's Like In Alabama

By PAUL PHILLIPS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Five firemen stood less than 50 feet away from here yesterday sweeping methodically with a high pressure hose and sending hundreds of racial demonstrators tumbling in the street.

The force downs a man as fast as a charging tackle on a football field and is no less damaging.

I was in a corner telephone booth dictating a story as a crowd of chanting, singing, Negroes surged time and again into the face of a police blockade. Spray hung across the intersection like fog.

When the first powerful blast hit the frontline of anti-segregation marchers, they toppled and rolled in the streets, clinging to the curb and to each other.

As the hose swung away, they jeered the firemen, taunting with catcalls. But the ones who didn't flee at first soon were routed by the full force of spray.

Then the firemen turned their attention to a small group of Negroes on the corner where I was standing.

"Let's get those people there," an officer shouted.

The firemen swung the hose quickly and the gush of water splattered the seven Negroes on the corner. They fled into a restaurant and firemen followed, playing their hose in the restaurant for two or three minutes.

"They're turning the hose on us," I shouted to another newsman.

Elvin Stanton of radio station WSGN, jumped into the phone booth with me. We braced for the blast of water which hit the glass wall with a roar.

The water was brown, then a boiling white froth which roared through the cracks in

Home Is Destroyed By $75,000 Blaze

Fire destroyed a six-room view home on fashionable Cloud View Road today, with loss estimated by the owner at $75,000.

The entire interior of the Dr. Sigurd von Christierson home at 71 Cloud View Road was ablaze by the time the Sausalito Fire Department responded to a call from a neighbor who saw smoke and flame billowing from the residence.

"We didn't save a thing," said Mrs. von Christierson, who was at work at Miller Realty on Princess Street in Sausalito when the blaze broke out. Her husband, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, was at work at St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco.

The modern home, overhanging a cliff with a panoramic view of San Francisco Bay, was left only a blackened shell.

Firemen were called at 10:10 a.m. All three fire trucks, with 25 paid firemen and volunteers responded to the alarm. Two trucks from the Alto Fire Department were called to stand by at the Sausalito firehouse.

Mrs. von Christierson said the home was insured, but she was unsure whether all furniture and personal belongings were covered. She and her husband stopped temporarily with Mrs. A. Fraser Gump at 65 Cloud View Road after being called to see firemen pouring water on the ruins of their home.

Firemen could hazard no guess as to what started the blaze. It apparently began in the living room, which looked out through broad windows on the bay, and worked through kitchen and bedrooms.

Great Weather –For The Fish

The fish got all the breaks today as trout season opened with a soggy drizzle in Marin County.

If the rains keep up, the fish may take over. The Weather Bureau repeated the familiar weekend forecast today —occasional rain tonight and tomorrow in the Bay Area.

The storm started slowly this morning with light drizzles in most areas of the county. By mid-morning, Woodacre had .05 of an inch, Ross and Point Reyes Station, .03; Muir Woods, .02, and Larkspur, .01. But the rain was spotty, by noon San Rafael had only a trace.

Late Execution Stays Leave Some Shattered Nerves, Upset Warden

Yesterday's cliff-hanging stay of execution for three inmates of San Quentin Prison's Death Row left some badly shattered nerves and an upset warden.

"We very seldom get a stay this late. I think it's a pretty horrible thing to wait until the very last minute," Warden Fred R. Dickson said in a news conference yesterday. "I think the law should be tightened to prevent it."

U. S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas halted the executions of three men just two hours before the first gas pellets were to be dropped.

Dickson said the last-minute action was "hard on the condemned men, it's hard on us, and it's hard on everyone else."

Meanwhile, former window washer Charles J. Golston, 21, told what it was like to have his fate changed from death in the gas chamber to life imprisonment.

"I just stood there staring and then let out a big yell," Golston said as he recalled learning of his reprieve Thursday night. "I told the other inmates on the Row and they gave me a big cheer."

Golston was sentenced to die for the August, 1961, rape and murder of a 79-year-old Los Angeles woman. Gov. Edmund G. Brown said he spared Golston's life because he was only 19 at the time of the crime and because of recent evidence showing schizophrenic tendencies and sexual abnormalities.

The life sentence carries no possibility of parole.

"I've been on the Row 15 months," Golston said. "I've seen 15 men walk out of there and never come back.

"This is the second time I've had a date downstairs (the gas chamber). I came pretty close each time.

"It's hard on a man's nerves going through that. I was tense, but I never did lose my nerve. I always had that hidden hope.

"If a man loses that hidden hope, I believe he's done for.

"I prayed. I just didn't pray every night. I prayed constantly. I was always looking for some miracle. It happened."

Through a coincidence in setting by two different trail judges, four men were to die

Two Demand Trial In Death Penalty Protest

A University of California student and a New York youth, both arrested in a death penalty protest demonstration outside San Quentin Prison, demanded a jury trial yesterday.

Peter R. Paskin, 18, Berkeley student, and Rober D. Polansky, 20, a New Yorker living with friends in Berkeley, pleaded innocent to charges that they ignored orders to disperse. They were among some 200 persons who gathered Thursday night at the main prison gate to protest a triple execution scheduled yesterday but postponed.

Paskin, Polansky and 10 other young men and women were taken to Marin County Jail for allegedly ignoring repeated warnings from sheriff's deputies to move away from the gate roadway, on which they were sitting.

Municipal Court Judge Harold J. Haley sought a speedy disposition of the misdemeanor charges against four of the demonstrators, who were under 21, for California law requires that a jailed minor must either be represented in court by a lawyer or his parents must be notified.

The judge called San Rafael attorney Hadden W. Roth to

Planes Collide; One Goes Down

MOUNTAIN HOME AIR FORCE BASE, Idaho (AP) — Two Air Force planes collided while refueling in midair near West Yellowstone, Mont., last night. One landed safely, but the other was presumed to have crashed.

A search for the missing plane, a B-47 bomber, began this morning in the snow-covered mountain country near the Idaho-Wyoming border.

The other plane, a KC-135 tanker, landed safely here. All five crewmen aboard were unhurt.

Mill Valley Might Hold Taxes At $2.20

Mill Valley city councilmen juggled fines and service charges today with sufficient success that City Mgr. A. E. Almcrants said next year's property tax rate could be held to $2.20 per $100 assessed valuation.

Almcrants said at opening of the special council study session that he hoped to hold the line at $2.25. The council did better than that.

This was accomplished by agreement to increase licenses and permits by 32 per cent, fines and penalties by 30 per cent, and service charges by a miniscule .003 of one per cent —and by switching such items as checking planning fees and sewer charges from "service" to "permit" category to give them the 32 per cent hike.

The city manager called it unrealistic to try to hold to the current $1.98 tax rate, in view of the fact that last year's budget was financed in part by using up $50,000 of reserve funds. He said that without the reserves it would have required about a $2.25 rate.

Almcrants suggested levying

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Reds Admit Kozlov Ailing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party today the virtually unprecedented step of announcing that Frol Kozlov—billed as heir apparent to Premier Nikita Khrushchev—was ill.

The announcement, published in the Soviet press, did not say what ailed the 55-year-old secretary of the Communist party.

Kozlov began his political rise in Moscow during World War II. He became first secretary of the Leningrad party organization in 1950, but played no prominent part on the national stage until after the death of Stalin in 1953.

He was out of sight for about a month in 1961, missing the May Day parade that year too, but soon showed up looking tanned and healthy. He told reporters then that he had suffered "a severe heart attack."

31 Die In Fiery Crash

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Officials counted 31 dead today in the crash of a Brazilian airliner that plowed into a heavily built up area but miraculously hit only an unoccupied apartment building.

At least 20,000 persons rushed to the scene, seriously hampering rescue efforts. Several were reported killed when a fire truck slammed into part of the crowd.

Despite the throng, 17 persons were snatched alive from the blazing wreckage and rushed to local hospitals. One person was missing from the 44 passengers and five crewmen aboard the two-engined Convair.

The plane plunged to earth shortly after takeoff last night.

Speaks For Death Penalty

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The furor over Gov. Edmund G. Brown's limited death penalty moratorium bill is obscuring another measure which "will virtually eliminate capital punishment," an assemblyman declares.

C. George Deukmejian (R-Long Beach) said yesterday that the bill by Assemblyman John Knox (D-Richmond) should be defeated when it comes up for vote on the Assembly floor.

The bill would allow anyone who has a conscientious objection to the death penalty to sit on a jury hearing a capital case.

Hollywood Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jacques Bergerac has filed for divorce from actress Dorothy Malone, a day after she sued him for divorce.

Bergerac charged in his suit yesterday that Miss Malone moved out of their Beverly Hills home Thursday with their children, Mimi, 2, and Diane, 14 months.

Both Bergerac and Miss Malone, each 35, are demanding custody of the children and have charged each other with cruelty. They married four years ago.

Solo Flight Postponed

HONOLULU (AP)—Betty Miller, 37, attempting to become the first woman to fly solo from the United States to Australia, postponed today for 24 hours the second leg of her flight.

She scheduled her new departure time for dawn tomorrow.

Nixon 'Send Off'

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon has been invited to attend a May 22 Los Angeles County Republican "grass roots" dinner as an honored guest.

The dinner also would serve as a "send off" for Nixon, who plans to move to New York.

Rocky Apartments

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has purchased an apartment in a building under construction next to one in which he already maintains two floors of apartments, his press secretary says.

The New York Daily News said today in a copyright story that the two apartments overlooking Central Park are being connected.

"It seems to be shaping up into a gorgeous honeymoon home, complete with kids," the News said.

Thresher Momentoes

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (UPI)—A packet containing a scale model and a photograph of the nuclear submarine Thresher as well as other momentoes of the ill-fated vessel will be given the family of each of the 129 men aboard her on her last voyage.

A spokesman at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, where the Thresher was built and where she underwent overhaul before her final voyage, said yesterday the articles in the package were mostly for the children of the lost crewmen.

Author Is Injured

TEMECULA (UPI) — Author Erle Stanley Gardner, 73, was recuperating at his ranch today from injuries suffered when his three-wheeled desert vehicle overturned in Baja California, Mexico.

The famed mystery writer suffered several cracked ribs in the mishap in the Gonzaga Bay area on the east side of Baja California. He was accompanying an archeological expedition.

Gardner said he planned to return to Gonzaga Bay "as soon as I can."

Six Die In Blaze

ROCKVILLE, Ind. (UPI)—Fire swept through a home for mentally retarded children here last night, killing six children and injuring five others, one critically.

All of the dead were between three and 10 years of age.

Saud Jetliner Found

SANTANNA DI VALIERI, Italy (UPI)—A search party located the wreckage of Arabian King Saud's missing jetliner in the Alps near here late yesterday, but snow prevented full examination of the debris.

Customs Police Sgt. A. Gorlato said the cabin of the plane looked like a "death chamber."

Strict Curfew Is Clamped On Haiti

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Neighboring Haiti teetered on the brink of a new explosion today as President Francois Duvalier declared martial law and imposed a strict 8 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew.

No reason was given for the measures announced last night. Haitians feared swift new reprisals from Duvalier, tightening his hold on the impoverished Negro republic to head off a threatened revolt May 15.

MORE KILLING

Reports reaching Santo Domingo through the Duvalier censorship said informed circles in Haiti spoke of more killings and reprisals than was commonly believed.

They coincided with reports from U. S. sources in Washington that Duvalier has mounted a reign of terror, including murder, torture, arrests, and purges of military officers.

Unconfirmed reports from Port au Prince, the Haitian capital, said Duvalier's underground opponents hurled a bomb that failed to explode at a water installation Thursday night. But travelers from Port au Prince said they had no evidence to support rumors of a large-scale clash inside Haiti.

MARTIAL LAW

Duvalier declared martial law soon after the inter-American peace mission seeking to cool off threats of a Haiti-Dominican clash had left Port au Prince Thursday night.

The peace mission from the Organization of American States won assurances from the Duvalier government that Haiti would protect foreign embassies and the rights of Haitians who had taken asylum in them.

USSR Faces Possibility Of War Defeat

WASHINGTON (AP)—For the first time, the Soviet Union is frankly facing up to the possibility it could be defeated in a war, an Air Force analyst concludes after a study of Russian military writings.

Further, he finds that the Soviet high command is not of one mind on nuclear age strategy. Russian military conservatives, he says, "regard the nuclear rocket only as a new and important addition to the armament locker.

"The radicals call it 'decisive' in the sense that it reduces, or eliminates, the need for other weapons . . ."

Lt. Col. Murray Green, the Air Force's associate chief of research and analysis, reached these conclusions in an analysis of the first comprehensive discourse on military doctrine to appear in the Soviet Union since 1926.

The book, entitled "Military Strategy," is a compilation of military writings of 15 high-ranking officials, including Soviet Marshal V. D. Sokolovsky, who also was the study's editor.

It was issued last year in a first edition of 20,000 copies, all of which were sold almost immediately.

In his analysis, Green points out the book is packed with doctrinal contradictions due to the authors' diverse military theories. But, he says, the book must be taken seriously as a reflection of Soviet military thinking "despite its shortcomings."

"Military Strategy" has done more than any other book "to encourage realism in the Soviet Union about nuclear war," writes Green.

It concedes the possibility of civilian casualties "in the tens of millions" and has this to say about battlefield casualties:

"It is possible that entire subdivisions, units and even army groups will be destroyed. However, this should not have any bearing on the speed of operations."

Green figures this means "the Soviets expect to fight to win. They have not succumbed to the defeatism which argues that destruction will be so great as to make pointless a need to prosecute the war in the most vigorous way possible."

Yet apparently, the Russian officials have no blind belief in the invincibility of 'Mother Russia.'"

"For the first time," writes Green, "The Sokolovsky study openly discusses the theoretical possibility of defeat. The Soviet Union is now strong enough militarily, and conscious enough of her strength, to discuss chances of defeat dispassionately."

Green singles out the line "The laws of strategy are objective and apply impartially to both sides."

"There is no more frank or significant statement in the study than this one for it reflects the Soviet Union's return to fallibility," he says.

House GOP Group Claims Credit For $1.2-Billion Cut In U.S. Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Republican Congressional Committee claimed credit today for cuts of nearly 1.2 billion dollars in President John F. Kennedy's budget—and promptly drew a Democratic rebuttal.

"A grandstand play," commented Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee.

The GOP claim for all 1963 budget-cutting to date was made in the committee's weekly newsletter.

"Pressing their battle for economy," the letter read, "House Republicans have already cut nearly 1.2 billion dollars from New Frontier spending requests for fiscal 1964 and came close to lopping off another 1.6 billion."

The Republicans took credit for a cut of 420 million in the foreign aid program, 150 million in the Treasury-Post Office appropriation bill, 92 million from Interior Department funds, 203 million from a supplemental appropriation bill, and 309.5 million dollars from the Welfare Department's 1964 money allowance.

"I can't imagine where they came close to cutting off the additional 1.6 billion," Cannon told a reporter, "and they certainly have no valid claim to the other cuts."

The Missourian pointed out that the annual foreign aid money bill has not even been considered by Congress, but was reduced 420 million dollars by the president himself.

Most of the other reductions for which the Republicans took credit, Cannon said, were made originally by the Democratic-dominated Appropriations Committee and were upheld by the Democratic-controlled House.

Cannon conceded that Republicans on his committee were responsible for a cut of 500 million dollars in funds requested by the president for the accelerated public works program. The House overrode the committee, however, and restored 450 million.

In only one instance, Cannon said, have Republicans been able to cut a bill on the House floor below the figures recommended by the appropriations committee. The exception was a reduction of $7,000 from the $14,000 the committee had approved for the entertainment of delegates to next year's meeting here of the International Social Security Assn.

Unemployed Painter Is Found Dead

Arthur Edward Little, an unemployed painter, was found dead in his attic apartment at 1137 C. Street, San Rafael, yesterday by a friend who had become worried after not seeing him for three days.

According to San Rafael police and Coroner Frank J. Keaton, John Raymond Campbell of 1520 Grand Avenue, San Rafael, found Little lying nude on his bed at 3:36 p.m.

Campbell told police and Keaton that the apartment door was open when he arrived. Keaton said Little had apparently kicked the door open when he forgot his key. Death was attributed to natural causes.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Williams Mortuary in San Rafael.

Little, a native of Ohio, lived in Marin County for about 30 years.

Photographer Is Sued For 'Payola' Charge

A complaint of slander has been filed against Mill Valley photographer Philip Planert by Kee Coleman Studio of San Francisco.

The complaint, which claims plaintiffs suffered $25,000 damages, states that Planert in a radio broadcast Feb. 14 and 17 on station KTIM'S "Marin Sounding Board" accused the Coleman studio of being engaged in "payola."

The San Francisco studio says Planert charged it with giving a "kick-back," that it "has to pay for a contract" to obtain business, and that it is engaged in a "very vicious racket."

The suit against Planert and three John Does was filed in San Francisco Superior Court by Coleman Studio co-partners David Vickery, Theodor Logan and Willard Gibson, represented by Gladstein, Andersen, Leonard and Sibbett, attorneys.

Planert, according to the attorneys, has until May 23 to appear in court for plea.

The Mill Valley photographer on KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board" complained of "kick-back" practices in connection with photography contracts for high school yearbooks.

JOHNSON

ernment economist and Colorado congressman.

If it comes after World War III, he suggested, it may be too late, for even if an enemy did not reply in kind to a nuclear attack, "fallout from its own weapons . . . would lead to substantial deaths in the country that launched the initial assault."

"The only way you can truly destroy an enemy," said Johnson, "is to make him your friend."

Citing U.S. aid to Japan and West Germany, he suggested: "If we could forgive our enemies of yesteryear, we can forgive our adversaries of today."

Peace, he said "requires justice . . . Revenge and retribution led to retaliation." Peace requires "faith that surmounts fear." Peace requires patience: "Peace is not some sunrise that is going to break over the Sierra (but) a massive institution to be built brick-by-brick . . . one we must build before our nuclear knowledge makes of this world a vast incineration."

And "the cost of peace includes work": mere high-sounding resolutions will not prevent war.

Three Marin leaders gave reactions to Johnson's talk: attorneys Julian Mack II, representing the Jewish faith, and Peter Allen Smith, of the Catholic faith, and banker Byron W. Leydecker of the Protestant faiths.

"As a community, we in America have not got in the habit of talking seriously about peace," said Mack. Everyone says he is for peace, but too few are ready to pay the price Johnson outlined.

Smith raised the question, "Who is our neighbor?" and answered it: "Our neighbor is our brother and sister throughout the world . . . Nations cannot continue to proceed on their separate ways; they must band together to achieve peace."

There is no longer, declared Smith, such a thing as a "just war."

Leydecker posed the problem of the economic cost of peace. Ten per cent of the U.S. national product "is being pumped into defense industries," he said, and to disarm would cause huge dislocations.

Johnson responded that dependence on arms for industry has caused vast economic dislocations every five years since World War II, because each new weapon quickly becomes obsolete. In contract, reducing from 50 per cent to 10 per cent the portion of national productivity devoted to arms at the end of World War II caused far less dislocation than expected, he said. And disarmament would free scientific brains and industrial capacity for other, better uses.

"The rest of the world is hungry and eager for disarmament," said Johnson, "but it must wait for the United States."

CRANSTON

guards through an international inspection agency. It would be a peace that nations could rely upon.

As long as the armament race continues, living conditions throughout the world will continue to get worse and worse, he declared.

Cranston said starvation and disease are harsh realities in most of the world today. He asked members of the audience to pretend they were about to be born into the world.

"One in 20 of you would be born in the United States; one in 20 would be born in Russia, and one out of four would be born in what we call Red China," he said.

He said two-thirds would be born colored and would grow up in a society that preached that you could never trust a white man. Many of the colored would be born in Africa and one out of five of these would die before his first birthday.

One out of nine would be born in India and most of these would live in poverty, being hungry just about every day of their short lives. Only half would live beyond 21.

"The situation is getting worse, not better," he said. Instead of the destructive effort of making defensive and offensive weapons, mankind should be doing the constructive job of raising the standard of living.

Cranston said the adjustment from an armament economy to a peaceful economy would be a difficult one. He suggested these steps:

1. The government could subsidize factories until they made the change from weapons to other products.

2. There could be a program for training workers to take on new tasks.

3. There could be an expansion of public projects such as roads, dams, medical institutions, schools.

At the opening of the conference, chairman Rev. Wesley C. Baker of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael read telegrams from Sens. Clair M. Engle and Thomas H. Kuchel. Both gave their blessings to the conference, saying such discussions contribute greatly to the cause of peace.

Cranston was introduced by Fred F. Enemark, president of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

OBITUARIES

John Henry Cozad, 82, Succumbs

John Henry Cozad, 82, of San Rafael, died in a local rest home yesterday after a long illness. A native of Kansas, he had lived in San Rafael 63 years.

His family moved to California when he was six months old. He had worked most of his life as a hotel clerk.

His wife, Ellen J. Cozad, predeceased him.

Survivors are three daughters, Mrs. Estelle Irving of Nicasio, Mrs. Velma Duhem of Atherton, and Mrs. Merey Owen of Napa; a son, John M. Cozad of San Bruno; three sisters, Mrs. Ella Pederson of Fairfax, Mrs. Ethel Longland of Oakland, and Mrs. Edith Metizner of Modesto; 14 grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Harry M. Williams Mortuary, San Rafael. Burial will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

TAXES

a $1 per month sewer charge as another means of raising revenue, eliminating a sewer use tax. But Councilman George Blackwell pointed out this would be "giving a break to people with septic tanks."

Blackwell countered with a proposal to take from the current service category the sewer tap fees and connection fees and put them into the permit category, which would make them subject to the 33 per cent increase.

The council abandoned, at least temporarily, proposals to increase parking meter charges and levy charges on commuter parking. The money would not go into the general fund anyhow, councilmen noted.

Almcrants said there are about 60 sources of revenue other than property taxes which are being used by some cities. The City of Colton, he said, made up a list of these sources. But, said Almcrants, "we're using most of them."

Upon hearing the list, Mayor Sheeks commented, "It seems to me that American ingenuity in space exploration is exceeded only by the ability to find ways to raise money."

The budget proposed by Almcrants calls for expenditure of $875,361 during the next fiscal year.

'Mayor' In San Rafael

Rick Raznikov, a junior, yesterday was elected "mayor of San Rafael" in balloting at San Rafael High School for mayor, police chief, city treasurer and councilmen during "Youth in Government" day, May 13.

Carl Schmidt, student body president, said he was unable to release vote totals because of school policy but that all contests "were won by extremely small margins."

The elected officials will appoint nine other students to "city" positions and all will spend the day with their counterparts learning how a city operates. The day is sponsored by the San Rafael Kiwanis Club.

Elected chief of police was Stuart Drange; treasurer, Carol Britting; and councilmen Bob Magladry, Bob Black, Dave Hellman and Bob McLennon.

Two College Students Heading For Asilomar

Two College of Marin students will attend the annual convention of the World Affairs Council at Asilomar this weekend.

The convention, entitled "Asia—Challenge to the United States," will draw delegates from 75 countries.

Attending from the College are Chris Cason of 110 Avenida Mira Flores, Belvedere, and Suzanne Scott, 215 Monte Vista, Larkspur.

International Club Banquet Tonight

The sixth annual banquet of the College of Marin International Relations Club will be held at 8 p.m. today in the college cafeteria, Edward Hodges, publicity chairman, announced.

The public is invited and tickets are available from counselor George Duncan, said Hodges.

the booth, sloshed under the booth and soaked our feet. Then they turned the hose on an upper ventilating slot and our shoulders were soaked.

I kept yelling that we were reporters, but the torrent kept pounding on the glass booth. Somehow, the glass held until they turned the hose around.

We walked out. As we strode soggily by the firemen, one turned and asked: "Did you get wet?"

represent Paskin, Polansky and Bill M. Cook, 19, and John J. Poland, 20, both of San Francisco. Cook and Poland pleaded guilty and were sentenced to one day in jail, with credit for time served since their arrest. Judge Haley set the jury trial for Paskin and Polansky for Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in municipal court.

Roth urged dismissal of the charges, saying there was no intention to disturb the peace and once the demonstrators were removed from the gate, the problem was solved.

"The case is unusual," he said. "It was a matter of principle for them to use this method to protest the death penalty."

A fifth demonstrator, Anthony Wilson Brown, 27, of San Francisco pleaded guilty, without counsel, and was sentenced to one day in jail.

In answer to a question from Judge Haley, Poland said he was a student at San Francisco State College but "I'd like to be considered a common criminal."

The rest of the demonstrators who were jailed were released yesterday on $262 bail each and ordered to appear in municipal court Tuesday afternoon.

patched to Birmingham.

They were to confer with white and Negro leaders, seeking some possible easing of tensions which have accompanied a series of Negro demonstrations there.

Ten "freedom marchers," carrying on a pilgrimage by a slain Baltimore integrationist, were in jail today at Fort Payne arrested immediately after they crossed the state line into Alabama.

The marchers, five white men and five Negroes, were arrested by Alabama Highway Patrolmen yesterday. The group had been pelted by eggs when they stopped for lunch on the Georgia roadside, about a mile before reaching Alabama.

"There is the grave possibility that blood will flow in the streets of our cities" if America cannot solve the problem of liberty and justice for all, a civil rights leader warned in Washington yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. E. Franklin Jackson, president of the Washington branch of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, expressed fears at a press conference that Birmingham Negroes may resort to other tactics if a strategy of nonviolence fails to end segregation and discrimination. A failure of this strategy, said Jackson, "would prohibit us from containing those forces like the Black Muslims who preach violence and hate.

"Unless America is willing to come to grips with the problem of liberty and justice for all, there is the grave possibility that blood will flow in the streets of our cities like it has not since the Civil War."

yesterday. Golston was saved through the commuted sentence. Death for the three others was stayed by U. S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

John Frank Vlahovich, 31, Donald G. Franklin, 34, and Joseph Rosoto, 39, were scheduled to die for the 1959 slaying of Leslie J. Simpson, an Anaheim tavern owner who was slated to testify against Rosoto in a burglary trial. The man who did the actual killing is still at large.

Justice Douglas halted the executions pending decisions by the high court on two cases that might have a bearing in law on the case of the three men.

Vlahovich was eating what he thought would be his last meal when Dickson told him of the stay yesterday.

"You're not kidding me, are you, warden?" he asked. Vlahovich was scheduled to die at 10 a.m. with Franklin. Rosoto, to die at 2 p.m., was stunned and speechless when he heard the news. Franklin said "Thank God."

Tiburon Fire Budget Meeting On Monday

The preliminary budget will be discussed at Monday's meeting of the Tiburon Fire Protection District to be held at 8 p.m. at the main firehouse, according to Chief Frank J. Buscher.

Representatives from the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau will attend to explain the survey recently made of the fire district.

Kung Like Luther Is Asking Reform Of Roman Church

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Hans Kung has been called "a modern Martin Luther who stayed in the Catholic Church."

He may not relish this appellation. But there are striking resemblances between the brilliant young Swiss theologian who recently toured the United States, and the 16th Century German monk who sparked the Protestant reformation.

The most obvious similarity is that both of them set out at a comparatively youthful age to achieve sweeping reforms in the church.

Luther was 34 years old, and a professor of theology at a German university (Wittenberg), when he nailed his famous "95 Theses" to a church door.

Kung was 34 years old, and professor of theology at a German university (Tubingen), when he published a bold blueprint for modernizing the Catholic Church.

His book, entitled "The Council, Reform and Reunion" (Sheed & Ward, $3.95), has been widely acclaimed by Catholics and Protestants as a manifesto of liberal hopes for the Second Vatican Council.

It won Kung an influential post as a theological consultant to the council fathers. And it made him, in the words of Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, a Presbyterian observer at the council, "A kind of symbol of what Protestants would like to believe contemporary Roman Catholicism can become."

During the past month, Kung has been visiting the United States, speaking before capacity crowds at leading Catholic institutions from coast to coast. He returned to Europe this week.

At each of his public appearances in America, Kung received a thunderous ovation when he asserted that a new era of freedom is dawning in the Catholic Church.

He said that ever since the Reformation, Protestants have emphasized freedom of the individual conscience at the expense of order and authority in the church; whereas the Catholic Church, in reaction, has stressed order at the expense of freedom.

In the present ecumenical age, he said, both branches of the Christian family are discovering that they have "much to learn from each other."

Catholics are hungering for greater freedom, for an end to "oppressive" types of church discipline which yield "fear-ridden subservience" rather than "willing Christian obedience."

Protestants meanwhile are searching for greater order, for an end to theological anarchy which confuses rather than frees the individual conscience.

Kung hopes and believes that the Second Vatican Council, resuming in September, will creates a new climate of "freedom in order" in the Catholic Church. This new climate, he says, will be "an invitation and a challenge" to the separated brethren, and will open the way for eventual reunion of Christians.

The ordered freedom which Kung envisions in the coming Church Universal will apply not only to individuals, but also to local churches.

"Unity and not uniformity, a center without centralism is called for in the church today," says Kung.

"It is urgently necessary for the church to repudiate all of the methods of totalitarian states, to abandon forever any attempt at coercing conscience or compelling belief, and to restore the royal freedom which Christ brought to the children of God."

Protestants hearing Kung speak are apt to shake their heads in wonder. Can this curly-haired young man, who quotes scripture as freely as Billy Graham, really be a Catholic priest?

He can be. And unlike the 16th Century monk whom he otherwise resembles so strongly, he is determined to remain on the inside of the ancient church which he seeks to reform.

REHEARSING — Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, minister of music at Holy Innocent's Episcopal Church, Corte Madera, plays the new Allen organ with the church choir in preparation for a special organ dedication program at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

Recital To Pull All Stops For Holy Innocents' Organ

Dedication of a new organ, recently installed in Holy Innocents' Episcopal Church, Corte Madera, will be marked with a recital by choirs and organ at 4 p.m. tomorrow at the church.

Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, minister of music, will play the organ and be assisted by the Holy Innocents' Choir and the Marin Chamber Choir. Included will be selections by Handel, Bach, Mozart and Dr. Wolff's own compositions and arrangements. Music from Vivaldi's "Gloria" will also be presented, with soloists Gloria Giddings and Kathryn Greiner.

Following the concert, a reception will be held in the parish hall honoring the benefactress, Mrs. Mayson W. Torbet of Larkspur. Mrs. Torbet is a long-time resident of Marin County and has been a member of Holy Innocents' Parish for over 15 years. She presented the former organ ten years ago.

Members of St. Edward's Guild, a couples' group, are in charge of refreshments for the reception. The public is invited to both the recital and the reception.

Scientist Calls For Birth Control Truce

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The time has come for Protestants and Catholics to declare a truce in their rancorous quarrel over birth control.

If they'll do so, new methods of fertility regulation can be developed—perhaps "within a remarkably short period of time"—which will be safe, effective and morally acceptable to all religious groups.

So says Dr. John Rock, a man who has unique credentials for speaking on this subject.

Dr. Rock is a Harvard University scientist who is world famous for his pioneering research in human reproduction. He is co-developed of the oral contraceptive pill. He also is a devoted member of the Roman Catholic Church.

He has written a book, entitled "The Time Has Come," (Knopf, $3.95), which ought to be read and pondered by every church leader politician and plain citizen who is concerned about the problem of limiting population growth.

Former secretary of state Christian A. Herter contributed a foreword, in which he warns that it is "not just desirable, but urgently necessary," to terminate the religious controversy which is paralyzing government action in this field.

"The consequences of failure to find effective, acceptable ways of meeting the population crisis are unthinkable," Herter says.

Dr. Rock says that Protestants and Catholics are now in "substantial agreement" about the objectives of family planning, and differ mainly about the methods which may be employed. Most Protestant bodies endorse the use of any medically-approved contraceptive technique, but the Catholic church condones only the so-called rhythm or "safe period" method.

Since this dispute is tied up with differing views of "natural law," Dr. Rock sees little hope of resolving it "within the limits of the family planning methods now available."

"I envisage the eventual resolution of doctrinal differences only after the expansion of the armamentarium of birth control," he says. "This will include not merely refinements of current methods but also entirely new approaches which will fit into normal reproductive physiology."

Given an adequate research program, he says, "it is not unrealistic" to anticipate that science can come up with a variety of entirely new birth control techniques, far better, cheaper and more effective than those which are now mostly widely used (and which date back to the 19th Century or earlier.)

Among these new techniques, he is confident, "will be effective methods which all religious groups can accept."

Although he considers the rhythm method presently rather unreliable, Dr. Rock says it could be perfected if researchers found a simple and accurate home test to predict the day of ovulation, or if they developed an equally simple way to induce ovulation on a selected day of each menstrual cycle.

"I believe that a concerted research effort could yield substantial progress toward this goal within a remarkably short period of time," he says.

The real problem, he thinks, is not scientific but political.

"The federal government is the one conceivable source of research support of sufficient magnitude to attract the scientists and to get the job done," he says.

But government leaders are notoriously afraid of the "religious controversy" they might stir up if the National Institutes of Health were given a green-light to undertake a massive program of research in fertility control.

The result is that the institute is dabbling timidly along the fringes of the problem, devoting to it only a tiny fraction of the sums it spends on, for example, preventing tooth decay.

A recent institute report showed that total outlays for fertility research by all agencies—federal, state and private—come to only about six million dollars a year.

Dr. Rock argues that a sharp increase in these research expenditures is the best investment this country could make at this moment in history.

He doubts, however, that such an investment will be made until religious leaders make it very clear to nervous politicians that they are united in favor of more research on human fertility.

Since the Catholic church is "widely thought to bear special responsibility" for the terror which grips politicians' hearts whenever birth control research is mentioned, Dr. Rock believes it would be "most appropriate" for Catholics to take the lead in achieving a religious truce on this subject.

"A public policy of tolerance can be evolved which will respect the deeply held convictions of all Americans and help to eliminate much of the animosity and rancor which this conflict has generated," he says.

"Such a policy, by freeing our medical research establishment for a concerted effort in fertility control, offers the only practical road to a solution of both the doctrinal differences between Catholics and non-Catholics on family planning methods, and the world's population explosion."

GOD CUT HIS DECK

After Life Of Beer And Sin, Gambler Deals Out Lord's Word

By HARRY A. HAINES

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—One night in 1953, Paul Kirkindall propped a Bible against the twin beer spigots of his tavern and began preaching the Gospel.

Since that time he has spent $31,000 of his own funds in a new career as pastor of this town's most dispirited citizens.

Once a gambler known over the southern and midwestern states, Paul Kirkindall underwent a sudden transformation.

Today he heads Blytheville's Mississippi County Union Mission which has an annual budget of $31,000. The mission is governed by some of the area's most prominent business and professional men. It serves thousands of poor people in northeast Arkansas and southeast Missouri.

He preaches six or seven sermons a week; visits hospitals; personally screens applicants for food and clothing; calls regularly at jails and the county farm and confers with law enforcement officers.

Kirkindall, 52, has done his job so well that last month he was offered an annual salary of $10,000, plus a home, car and certain expenses to take over a mission in an eastern city.

"I don't think the Lord wanted me to go," Kirkindall said.

He makes $300 a month in his present job.

Kirkindall stands 5-foot-10 and weighs 200 pounds. He has a voice like a carnival barker and he talks just as fast.

"People will listen to me sometimes," Kirkindall said, "people in college towns, people a lot smarter than I am. And do you know why?

"Because once they learn what I was and then get some idea of what I stand for today, they know I've just gotta be sincere."

His about-face took him completely by surprise, says Kirkindall.

"I was making good money as a gambler. I wasn't broke. I was drinking too much though. A good gambler shouldn't drink."

But one night Kirkindall accompanied his wife to church.

"I thought every word that the preacher said was directed toward me and I was burned up. I figured I'd beat this guy up some day."

And then, he said, when the invitation was given to come forward, "I found myself walking down the aisle to the front of the church. I thought, 'This is crazy. Don't go down there.' But I couldn't help it and I went up there and gave myself to Christ."

As soon as he got out of church he locked the doors to his small tavern and suspended gambling in the pool hall which was under his management.

He quit drinking, bought a Bible and began a series of speaking appearances in churches over Arkansas, Texas and Missouri.

Usually he didn't even make expenses.

Kirkindall's mission has long since outgrown his tavern where he once stood behind the bar each evening and preached to a handful of people. Presently the mission is a large structure in Blytheville's business district. The building includes a dormitory where as many as 25 men sometimes sleep.

Kirkindall said his last brush with gambling was only last month.

"A nice lady called and said her group was having a raffle and wanted the proceeds to go to the mission.

"I said, 'Now look lady, if we're going to finance this mission by gambling then I'll put a couple of tables in here and do it right because I can make more money in five hours than you can in two weeks of selling those raffle tickets.'

"But we haven't come to that and we never will," he said with finality.

REGISTRATION FOR CYO CAMP OPENS MONDAY

Registration for the Catholic Youth Organization day camp program at San Rafael's Forest Meadows will open Monday at St. Raphael's Church cafeteria.

There will be another registration Wednesday at St. Rita's Church, Fairfax, and a final registration May 17 at St. Raphael's. Hours for all registrations are from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The camp schedule will begin June 24. There will be three two-week sessions. Activities include hiking, singing, storytelling, games, cookouts, nature lore, crafts and swimming.

A deposit is required with each registration.

Lay Catholic 'Peace Corps' Gains

By RICHARD F. LONG

FORT PORTAL, Uganda (AP)—A "peace corps for laymen" is gaining strength and favor within the Catholic Church, especially in far-off mission lands.

Catholic missionaries have been going to the distant areas of the world since Christ commanded His Apostles to "teach all nations," nearly 2,000 years ago, but usually it was a black-robed or white-robed priest or nun who was the familiar figure in the tepid jungles or arid desert lands.

Since World War II there has been a great increase in the number of laymen and women who are helping the missionaries. This also is true in the Protestant churches.

"The biggest problem in mission lands is the shortage of priests and nuns. The lay person accomplishes tasks that free the clergy so they can concentrate on their more spiritual duties," said the Most Rev. Vincent J. McCauley of Council Bluffs, Iowa, the bishop of Fort Portal.

Fourteen lay people are working in Bishop McCauley's diocese on the Uganda-Congo border. They come from the United States, Canada, England and South America.

They usually do the same jobs with which they are familiar at home. However, their salary usually is much less.

"But the deep satisfaction you receive from helping people in need more than compensates for any loss of pay," Alba Camargo of Colombia, a nurse in the mission hospital, said.

Other lay people in the diocese are engineers, teachers and doctors.

Bill Young, an engineer from Chicago, does maintenance work in the mission hospital sion and directs construction of schools and churches for Africans.

Dr. and Mrs. Francis Goyeau, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Canada, a husband-wife doctor team, have just arrived to work in the mission hisptial run by the order of the Medical Mission Sisters.

Several of the Protestant missions in the Fort Portal area also have lay people teaching at the missions and helping out in other ways.

Lay people come to the missions on various plans. Some make individual contact with a bishop. Others belong to lay missionary organizations like the Women's Volunteer Association of Washington, D.C. and the Lay Mission Helpers of Los Angeles, Calif.

The Women's Volunteer Association concentrates on sending nurses to mission hospitals in Africa. The Lay Mission Helpers have 85 men and women in Africa, Mexico, Columbia and New Guinea. The membership is composed of single men and women and married couples with their

Sunny Hills Group Plans Clothing Drive

The Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary will conduct a clothing drive for the Bargain Box in San Anselmo May 15 through 17. Profits of the drive will go toward the Sunny Hills Home.

Persons may arrange with the Bargain Box on the Sunny Hills grounds for pickup of clothing, books, records, toys and other items or bring their donations to the Bargain Box between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Heart Cake

Nice for a bride's shower: using a heart-shaped cookie cutter or individual mold, cut out hearts from sheet cake. Sandwich the hearts together and then cover with filling-and-frosting.

Clifford D. Carrick Claims Bride In Washington Rite

Clifford D. Carrick of Fairfax was married to Dolores Benita Chertude in a nuptial mass at St. Anne's Church in Spokane April 27.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, is the son of Mrs. Ruth Carrick and the brother of Diana, Christine and Steve Carrick.

He is now with the U.S. Air Force stationed at Fairchild Air Force Base in Washington. After his discharge next year he plans to bring the new Mrs. Carrick to Marin where they will make their home.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert of Spokane. She wore a white satin gown for the ceremony and was given in marriage by her father.

The Rev. John Osterman officiated at the rites, performing his first marriage ceremony.

Mrs. Penny Chertude, the bride's sister-in-law, was her attendant and Steve Carrick was his brother's best man.

Beta Sigma Phi Announces 'Girl Of The Year Awards'

The Marin inter-city council of Beta Sigma Phi presented "girl of the year awards" to five members of Marin County Chapters at the 32nd annual Founder's Day Program at Tomahawk Lodge Tuesday night.

Mrs. Bert Roueche of Xi Alpha Xi Chapter officiated at the program and the ritual of jewels when 31 girls became members.

Receiving "girl of the year awards" were Mrs. William Bay, Omicron Alpha; Mrs. El More Alwes, Gamma Omicron; Mrs. William Bayles, Phi Gamma Nu; Mrs. Glen Dunbar, Upsilon Gamma and Mrs. Chester Pec, Xi Alpha Xi.

Another highlight of the evening was presentation of scrapbook awards.

Mrs. Jack Lentz, historian, accepted the first prize for Omicron Alpha and Novato Chapter, Upsilon Gamma, received second prize. Mrs. Norwood Arnold, historian, accepted the prize.

Sisterhood Plans Mother's Day Sabbath Program

Members of the Sisterhood of Congregation Rodef Sholom will participate in a special "Mother's Day Sabbath" to be held May 10, at 8:30 p.m. at Congregation Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Rd., San Rafael.

The readers will be Mesdames Roy Calder, Alan Fibish, Frederick Mayer, Lewis Richfield, secretary of the sisterhood, and Mrs. Melvin Berman, first vice president.

Following the service, the sisterhood will host the traditional Oneg Shabbat in honor of all the mothers in the congregation.

THE DOUGLAS JAMES Stones are shown following their recent wedding in the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley. The bride, the former Ellen Elizabeth Canet, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Canet of Mill Valley.

Marin College AWS Style Show Tuesday

More than 250 students and parents are expected to attend the annual fashion show and luncheon of the Associated Women Students of College of Marin to be held from noon to 2 p.m. on Tuesday, at the Marin Golf and Country Club.

The show and luncheon are open to the public and tickets may be purchased by calling AWS sponsors Mrs. Margaret D. Greene or Beverly Harling at the college.

The show carries a "Seventh Heaven" theme and includes summer sportswear and dress fashions.

Models include Germaine Briggs of Mill Valley; Nikki Hoff of San Rafael; Joan Everson of San Anselmo; LeGlynn Wilkes of Mill Valley; Irene Lunding of San Rafael; Suzanne Scott of Larkspur; Pamela Blum of Kentfield; Kathy Olson of San Rafael; Joanne Thomas of San Anselmo; Marlene Gavello of Kentfield; Rosalind Borba of San Rafael; and Sue Gowan of Novato, and Jane Blodget of Fairfax.

In charge of arrangements are Germaine Briggs, publicity; Nikki Hoff and Marlene Gavello, invitations; and Rosalind Borba, decorations.

BIRTHDAY PARTY ABOARD A BOAT

Louis Woelfl of San Rafael celebrated his eighty-first birthday this week. The actual natal day was the first of May and Mr. Woelfl had chartered a boat to take a group of his friends for a fishing trip beyond the Golden Gate. However when he and his group arrived at the pier early in the morning he was told there was a 35-mile an hour wind blowing and the boat would not be taken out of its berth.

The fishing trip was held instead yesterday (Friday) when all went well and the fishing was good.

San Anselmo Baptist Women Plan Banquet

The annual Mother-Daughter Banquet of the First Baptist Church in San Anselmo will be held Friday at 6:30 p.m. in the church's new social hall.

Mrs. Harold Laster is chairman of the affair and is assisted by Mesdames Lyle Smith, Claude Barnes and Jerald Trager.

The entire dinner will be prepared by Lester Allison and served by eight waiters who will not only serve the mothers and the daughters but will entertain them with barber shop singing between courses. The group is led by Walter Patzlaff and includes Lyle Smith, Ray Nelson, Bob Dill, Lew Champion, Jerald Traeger, Ed Stump and John Stickle.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Traeger.

Marianna Keesmaat Weds Michael Paris

Married Saturday in a morning nuptial mass at St. Sebastian's Church were Marianna Keesmaat of Kentfield and Michael Paris of Novato. Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was the Rev. John O'Connell.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pieter L. Keesmaat of Kentfield, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a short white satin gown with a bridal lace overblouse. Her veil was finger tip length with a Dior bow. Diane Keesmaat, wearing a short white sheath with a blue veil, was her sister's maid of honor and Arlene Olivera, wearing a short blue sheath with a lilly of the valley veil was the other bridal attendant.

Al Stelmach of Woodland was the best man and the bridegroom's brother, Robert Paris, was the usher.

Following a reception at the Kentfield home of the bride's parents, the young couple drove to southern California.

The new Mrs. Paris attended Marin Catholic High School and was later employed in San Rafael. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Pieter Keesmaat of Amsterdam, Netherlands, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Joaquin Brazil of San Rafael. She has a second sister, Mrs. Dale Chase of Fairfax.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Audrey Paris of Novato and besides Robert, has two other brothers, Terry and Richard. He graduated from Analy High School in Sebastapol and attended Santa Rosa Junior College. He is at present employed in San Rafael.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Dinner Dances Are Marking Yachting Season's Opening

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

The official yachting season starts tomorrow and both the Corinthian Yacht Club of Tiburon and the San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere will hold a pre-opening dinner dance tonight, a 50-year tradition. Everyone comes in sailing attire in anticipation of the big day ahead.

The off-shore waters are usually covered opening day with hundreds of boats ready for the Bay parade. The two clubs have issued open house invitations to all other clubs to make use of their docks as well as attend the festivities tonight and tomorrow.

Tomorrow brunch will be served at the Corinthian from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and non-boaters belonging to yachting families will view the parade from the club's deck. The musicians on the parading boats will come back to the Corinthian to play for dancing.

At the San Francisco club, friends and guests will greet boats and crews at a smorgasbord starting at 4:30 p.m.

Monday, when relative calm settles over the Bay, remodeling will start on the Corinthian house.

MRS. A. S. DREIER of Larkspur will be honored on her birthday tomorrow and here for that special day is her son, Alex Dreier, TV newscaster, who flew from Chicago for the family reunion.

MRS. ALBERT H. HARRIS Jr. of the Belvedere Lagoon, recently returned from a two weeks visit with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Carney of Brookline, Mass.

DR. STEPHEN EPLER, president of College of Marin, and his wife will give a reception for the members of the board of trustees and the faculty of the college tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 in the Art Gallery of the college. In the receiving line with Dr. and Mrs. Epler will be members of the Board and their husbands and wives: Messrs. and Mesdames Dan Deedy, Kent Seymour, Robert Rogers, Robert Oliver and George Washburn. Special guests will be a newly elected board member, Joseph Gargiulo and his wife. Pouring will be Mesdames Paul Clymer, Irwin Diamond, Ellsworth Briggs, Frank Jacobs, Carlton Cherry, Weaver Meadows, Harry Pieper, Edwin Cadogan, Leonard Blomquist and Norman Bird.

THE ERNEST ONGAROS returned from a two weeks vacation in Las Vegas in ample time for her to complete arrangements for the luncheon she gave May Day at the Amicus Club's Designer's Showcase at Dominic's. On the vacation with Ernest and his wife were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ongaro Jr. Co-hostesses at another large luncheon at Dominic's were Mesdames Stanley Campodonico and Al Boyajian, reservations chairmen. Mrs. Les Walsh had as her luncheon guests her mother, Mrs. Harry Straight, and Mesdames Oscar Jahnesen, Steve Toth and Bernice Eggers.

Mrs. Joseph Ratto and Mrs. Nick Ivancovich were co-hostesses at another luncheon table. Mrs. Paul McArdle, just back from a vacation at Palm Springs, entertained as did Mrs. Robert Quinlan. The latter's guests were Mesdames George Schirmer, Thomas Brennana and William Dawson.

Mrs. Ed Leonardi had as her luncheon guests, Mrs. Charles Clivio and L. H. Leonardi. The guests were particularly interested as the new Mexican influence in interior decoration was stressed in the interior decorations show and the Clivios and the Leonardis are making a trip to Mexico soon. Others entertaining at luncheons were Mesdames Quinn Ongaro, W. C. Bomio, Alfred Parsons and Tony Boitano.

The luncheon and show profits went to Marin Aid to Retarded Children.

T-Shirts Are Stripped With Red Leather

Bulky by day, slinky by night, fashionable at any time—that's the story of leather apparel this Spring.

From big, wide-shouldered coats to slim A-line skirts, this season's leathers are fluid, soft and lightweight.

A literally head-to-toe range of leather apparel and accessories is displayed in elegant smooth grained leather, velvety suede leather, gleaming patent leather and glistening lustre leather.

In harmony with the "soft" look of 1963 fashions, leather jackets are wider in the shoulder, waistlines rising in the front and dipping in the back. The Chanel look, mainstay of the fashion-conscious woman's daytime costume, is seen in smooth and suede leathers. The tunic look is fresh in pale off-whites, pastel pinks and sophisticated tropez—a light taupe — that takes an extra fashion dimension in leather.

FOR RESORT or suburban wear, the "Riviera look" catches the eye in leather. Sun-drenched red, white and blue blouses, pants and jackets are found in softly draped grain leather. T-shirts are striped in red and white smooth leather and worn under blue suede leather jackets. The beach or nautical look is also popular in ponchos, pullovers and even bathing suits trimmed in leather.

The leather dress, established as a classic in one year, is newly available in every popular silhouette and fashion color. The sleeveless sheath, chiffon-light in specially tanned suede leathers, is worn in pale colors this Spring. The A-line dress is softly gored for flair or dropped in a simple, widening line. This silhouette and tunic, share fashion honors in both smooth and suede leathers.

LEATHER SKIRTS receive the full dressmaker treatment this Spring. Pleated, shirred and draped, leather skirts swing by day.

Fisher-Trade Looking Better And Better For Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — The Jack Fisher trade is looking far better for the San Francisco Giants today than it did a week ago.

The 23-year-old right-handed slip pitcher won his second straight complete game for the Giants Friday, stopping the New York Mets 5-3 and knocking in the decisive runs himself with a double.

Billy O'Dell took his 2-0 record against the Mets' Roger Craig, 2-2, today as the Giants gunned for their fifth straight victory and ninth in 10 road decisions this year.

Jack Sanford, 4-1, and Billy Pierce, 1-2, are expected to take on the Mets in a doubleheader tomorrow.

Fisher's pitching and hitting made him the star of Willie Mays Night after the Giants center fielder had hauled off a carload of gifts in pre-game ceremonies.

Only Duke Snider bothered Fisher, swatting two bases-empty home runs and knocking in a third run with a double.

Fisher yielded only three other hits, all singles, and walked only one man. He struck out seven.

Monday at Philadelphia he won his first National League game after he had been pounded by Chicago and Milwaukee last week in San Francisco, losing both decisions.

Fisher has walked only three men in 30⅓ innings of work this season and has a sparkling 2.94 earned run average. Last year at Baltimore, his ERA was nearly twice that.

Fisher's bat decided the game in the seventh inning. With the score 2-2, Ed Bailey singled and Joe Amalfitano doubled. Fisher drove both men home with his two-bagger off the left wall of the Polo Grounds.

Singles by Jose Pagan and Harvey Kuenn, Felipe Alou's sacrifice fly, and Mays' double gave the Giants a 2-1 lead in the third inning after Snider homered in the first.

Snider's double tied the score in the sixth but Fisher quickly broke the deadlock. Amalfitano singled home a run in the eighth and Snider homered again leading off the ninth.

Amalfitano, who had not hit in 18 consecutive at-bats to open the season, now has five hits in his last three games as he's substituted at second base for the injured Chuck Hiller.

Mays' double delighted the crowd of 49,431, largest in baseball this season. Earlier, as he received his gifts, Mays told the crowd:

"Although I am so far away in California, every time I come here I feel this is my home . . . This is my second night. Both times they were in the city of New York. I really appreciate the honor and thank everyone."

Mays broke in with the Giants in 1951 when they played at the Polo Grounds.

IT WAS THEIR NIGHT — It was Willie Mays Night at the New York Polo Grounds yesterday, but pitcher Jack Fisher had a night of his own as he pitched the Giants to a 5-3 victory over the Mets. Fisher (left) is congratulated by Mays after the game. (AP Wirephoto)

Terra Linda Ace Pitches No-Hit Game

Lefty Bill Lee Stops Drake Win Streak, 2-0

Bill Lee, 16-year-old junior at Terra Linda High School, etched his name in the Marin Athletic League's baseball record books yesterday with his talented left arm.

Lee pitched a no-hit, no-run masterpiece in a 2-0 victory over previously unbeaten Drake Pirates at Albert Park, San Rafael.

The stylish southpaw, displaying his usual fine assortment of pitches, struck out five Pirates and walked three. Of the four Pirates who reached base—the other on an error—none advanced past second base as Drake's six-game victory streak was broken.

Of the 21 putouts recorded by Lee, eight were on fly balls, eight on grounders and five on whiffs.

Only last Tuesday Lee beat San Rafael on a three-hitter, 12-1. He now has a 4-2 league record; his team is 5-3 in the standings.

STRONG RIVAL

Lee's rival, Steve Miller, pitched well enough to win most games, holding the Trojans to four hits and giving up solo runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

In the fifth Steve Fisher was safe on an error, going to second on the muff, and Marsh Enderby singled him home for a 1-0 lead.

In the sixth Dick Schultze singled, moved to second when Lee walked, advanced to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a wild pitch.

The line score:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Drake | 000 000 0—0 | 0 | 2 |
| Ter. Lin. | 000 011 x—2 | 4 | 1 |

Miller and Hannigan; Lee and Congdon.

NOVATO-MARIN GAME FOR FUN; NO UMPIRES

Umpires failed to show up for yesterday's Marin Athletic League baseball game between Marin Catholic and Novato, so the preps had to play the contest on a practice basis with host Novato scoring an 8-3 victory.

The official league game was rescheduled for next Thursday when it is hoped the men in blue from the Officials Assn. remember their assignment.

In yesterday's practice game Novato's Tom Miller cracked a three-run homer, Ron Rowell contributed two hits and Chuck Overmyer and Gary Fritz shared pitching duties by limiting Marin Catholic to three hits.

San Rafael Hands Tam 8th Loss

Tamalpais High School, once the scourge of northern California prep baseball ranks, is in the midst of one of its bleakest seasons.

The Mill Valley school, whose alumni include such former major league stars as Sam Chapman, Joe DeMaestri, Karl Olson and Art Schallock, suffered its eighth straight loss in Marin Athletic League competition yesterday when San Rafael's Bulldogs rallied to a 7-4 victory over the Indians.

For a while it looked as if the winless Indians would break the ice as they led 4-2 going into the sixth inning. But then the roof of the tepee caved in as the Bulldogs exploded for four runs on clutch singles by Skip Rush and Tom Zunino, each driving in two runs.

Bulldog John Franzman was a constant thorn in the Indians' sides as he stole four bases—second and third twice each—after singling and walking.

San Rafael evened its league record to 4-4 while dropping Tam deeper in the basement at 0-8.

Rush, in relief of starter Jim Schmidt, was the winning pitcher.

The line score:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| San Rafael | 000 024 1—7 | 7 | 1 |
| Tamalpais | 020 110 0—4 | 4 | 4 |

340 Yachts In Race To Ensenada

NEWPORT BEACH (UPI)—A fleet of 340 yachts embarked today on the 16th running of the 150-mile Newport-to-Ensenada, Mexico, race.

Three classes of vessels — ocean racing, Pacific handicap and multi-hull—awaited the start of the downwind race set for noon from the Balboa Yacht Club area.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

LOS ANGELES — Don Johnson, 124¾, Los Angeles, outpointed Juan Ramirez, 126, Mexico, 10.

MEMPHIS — Ernie Burford, Memphis, stopped Bill Belchia, Toledo, 10, middleweights.

Gridder Is Critical At Stanford

STANFORD (AP)—Lowell Wilson, 19, a Stanford football guard injured in a spring practice session yesterday, was still in critical condition today, but a hospital spokesman said he had regained consciousness.

Wilson, a sophomore from Honolulu, went into immediate surgery at Stanford-Palo Alto Hospital. He suffered a dislocated neck.

Assistant Coach Rod Rust said Wilson hit a tackling dummy with his head too low and struck it with the top of his head instead of his shoulder.

Assistant trainer Dave Williams administered oxygen to the player after he dropped to the ground and stopped breathing momentarily.

Wilson, 6-feet tall and 218 pounds, was working out with the third string.

Lavorante Flies Home, Still In Coma From Bout

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Boxer Alejandro Lavorante, who has been in a coma since he was knocked out in a bout last Sept. 21, today was scheduled to be flown home to his native Argentina.

Lavorante was given clearance to leave the country yesterday by Internal Revenue Service agents who claimed he owed $4,460 in back taxes.

The decision to permit him to be taken home came after agents conferred with his father, Alejandro Sr., conservator of the 26-year-old boxer's estate.

The senior Alejandro said he had already paid $5,418.82 in income taxes.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Rookie's Bat Paces Bucs

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bonus baby Bob Bailey of Pittsburgh says his ambition is to make the Hall of Fame and although no one has ever discovered a short cut, he sure seems in a hurry to get there.

The Pirates never have divulged how much they actually gave the 20-year-old third baseman to sign with them. Estimates range from $150,000 to $200,000, but last night he looked like a million dollars.

Bailey drove in five runs with a pair of homers and a single in a devastating one-man show that paced the Pirates to a 13-2 romp over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

He clipped Jack Smith for a three-run homer during a four-run sixth inning rally and then connected again with the bases empty for his fourth homer of the season off Ken Rowe in the eighth.

Supported by that kind of an attack, Al McBean breezed to his second victory with a six-hit effort. Larry Sherry was kayoed in the fourth and went down to his second defeat.

The Pirates thus moved within a game of the first-place St. Louis Cardinals, who were blanked, 6-0, by the Cincinnati Reds. The San Francisco Giants beat the New York Mets, 5-3, the Chicago Cubs downed the Milwaukee Braves, 10-7, and the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Colts, 4-3.

Southpaw Joe Nuxhall held the Cardinals to five hits and fanned eight in winning his first game of the season and pitching his first shutout for the Reds since 1959. Leo Cardenas homered off loser Ernie Broglio (3-1) in the third inning and rookie Pete Rose highlighted a four-run fifth inning with his first major league homer.

Lou Brock singled home what proved to be the winning run for the Cubs in the eighth inning of their game with the Braves. Warren Spahn started for Milwaukee but was routed in the third inning after yielding a three-run homer to Ron Santo, Billy Williams and Ernie Banks also homered for the Cubs in the ninth off loser Claude Raymond (3-3) while Hank Aaron belted his ninth homer for the Braves and Len Gabrielson connected for his second. Reliever Jim Brewer (2-0) was the winning pitcher.

Roy Sievers' pinch double with the bases loaded plus an error by second baseman Johnny Temple on the relay from the outfield comprised a three-run sixth inning rally that enabled the Phillies to nip the Colts. Loser Bob Bruce (1-2) was the victim of the rally. Jack Hamilton, third of four Philadelphia pitchers, was the winner.

Brodie Will Be Okay, Medic Says

PALO ALTO (UPI) — John Brodie's football career should not be impaired by an arm fracture the San Francisco 49er quarterback received in an automobile accident, according to the attending physician at Palo Alto-Stanford Hospital.

"Recovery should be excellent and he should be as good as new by fall," the surgeon said after treating Brodie for a small crack in the radius bone in Brodie's right—and passing—forearm.

The 49er star apparently fell asleep at the wheel early yesterday. His car crashed into a tree.

BCRA Hardtops To Roar Tonight

Bay Cities Racing Assn. hardtop races will be held tonight starting at 8:30 at the Vallejo Speedway. Time trials will get underway at 7:30.

Ten races will be held, with the final one being a 25-lap main event. Leroy Geving of Petaluma, last Saturday's winner in the main event, will be favored to repeat.

The speedway is located three miles north of Vallejo

Bluth Sets World Bowling Record: 1,525 For 6 Games

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Ray Bluth of St. Louis rolled a sensational 1,525 six-game series yesterday to lead 16 qualifiers into today's final competition of the Professional Bowlers Association's New Jersey Open Tournament.

A spokesman for the PBA said Bluth's total was a world record for a six-game series, breaking the mark of 1,508 set by John Bomba of Bayonne, N.J., on Jan. 8, 1950.

Bluth's six games were 245, 238, 228, 268, 268 and 278 for a 254 average.

His over-all total of 5,465 gave him a lead of 114 pins over runner-up Billy Hardwick of San Mateo, Calif., who knocked down 5,351. Hardwick held a 10-pin lead over Ed Bourdase of Fresno, Calif.

HERE'S TROUT THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY

Here's a story of the big one that "didn't get away."

Nat Romanin of Novato and his 12-year-old son, Richard, were out fishing for trout this morning on the first day of the season at Nicasio Lake and hooked a good-sized Rainbow.

But just as they were bringing the fish out of the water, the line broke. Before the fish could get away, Romanin jumped in the cold water and grabbed it, winning the fight for the second time.

It measured 18½ inches and weighed 2½ pounds. The father-son angling team also caught two other Rainbow trout, one that measured 15 inches and another that was 12 inches.

SEMI-PRO TOURNEY

Two More Marin Teams Bite Dust

Marin teams in the San Rafael Invitational baseball tournament continued to find the home grounds of Albert Field not to their liking as two more local entries fell to defeat last night.

The Mill Valley Merchants fell to Acme Carpet 8-1 and the Merchants of San Anselmo were blanked by Flying Goose Sporting Goods 7-0. Both games were called after five innings of play because of a tournament rule that states a game will be called if one of the teams is seven or more runs ahead after five innings.

The two Merchant teams join the Billings-Hutchison Builders, losers of their opening game Thursday, in the losers bracket of the double elimination tourney which is slated to last until May 18.

In tonight's action, the Builders will play the Gino Benedetti nine from San Francisco at 6:30 p.m. and the Mill Valley Merchants will take on the San Anselmo Merchants at 9 p.m. All tourney games are to be played at Albert Field.

Losers of tonight's contests will be eliminated from the tournament.

SUNDAY SCHEDULE

Tomorrow's schedule calls for Gateway Chevrolet to take on Misracks Sporting Goods at 2:30 p.m. and Acme Carpet to play against the Flying Goose baseballers at 6 p.m.

In the opener last night, Mill Valley grabbed a quick lead of 1-0 at the end of the first inning. The lead didn't last too long, however, as the Acme team scored four runs in the second inning and added two more in each the fifth and sixth innings.

Ray Quintana, winning pitcher, allowed only one hit while striking out 10 M.V. batters. Keith Frazer and Ricky Pace worked on the mound for the Merchants.

In the nightcap, the Flying Goose nine scored one run in the third, but came back strong with two runs in the fourth and four in the fifth before the game was halted. Don Lowpensky and Tom McGee collected six hits between them to lead the winners hitting attack.

The San Anselmo nine was limited to one hit.

Line scores:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Acme Carpet | 040 022—8 | 5 | 1 |
| Mill Valley | 100 000—1 | 1 | 3 |
| Flying Goose | 001 24—7 | 10 | 1 |
| San Anselmo | 000 00—0 | 1 | 3 |

Nicklaus Leads By 5 Strokes

LAS VEGAS (UPI)—Jack Nicklaus, crown prince of golf, carried a five-stroke lead into the third round of the $60,000 Tournament of Champions today and even runner-up Arnold Palmer feared that it would be impossible to catch the young tiger.

Nicklaus, who already holds such important titles as the National Open, Masters, Portland, Palm Springs, and Seattle Open, appears headed for another crown in this one.

He has a 36-hole score of 132, which is 12 under par on the Desert Inn Country Club course that measures 7,073 yards long and is dotted with hazards.

Palmer has a 137 total and could lay some of the blame for that on finding water on the desert.

"I would say that I'm going to have to putt a lot better than I have been to catch him," said Palmer. "He's playing pretty well."

That was the understatement of the day. Nicklaus has rounds of 64 and 68 against 66-71 for Arnie.

Further back are Bill Casper at 139 and Jerry Barber at 140 after rounds of 69 yesterday. The 141s are Bob Goalby, Johnny Pott, Jacky Cupit and Tony Lema. The rest of the field couldn't be given much consideration in the race for the $13,000 first place money.

Bay Meadows Winner

SAN MATEO (AP) — Dark Damask ($35) held on to beat the favored Ruby Lea yesterday in the feature at Bay Meadows.

Twins Sell Lemon To The Phillies

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Minnesota Twin announced the sale of outfielder Jim Lemon last night to the Philadelphia Phillies in a straight cash deal.

The Twins declined to disclose the price. Minnesota has used Lemon mainly as a pinch-hitter lately.

Lemon, 35, has been at bat seven times this season and has two hits, both singles.

Preps Smash 14 Records In Marin League Track Meet

RECORD FORM—Tamalpais' Ellis Williams demonstrates his record-breaking form in the varsity broad jump during yesterday's trials of the Marin Athletic League track and field meet. Williams set a new record of 22-4 and ¾, breaking his own record of last year. (Independent-Journal photos by Harold Mathias)

A 9.9 SPRINT — Bob Olsen of San Rafael carries the tape across the finish line yesterday as he sets a varsity record of 9.9 in the 100-yard dash during the MCAL track meet trials. Following Olsen is Tam's Ellis Williams who finished the heat in second place, well behind Olsen.

San Rafael's Olsen Shatters Two Marks

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Fourteen records were shattered yesterday in the trials of the 1963 Marin Athletic League track and field meet and more marks threaten to fall next Saturday when the finals are held on the cinder paths of San Rafael High School.

And it was after 8 o'clock at night when the last record was broken — the varsity 880-yard relay — as the lengthy meet lasted four hours and 12 minutes, finally concluding at 8:12 p.m. Counting all the heats, there were 49 running events, including the three relay races, during the day which was marred with stiff winds.

San Rafael's fleet varsity sprinter, Bob Olsen, cracked two barriers in winning both the 100 and 220-yard dashes. He ripped off the century in 9.9 and the 220 in 21.7, clipping off a tenth of a second in the 100 and almost one full second off the old 220 mark of 22.6.

In the three heats of the 220, all three winners eclipsed the league mark set in 1960. Besides Olsen, San Rafael's Mike Shafer won his heat in 22.1 and Tamalpais' Ellis Williams won his heat in 22.3.

REDWOOD STAR

Redwood's Tom Strathairn won both varsity hurdle events and smashed the league mark in the 180-lows, skipping over the hurdles in 20 seconds flat. Old mark was 20.4.

Strathairn came back to anchor the winning 880-yard relay team from Redwood to another MCAL record of 1:32.3. Carrying the baton ahead of Strathairn were Bob Piro, Pete Holter and Dave Auerbach.

The other varsity mark which fell was set last year by Ellis Williams of Tam at 20 feet, 9 and ¾ inches. Williams left his old record far behind with a mighty leap of 22-4 and ¾.

The talented Class B trackmen from Marin's prep schools cracked seven records with Drake's Dean Lazzarini breaking two of them.

Lazzarini knocked two-tenths of a record off the 75-yard dash with a time of 7.7 and came back to crumble the mark in the 150-yard sprint with a time of 14.8. Old mark was 15.3.

In the 660 for the Bees, Redwood's Jack Lindahl set a record of 1:30.2, breaking the old mark of 1:30.9, and Terra Linda's Jack Edwards ran a record breaking 37-flat 330, two seconds under the previous mark.

Edwards' teammate, E. Stenberg, established a new mark in the 1320 with a time of 3:25.1, eclipsing the old mark of 3:28.8. Clem Glynn of San Rafael heaved the discus 118 feet, four and one-half feet farther than the previous MCAL high.

Mike Holloway, Tam's ace broad jumper in the Class B division, broke his own league mark of 19-3 and ⅞ with a leap of 21-1 and ¼ for another record in the B events.

Tom Jones of Novato picked up one of the two records broken in the Class C division as he flew the 75-yard dash in 8.2, snapping the old record of 8.3. In winning the race, he handed San Rafael's top C sprinter Jeff Chan his first defeat of the season. Chan finished the heat in second place.

JUMP RECORDS

Drake's Manuel Saenz broke the C mark in the broad jump with a jump of 18-4 and ¾, as the broad jump mark fell in all three divisions of the meet, varsity, B and C.

Olsen, San Rafael's key man, suffered a "charlie horse" in the anchor of the 880-yard relay but S.R. coach Bill O'Bayley today said Olsen will be all right for the finals next week.

Finals of the league meet will be held next Saturday on the San Rafael track, with the field events starting at noon and running events at 2:30 p.m. The top eight finishers in each event yesterday qualified for the finals.

ST. VINCENT'S YOUTH TOSSES PERFECT GAME

Ronaldo Coulter, pitcher for the sixth grade team at St. Vincent's School for Boys, pitched a perfect game Thursday as he led his team to a 9-0 victory over the Odd Fellows of the Gallinas Valley Little League.

Coulter faced only 21 batters in the seven inning game with not one Odd Fellow reaching first base.

Ronaldo's teammate, Mike Ferraira, led the St. Vincent's hitting attack with a grand slam home run in the third inning.

SEASON OPENER

Yachts On Parade

By ALFRED MATSON

Down through the years, the opening of the yachting season has always been heralded by a day of gay festivities with a colorful parade of both sail boats and power cruisers debouching from the waters beyond the Golden Gate Bridge to signal the start.

In contrast to past procedure, wherein the show hit the waterways at high noon with the sailboats to the fore, tomorrow's grand parade will start at 11:30 a.m. with the cruiser division in the van. The windjammers will form the second section with a scheduled start one hour later.

Whatever the changes, there is one detail that has remained steadfast since the inception of the parade: Again the grand marshall for the whole kit and kaboodle will be one of the pilot boats of the Bar Pilots Assn., in this instance, the "California."

WITH THAT bit of folderol behind them, the sailors will make ready for the long season of racing ahead. The following weekend, the Encinal Yacht Club is sponsoring a two-day regatta for all classes and divisions of Yacht Racing Assn. status. However, other than the hardware distributed to the winners, it will be purely for fun, fun, fun, as it is not a championship event and season points are not involved.

ONE WEEK later, May 18 and 19, a valiant attempt will be made by the officers of the International One Design Class to breathe new life into the remains of an event that had been given the deep six because it was too popular! We refer to the Vallejo Race, the oldest sailing contest in local history. Last year, more than 500 boats entered. It was too big, so YRA delegates voted to eliminate it as a sanctioned event and, therefore, no season's points. The sponsoring Vallejo Y. C. replied, in affect, no points, no race.

And that was the status quo until the One Designers, with Jake Wosser at the helm, embarked on their mission of rescue. Their regatta is not all encompassing, but is limited to class boats, and the more popular ones, at that.

Classes invited are the ICs, Birds, Hurricanes, Tritons, Golden Gates, Knarrs, Bears and Folkboat. More information can be obtained from Frank (Jake) Wosser.

Title Fight Postponed Third Time

NEW YORK (UPI) — The unlucky return Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title fight at Las Vegas, Nev., was committed today to a third postponement from June 27 to Monday, July 22, because of the removal of a "benign tumor" from ex-champion Patterson's right fist.

Announcing the postponement, Promoter Al Bolan of Championship Sports, Inc., said, "Floyd consented to the postponement only when his surgeon insisted yesterday that he positively refrain from using his right fist in training for about four weeks."

Parade Features Gallinas Valley Little League

A parade will highlight the start of the Gallinas Valley Little League tomorrow, with the procession starting at the Civic Center at 12:45 p.m. and winding up at Castro Park in Santa Venetia.

Leading the parade will be Walter R. Castro, one of the Marin County supervisors. Also in the parade will be seven minor league, six major and four pony league teams and their sponsors.

Opening game ceremonies will begin at 1:15 p.m. with talks by Castro, Morris Hill, president of the little league, and Bill Saleme, president of the pony league.

Castro will throw out the first ball to get the game between Locke's and Odd Fellows underway. That contest will be followed by a tilt between the Beavers and Astronauts.

Rapid Transit Decision Good News For Marin Plans Too

The decision of the Contra Costa judge this week that the Bay Area Rapid Transit District is legally going ahead with its transit system was more than welcome. Regardless of how he rules on the two remaining issues, the major questions of legality of the bond election and legality of the contract with an engineering firm have been settled. The district has been cleared of charges of improper procedure.

We in Marin County are interested in this case for more than one reason. For one thing, as a former member of the district, our representatives had a part in laying down the preliminary work leading up to the election.

But the other is even more important. The decision clears the air for us in Marin to take whatever steps we may now desire to take on our own. So long as there was a question about the ability of a transit district to actually produce an operating system, we were handcuffed.

Now we can look at our transportation problem with more confidence; we can attack it with the knowledge that something can be done if we finally decide what that something is.

Incidentally, we offer our congratulations to the directors of the rapid transit district and to its staff for having faced a difficult challenge successfully.

Now how about getting to work on a modern, high-speed, efficient and reasonably priced transit system we can all be proud of!

The Fragrance Of Warm Fudge

We remember that our grandmother made good fudge. In less sophisticated times, before television began to dominate the American evening, our idea of a big time on Sunday night was to play cards, listen to Eddie Cantor on the radio and make some fudge.

People didn't drink as much in those days and they were less calorie conscious. Making fudge was a family activity. Even the children's opinion was solicited about whether it had reached the proper "soft-ball" stage, which meant it was ready to beat.

Times have changed and we would not want to turn the clock back. But the fragrance of warm fudge makes us a bit nostalgic. And we still whip up a small batch now and then.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to those among us who care about our fellow creatures and take time out tomorrow and all next week to observe Humane Sunday and Be Kind To Animals Week.

BRICKBATS to College of Marin students who are so disinterested in their school government that less than 20 per cent of them turned out to vote on a new constitution.

A BOUQUET for Mrs. Dorothy Crozier of San Rafael, who lived up to the letter of the fast-disappearing tradition of telephone operators' helpfulness, by keeping a line open, getting aid and assisting a frantic mother whose baby son was near death.

A BOUQUET to the County Supervisors for going ahead with planning for the next stage of the Civic Center.

BRICKBATS to the Jayne Mansfield-Nelson Sardelli "romance"; it's disgusting.

A BOUQUET to the Arequipa Foundation for presenting a new storage refrigerator to the Marin Blood Center.

A BRICKBAT to Assemblyman Lester A. McMillan (D, Los Angeles) for his proposal that executions be televised. They won't allow televising of legislative sessions, where the laws are made, or of court trials, where justice is dispensed. Let the public see the reasons, before he sees the results.

Single Girls Don't Have Problem Of Bachelors In Baseball Season

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There is a married woman out on the West Coast who has been cleaning up recently by dispensing advice to single women.

The lady, Helen Gurley Brown, wrote a highly successful book called "Sex And The Single Girl" and now she is conducting a syndicated column along similar lines.

Her qualifications include the fact that she used to be a single girl herself. Well, now.

I used to be a single man myself and I have been wondering if there might not be a market for someone to do for bachelors what she has been doing for spinsters.

I figure that bachelors must be just as confused about everything as single girls are and would welcome a chance to pour their troubles into a sympathetic ear.

I know that I was plenty confused when I was a bachelor and as far as I can tell, things haven't changed a great deal since then.

I don't, however, want to be called a copycat, so I thought I would depart from Helen Gurley Brown's format and offer my service under the title "Night Baseball And The Single Boy."

It seems to me that night baseball has become an even bigger problem than sex. At least, the attendance is larger.

Every wholesome, clean-cut, red-blooded, 100 per cent American unmarried male finds himself with divided instincts. He is a victim of what the psychiatrists refer to as the "Romeo/Casey Stengel Complex."

One-half of him would like to ask his girl friend for a date to the movies, or a dance or a grouse hunt. The other half of him would rather go to the ball game.

TORN BETWEEN these basic urges, many single men have sought to escape reality by taking their girl friends to the ball game.

On paper, this would appear to be a logical solution. In practice, however, it has never worked out very well.

The poor fellow is unable to concentrate on either the game or the girl. Hence the evening becomes one of total frustration. He has failed to advance romantically and he has loused up the score card.

THIS IS THE SORT of problem that Helen Gurley Brown, operating from the single girl's standpoint, tends to gloss over, but it is one that I expect to explore in depth.

Bachelors need not be miserable merely because they are single. If anything is bugging you, fellows, drop me a line and I'll straighten you out.

CAT SPILLS THE WINE

One little cat in Italy did more than upset an apple cart. It caused a truck to turn over and spill 3,000 gallons of wine in the middle of a field.

It all happened this way: the cat decided to cross the road just as the wine truck was passing a passenger car.

The driver of the automobile, meanwhile, saw the cat approaching and swerved to miss it. The truck then had to swerve to miss the car. But the driver lost control of his truck. It ran off the road into a field, where it overturned and spilled all the wine.

This is an exceptional case, to be sure. But if you could analyze the successes or tragedies of life, you would find that the final results for good or evil in more instances than not, could be traced back to some seemingly insignificant details.

Nothing that you do is unimportant from God's point of view. Your slightest thought, word or effort has some influence for better or for worse.

Picture Of Babies Was Propaganda

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

I am sure this is a very touching picture of babies picketing the Texas capitol, however, someone should explain to 11-month-old Blas Villareal III and his sister, Dorcas, that the reason their father must die is that he killed a man by the name of Wallace Connor who, for all I know, may have had children of his own.

Undoubtedly this was a propaganda piece aimed at capital punishment. However, I am surprised that AP carried it and extremely disappointed in your editorial judgment for using it.

More Truths Than Propaganda

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

If there were no difference of opinion, a lot of pari-mutuel clerks would be unemployed, and with this in mind, one can understand Carl Hepp's lack of enthusiasm for the work of Interlandi.

However, it is most difficult to understand Mr. Hepp's use of the words "vilification" and "bigotry" in relation to Interlandi's commentaries on the socio-political vagaries of our culture.

By publishing The Cynic's Corner and Walt Kelly's Pogo, the Independent-Journal exposes its readers to more truth than can be gleaned from the tub-thumpings of all the propagandists of the Right and the Left put together.

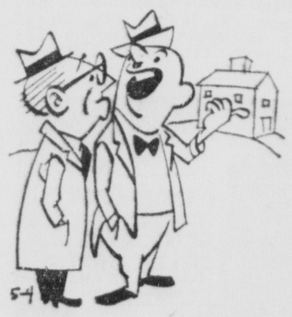
BENNETT CERF

A member of the board of directors of a big baking company staggered out of a meeting and called for the doctor. "It's my heart, I think," he gasped weakly. "Our chairman just proposed a double-your-money-back guarantee on OUR cookies!"

"Minutes," the house organ of a nation-wide insurance company, has discovered a new language: "Realestatese," which embodies the art of making the description of a house bear as little resemblance as possible to the real appearance of same.



A few prime example:

Newly decorated: The owner has repaired the front door.

Needs slight additional decorating: The buyer had better not make any weekend plans for the next three years.

Charming cul-de-sac: Dead-end street behind a busy supermarket parking lot and a boys' schoolyard.

Magnificent view: The nearest bus stop is at least five miles away.

Prestige community: Two of the neighbors have maids.

Only two left: There were three originally.

A wise word of caution from Vince Rivers: "That argument you won from your wife isn't over yet!"

Juveniles Being Protected Too Far If They Can Insult Women On Street

The pendulum has swung just about as far as it should in protecting juveniles who get into trouble with the law.

Their names are withheld, they are tried in closed court so that their sensitive minds are not shocked by the glare of publicity.

A few years ago, the cop on the beat was a feared and respected man. So was the school teacher. If pupils got out of line, the teacher would rap them over the knuckle and bring them in line.

But now, you so much as touch a youngster, and you have a lawsuit on your hands.

LAWS TO PROTECT the juveniles are fine. But some young hoodlums seem to think that leniency shown juveniles is a sign of weakness. And they continue to strut and bully those around them.

The incident that got me started on this topic occurred on San Rafael's main street a few nights ago. A young housewife, doing some shopping, ran into a group of juveniles in front of the store. They jostled her, tossed insults and one of them actually spat on her.

It's a sorry state of affairs if a small group of juveniles can terrorize society so that women and children don't dare go shopping on the main street.

NICK GIAMPOLI, who lost the battle for San Rafael police chief, is making plans to start a private patrol in the Southern Marin waterfront and business area.

Former deputy sheriff Pete Lampros will help Giampoli run the private patrol.

TWO SIGNS POSTED side by side at a local bait shop-bar always amuse me. One sign says "No Minors Allowed," and the other, "Minors Use Other Door."

TERRA LINDA Unit 9 finally made it. They are no longer outcasts.

They are now a part of San Rafael. Congratulations.

THE JIM KEAN family got a new dachshund which they named "Volksy." Why the name Volksy? we asked.

"Well," said Kean, "we felt it should be a people's dog—it should belong to all the people in our household."

FOR A SMALL community, Woodacre is going all out for organized recreation. They're spending $43,000 to build a new pool, two tennis courts, improve the ball field and construct bleachers for spectators.

The whole thing should be ready for use by June 15, says Al Giddings, who is spark-plugging the project.

U.S. Needs To Take Firm Stand About Any Soviet Troops In Cuba

WASHINGTON—What will it take to persuade the Kennedy administration that the removal of Soviet troops from Cuba is the U.S. government's first order of business?

If the Kremlin acquires another satellite in Latin America from which to operate, will this convince the President that the Soviet forces in the Western hemisphere constitute a "clear and present" danger which must be soon removed?

I raise this question because a second Latin American county is evidently just yearning to be embraced. This is the little Batista-type dictatorship of Francois Duvalier in Haiti, which is showing every sign of reaching out to Khrushchev and Castro in the hope that they can save it from the disillusion and discontent of his own people.

TRYING TO perpetuate his regime beyond its constitutional end this month, Duvalier is apparently deperate enough to take the risk of inviting in the Soviet-Castro Communists.

If this should happen, what would be the response of those who view the Soviet presence in Cuba as a secondary concern? No doubt some would argue that the danger is not increased, but divides between two countries, that the more the Soviets take over, the more Castro's image will be impaired elsewhere, and that if we will only keep quiet the Soviet troops would go away.

I SUSPECT that most Americans are not so wishful or so timid.

Furthermore, the prospect that the desperate Duvalier will throw his country into the embrace of Soviet-dominated Cuba is no imaginary nightmare.

The foreign minister of the Dominican Republic, Andres Freites, has informed a peace mission of the Organization of American States that he has information showing that the Haitian President has already offered military bases to Castro.

Such a disclosure is not surprising since there is already evidence that Duvalier has been maintaining secret contacts with the Haitian Communists and simultaneously making public overtures to Czechoslovakian and other Soviet bloc Communists abroad.

No doubt the Haitian dictator, who has tried to rewrite his nation's constitution in order to perpetuate his regime with a semblance of legality, believes that he can "borrow" enough Communist force from Castro to keep him in power, but not enough to allow the Soviet-Castro forces to take over his government.

IT DOESN'T WORK that way. Communists don't help keep non-Communists in office, as the events in Laos grimly prove. This is why the revelation that Duvalier hopes to save himself by offering a base for the Khrushchev-Castro forces can hardly fail to send a chill down the spine of every official in Washington.

It seems to me the premise of the administration is that because of other cold war issues (such as Berlin and Laos) we dare not make the removal of Soviet troops a top priority or to accept the risks of action. I believe the opposite is nearer the truth, that if we don't deal decisively with the Soviet presence in Cuba, we will thereby be set back everywhere else in the cold war.

HOW OFTEN and how rightly it has been said that unless the U. S. stands resolutely against the encroachment of the Soviet Union on West Berlin, the whole Atlantic Alliance will decay and crumble.

I believe it is equally true that unless we soon turn back the Soviet military encroachment in the Western hemisphere, we will be undermining the Western position elsewhere as well as in Latin America.

There's Lots Of Talk, No Action On Red Summit

May Be Long Time Before Nikita, Mao Get Together

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's beginning to look as if it will be a long time before Mao Tze-tung and Premier Nikita Khrushchev, the two giants of the Communist bloc, have a face-to-face meeting—if they ever do.

High level talks to clear the air have been sought by China since last summer to shore up the several leaks in the Communist world's dike. But the appropriate time does not seem to be at hand now.

Neither Mao nor Khrushchev shows an sign of yielding ground from his position on the sources of conflict producing the deep rift in relations between Moscow and Peking: differences in interpretation of ideology, conflicts of national interest and, last but surely NOT least, Titoism and the place of Yugoslavia.

In early April Mao invited Khrushchev to drop in on him in Peking en route to a visit in Cambodia. But Khrushchev declined the invitation, explaining that he never intended going to Cambodia. (Making the trip instead will be Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.)

Then Khrushchev lobbed the ball back to Peking by suggesting that Mao trek to Moscow to see him, or send Chinese Communist representatives to Moscow for preliminary talks around May 15. (It was rumored in Moscow that the Soviet premier prefers the latter plan.) But since then, no reply from Mao has been announced.

Two events which followed on the heels of the invitation exchange seem to dim any prospects that the two are in the mood to mend their differences speedily.

First, Yugoslavia offered to send India large quantities of weapons especially useful in mountain warfare. This could only serve to further alienate the Red Chinese. Next, the Communist daily, Pravda, altered wording of its May Day greetings to Yugoslavia to bring it in line with annual messages sent to countries within the Communist bloc. This special mark of favor is also deeply offensive to the anti-Tito Red Chinese.

From China come reports of a renewal of the anti-Khrushchev propaganda campaign that had been halted about the time Mao sent his invitation to Moscow.

To add further to the confusion, there has been talk that Khrushchev may be on his way out of power.

But despite the now-slim chances of a Red summit meeting, there is no expectation of a formal diplomatic split between the two countries.

Here, in brief, are the major points of conflict facing the Red Chinese and the Soviets:

A basic conflict is a difference in interpretation of Marxist-Leninist doctrine. The Chinese condemn Khrushchev as a "modern revisionist"; i.e., he rejects the tenet that there must inevitably be a major clash between Communism and capitalism.

Khrushchev claims a big war with "imperialism" can now be avoided because the Red camp is so strong the imperialists would not dare start one. He accuses the Chinese of dogmatism—too strict following of Marxist-Leninist scriptures.

The next trouble spot concerns the development of revolutions and involves Yugoslavia. China says revolutions develop according to specific conditions in nations involved, citing he own revolution based on the peasantry instead of the classical reliance on urban proletariat.

The Russians also proclaim that specific conditions affect how revolutions develop, and cite Yugoslavia as their example. Khrushchev feels Yugoslavia has not restored capitalism, and that Tito should be returned to the fold to advance world Communist unity.

But Mao completely rejects Tito's "revisionism" as a betrayal of Marxism-Leninism. Any accommodation to the U.S. means a slip back toward capitalism to him.

Because of Khrushchev's policy of "peaceful coexistence" and the continuation of disarmament talks, the Chinese say Khrushchev is slowing down the process of world revolution. The claim he is selling Communist parties down the river in backward areas by not seizing revolutionary opportunities, and that any talk of disarmament is betrayal.

What the Chinese really fear is that Khrushchev will agree to some nuclear limitations before they get into the nuclear club.

The two also disagree over Communist strategy and tactics. Mao's tactic is to strike the enemy wherever and whenever possible, without regard for the risk of starting a war. Khrushchev says strategy and tactics are inextricably bound together. He uses tactics to push the strategic aim, the ultimate goal of Communist world domination. So if tactics require it, for example, he is willing to make temporary accommodations if he feels it serves long-range strategy.

While Mao's dictum is attack, always attack, Khrushchev relies on a flexible foreign policy considering both attack and retreat.

Mao claims there have been no peaceful transitions to socialism in history. In his eyes, there must be no relaxation of the struggle because capitalists will never surrender voluntarily. Khrushchev says peaceful transition has occurred and feels parliamentary tactics can be used successfully. He is wary of pushing the Soviet Union down the road to nuclear war.

Peking and Moscow also have clashed over incidents affecting their national interests. For example, the Chinese are angry over Khrushchev's statement deploring their attack on Indian frontiers, which he made in 1959 and repeated strongly this year. They also resent Russia's selling advanced MIG jet fighters to India.

Over Cuba, Mao criticizes Khrushchev for "blundering adventurism," in trying to install nuclear missiles in Cuba without advance assurance of by withdrawing the missiles under U.S. pressure. He claims Cuba was a "second Munich," and that once there, the missiles should have been kept there.

Soviet action in the Cuban crisis, Khrushchev claims, saved the world from nuclear war and actually preserved Communism and Castro.

At stake also is Communist leadership. Mao views Khrushchev as an upstart with no theoretical background for leadership. While Mao has the backing of Asian Communists (except for the Indians), Khrushchev wields the power of the European bloc, and the backward nations remained divided. However, Chinese influence is growing.

Another thorn in China's side is the amount of support given them by the Soviets. She feels the USSR was niggardly in its help to China, while generous to such nations as India and Egypt, whose governments actually are anti-Communist. This policy, China feels is more evidence of retarding world revolution.

The Soviets have no desire to see the Chinese a mighty world power on their borders. But another consideration is that Soviet economic aid is also administered with national, more than world Communist, ends in mind with Soviet domination as the main goal. The USSR wants no Communist rivals for preeminence.

So, if the Communist giants ever do get together at the conference table, there will be plenty to discuss.

MAO'S VIEWS

IDEOLOGICAL

1. REVISIONISM VS. DOGMATISM—Is major clash between communism and capitalism necessary? Chinese claim K. is "modern revisionist,"—betrays Leninism.

2. NATIONAL LIBERATION—Chinese accuse K. of not seizing revolutionary opportunities; say K. slows down world revolution by dickering over disarmament.

3. STRATEGY AND TACTICS—respect enemy tactically, despise him strategically. Always attack, regardless of war risk.

4. TRANSITION TO SOCIALISM—no possibility for peaceful transition; capitalists will never give up voluntarily. Never relax struggle.

TITOISM

Tito's brand of communism (revisionism) slips back toward capitalism, betrays party principles.

NATIONAL INTEREST CONFLICT

1. Chinese mad at K. for deploring attack on Indian frontiers.

2. K. is upstart with no theoretical background for leadership. Mao has backing of Asian communists; K. has European bloc; backward communist nations split, but Chinese influence grows.

3. Cuba—K. blundered twice, first in installing nuclear missiles, then in withdrawing them under U. S. pressure.

4. Economy—Amount of Soviet help unsatisfactory when generous aid is going to non-communist nations.

MAJOR CONFLICTING POINTS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND CHINA

K's VIEWS

IDEOLOGICAL

1. War not inevitable; war can be avoided because Red bloc strong enough to discourage attack. Accuses Chinese of too narrow a view of teachings.

2. What Chinese really are afraid of is K. will agree to nuclear limitations before they get nuclear weapons.

3. Strategy and tactics bound together. Use tactics (make accommodations) if it furthers goal of world communist domination.

4. Peaceful transition has occurred in many cases. Don't start something you can't finish.

TITOISM

Tito should be brought back into bloc to advance world communist unity.

NATIONAL INTEREST CONFLICT

1. Chinese are throwing weight around; just showing off power.

2. K. not going to surrender nuclear leadership; regards Chinese ambitions as dangerous; hasn't given China help in perfecting nuclear weapons.

3. Soviet action saved world from war and preserved both communism and Castro.

4. Soviets have reason to fear a strong China on her borders. They want no rival for top spot in communist world.

How Downfall Of Konrad Adenauer Was Accomplished

By WELLINGTON LONG

BONN (UPI)—Alone as always, proudly erect as ever, the old man walked stiffly from the caucus room.

But the usual barbed wisecracks for the press were missing, and even the brashest reporters fell back from the stern countenance.

Iti s embarrassing to look too closely at a champion just defeated, and this man was West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, finally and forever whipped—at age 87 — in his fight of many years to name his own successor.

KONRAD ADENAUER
Defeated champion

Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard, the architect of West Germany's post-war prosperity, the man whose name Adenauer personally painted on his party's banners, would no longer be denied his political inheritance.

The day was April 23, 1963. The time of defeat 5:20 in the afternoon.

The two had come a long way since the afternoon of Feb. 21, 1949. When Adenauer rammed Erhard's new-fangled economic theories down his party's throat.

Adenauer introduced Erhard to a meeting of the top leaders of the Christian Democratic Union.

Erhard, then adviser to the economic council for the British and American zones of occupation, was preaching "social market economy," and saying that if controls were ended, production would rise and prices find a reasonable level.

The state, Erhard argued, could prevent inflation through proper tariff, finance and tax policies. His policies, followed in part by the economics council, were successful.

Erhard was a little-known Bavarian teacher of economics when Adenauer set out to get him into national politics. By silencing discussion, he overruled those who complained that Erhard's ideas ran counter to the party's official platform, and he said if the party adopted Erhard's ideas, it was bound to reap millions of votes.

Most Christian Democratic Party workers approved with enthusiasm. Adenauer won the day—and won Erhard.

Together, Adenauer and Erhard won three more elections.

Neither man could have achieved the success he did without the other.

But even before they reached that high-water mark, relations between the two men were showing strain.

Erhard, 20 years Adenauer's junior, was not willing always to remain in the shadows. He made it plain that as long as Adenauer wanted to be chancellor, he would make no effort to unseat him. But he also made it clear he intended to succeed Adenauer.

But Adenauer felt that Erhard was a specialist, a fine economist but lacking in the toughness and finesse needed to lead the government.

In February, 1959, Adenauer moved to eliminate Erhard from the succession by having him nominated for the figurehead office of federal president. Erhard saw through the move, and declined.

Friends urged Adenauer to accept the presidency and let Erhard move up to the chancellory.

Surprisingly, the chancellor agreed and in April, 1959, accepted the nomination for president. He intended to use the situation to bring Finance Minister Franz Etzel into the chancellory. Etzel would do just what Adenauer told him.

In June 5 that year, while Erhard was in Washington and so unable to mobilize his forces rapidly, Adenauer withdrew from the presidential race, and announced he intended to remain chancellor.

Erhard was furious. But, whether for reasons of loyalty or caution, he refused to make a fight.

The feud simmered, and came to a head again after the 1961 election. The Christion Democrats, skidding at the polls, won just less than a majority.

Several young ministers attempted to use this situation to get Adenauer out. But at the critical moment Erhard again refused to help.

Adenauer was now the oldest chief of government in the world. His annual bouts with grippe were lasting longer. His leadership was under question. His firm hold on national affairs loosening.

In late 1962, Adenauer's gradual yielding of power was given a shove when Defense Minister Franz Josef Strauss sparked a government charge of treason against the magazine Spiegel for an attack it made on the country's military leadership. As the weeks went by, the case appeared flimsier and flimsier. The Free Democrats walked out of the government until Strauss himself was forced to quit.

All this past winter the pressure grew. Adenauer gave ground only slowly. He told a foreign press association dinner he would definitely step down this autumn, but gave no date.

To all visitors, Adenauer gave the same assurance — his successor would be named in the fall, and under no circumstances would it be Erhard.

On April 22 last, the fight was joined for the final time.

The Christian Democratic party executives met. Adenauer proposed it discuss the French-German friendship treaty that he regards as one of his crowning achievements. The executive decided instead to consider the succession. Adenauer proposed the designation of a successor be formally postponed till the fall. The executive insisted on immediate consideration.

Interior Minister Hermann Hoecherl suggested Adenauer ought to personally put Erhard's name in nomination. But the old man stuck to his guns. Finally the next day, Adenauer's party deserted him. The 14-year "Adenauer era" in Germany was for all intents and purposes over.

But in Bonn, now, there is a well-used political joke for sale or—as some wits have wryly suggested — for lend-lease to the France of Gen. Charles de Gaulle:

Adenauer, dangling a great-grandson on his knee, asks the little boy, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" "Chancellor, great-grandpa, just like you," the youngster replies. "Well, that's impossible, my boy," is Adenauer's response, "because I'M chancellor! What else do you want to be?"

Voice Of People Heard Loud, Mean

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The voice of the people is sometimes surly.

If you don't believe it, reach into the legislature's mailbag.

"You dirty Democrats are so low there is no bottom to your degradation," wrote a constituent of Assembly Majority Leader Jerome R. Waldie (D-Antioch).

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh (D-Los Angeles) got a letter recently from someone who threatened to hang him. The unsigned letter was turned over to the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

Someone else complained to Unruh that he had named as a committee chairman a man who was a Communist sympathizer.

Unruh wrote back that the appointee was an able legislator, a patriotic American and added, "you sound like some kind of a nut."

That's just a sample of the bizarre letters received in Sacramento each day by California's 40 senators and 80 assemblymen.

Others aren't threatening. But they indicate the writer hasn't a full grasp of the issues. Like this one from a person who invoked the name of an old age pension lobbyist to indicate what he wanted:

"Dear Sir: Please support the bills that George McLain is lobbying for."

Then, there are the well-organized campaigns.

Recently for example, Assemblyman James Holmes (R-Santa Barbara) said he received some 5,000 letters in support of resolutions asking Congress to initiate a constitutional amendment to repeal the federal income tax and forbid the federal government from competing with private enterprise.

Assemblyman Robert T. Monagan (R-Tracy) said he usually ignores such broadside attacks, preferring "personal notes telling how the bill would affect them."

If you want your letter to count, agrees Assembly Speaker Pro tempore Carlos Bee (D-Hayward) "write a personal letter, for form letters or mimeograph messages hold little or no weight."

This Week In The World

Winston Churchill Steps Down

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

When Mrs. Doris Moss opened the letter she did not know it was a historic document.

Mrs. Moss is chairman of the British Conservative Party Assn. of the Woodford Constituency. The letter was an advance notice that the member of Parliament representing the constituency would not stand for re-election.

It was signed: "Winston S. Churchill."

Thus ended the 63-year parliamentary career of the man considered by many to be the greatest statesman in British history, a person so beloved in the United States that he was made an honorary citizen this year.

Sir Winston is deaf. He no longer can walk because of a broken leg. And Churchill is nearing 90. He felt that he could no longer be useful in Parliament because of his infirmities so he retired.

But at week's end, Churchill let it be known that he would still speak up when he found it necessary.

In a letter to the Primrose League, a conservative organization of which he is grand master, Churchill said Britain must keep its nuclear deterrent because "these deadly weapons are safer in our hands than in any other."

Churchill's retirement from the political scene was only one of many major news developments of an eventful week. Perhaps historians a few years hence will regard Sir Winston's action as the most significant.

During this week a threat of war between Haiti and the Dominican Republic grew stronger, the racial issue in the United States boiled when Negroes staged mass demonstrations against segregation in Birmingham, Ala. and New Hampshire became the first state in this century to set up a lottery.

It was learned in Moscow that Frol Kozlov, the man tapped by Premier Nikita Khrushchev to be his successor, was ailing. This news started speculation as to who would succeed Khrushchev. Most observers regarded Mikhail Suslov, the party theoretician and a hard-line Communist, as the logical successor. But they did not rule out the possibility that Anastas Mikoyan, who is aging, would serve briefly as Russia's leader.

Around The World Around The Clock

Katmandu — The U. S. Himalayan expedition reported that an American and a Nepalese guide reached the summit of Mount Everest. The names of the two men were withheld temporarily.

Washington — The Senate appropriations committee restored 50 million of the 69.8 million dollars which the house had cut out of the Post Office Department's request for operating funds during the next fiscal year. If this restoration gets through Congress, mail deliveries will be continued on Saturdays. Otherwise no mail will be delivered during weekends.

Vatican City — Sources in the Vatican said Jozsef Cardinal Mindszenty may end his six-year asylum in the U. S. legation in Budapest and go to Rome. The cardinal had refused previous Hungarian offers of amnesty because he did not want to leave his country.

Sao Paula — A Brazilian airliner crashed in a Sao Paulo suburb and set several homes afire. Estimates of the death toll among those aboard the plane ranged from 41 to 49. None of the residents of the burned homes was reported injured.

Sulphur Springs, Ala. — Five white men and five Negroes retracing the steps of William Moore, a white postman who was shot to death on a civil rights march to Jackson, Miss., were arrested when they crossed the state line in Alabama after a walk through northwest Georgia.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Pretty Silly To Put Brains On Ice When You're Defending

Most bridge players think one-quarter of the time, as declarer.

Now, there's some excuse for taking a rest when you're dummy, but it's pretty silly to put your brains on ice when you're defending.

Opening lead — ◇ J

When this hand was played South won the first trick with the king of diamonds and then let the 10 of hearts ride around to the queen.

WEAKNESS

East looked at dummy and you could practically hear him saying to himself: "Lead up to weakness."

Dummy's weakness was spades, so East returned the six of spades. Understandable, but brainless.

South won with the ace of spades and knocked out the ace of trumps. South had an easy time regaining the lead to draw the last trump.

SIMPLE

He lost only two trumps and one club, making his contract.

Simple card reading would have defeated the contract. That play of the 10 of hearts made it easy for East to see that his partner had the ace of trumps.

South needed all the other missing high cards for his bidding. East could not hope to find another high card in his partner's hand. Still, the ace of trumps was enough.

CASH ACE

East should cash the ace of clubs and lead his other club at once.

West gets in with the ace of hearts and leads another club, whereupon East's ruff defeats the contract.

East didn't have to be a genius to defeat the game.

He just had to be willing to use his head.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 4, the 124th day of 1963 with 241 to follow.

The moon is approaching full phase. The morning stars are Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1942, the Battle of the Coral Sea began, resulting in a major defeat for the Japanese fleet by the U.S. Navy.

In 1855, Woman's Hospital, the first hospital in the world to be operated exclusively for the use of women opened its doors in New York City.

A thought for the day—Daniel Webster said: "Where tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers therefore are the founders of human civilization."

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Mill Valley, Alto, Strawberry From Way Up

For a start, look just over the highest ridge even beyond Tamalpais and what can be seen? The Pacific Ocean, with the shadowy length of the Point Reyes Peninsula and even (in the original Aero Photographer's print) those white cliffs which reminded Sir Francis Drake of his homeland nearly four centuries ago and caused him to christen this new place "Nova Albion," a first New England dating from 1579.

Midway along the ridge of Mount Tamalpais note two tiny white globes, heart of a radar installation. Many trails and some bits of the righ roads can be seen—Ridgecrest Boulevard, the Panoramic Highway. The mass of houses nestling into the mountain is Mill Valley, with the east-west length of Camino Alto reaching toward the curves at right of the Corte Madera grade. Enchanted Knolls causes the right-angling of East Blithedale Avenue leading to the Alto interchange where it becomes Tiburon Boulevard.

Below and to the left are the grounds and large buildings of the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary on land reaching out toward Strawberry Point, with the many single-family residences of Strawberry area to the right.

Preparations plainly are being made on the island, below, for one-family construction authorized by county planners months ago. The controversial causeway leading to the island is plainly in evidence.

Huge Pool Site ..... $34,000
Gleaming sliding glass doors open wide to the huge pool and patio site from this 3 bedroom, 2 bath special home. From the slate entry to the stone fireplace in the 26 ft. living room, everything has been designed to make Marin Bay living a joy. The built-in Westinghouse appliances and ribbon grain mahogany cabinets create a delightfully modern and efficient kitchen. #186.

Just Completed ..... $34,000
A sparkling new home just being completed. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths and right across the street from Peacock Gap Golf Course. The traditional brick fireplace is set against a planked birch background wall. Master bedroom has adjoining walk-in closet and the kitchen is all Westinghouse with plenty of fine hardwood cabinets. #183.

Rugged Stone ..... $36,000
San Francisco Bay gleams and sparkles as part of the vista from this Oriental styled 3 bedroom, 2 bath home. The rugged native stone fireplace reaches to the beamed ceiling of your living room. Ceramic tile counters coordinated with Westinghouse appliances #86.

Magazine Showplace ..... $36,000
Nationally publicized by Better Homes & Garden Magazine, the fine detail in this 2 bedroom, 2 bath "doll house" must be seen for proper appreciation. The completely equipped kitchen with custom Mutschler Cabinets, and EVERY appliance will make meal preparation a pleasure. Parquet floors and soft carpets afford comfort in this step-saving sized home. #205.

Beamed Ceiling ..... $36,000
You will never tire of the view from this 3 bedroom, 2 bath Marin Bay home. Central kitchen makes entertaining most convenient. Multi-use bathroom compartments and luxury fixtures are what you would expect in a contemporary dwelling. #113.

TWO Fireplaces ..... $43,500
Family room and huge living room. Each have individual fireplaces. An inspiring view of the Marin hills and the Country Club make this 4 bedroom, 2 bath home an incomparable value. The slate entry leads into a 12 ft. high foyer and thence into the beamed living room. Westinghouse appliances. Walk-in closet off master bedroom. #114.

Lagoon View ..... $46,500
Spacious home with every square foot at its livable best. Multi-view affords vista across sailing lagoon and Peacock Gap Golf Course. Four bedrooms, and 2 baths with master dressing room affords the look of much more than moderate price indicates. Gulistan all wool carpeting throughout complements the Loma stone fireplace wall. #21.

JUNK YARD ART

San Francisco artist-illustrator Eugene Hoffman puts the final touches to a railroad steam engine collage which he created from metal pieces gleaned from a junk yard and attached to burlap backing with brass bands. The entire work was constructed from corroded, rusty metals such as lids, watch springs and cans. Hoffman said he was trying to show "beer cans can be functional and satisfying without being full."

Rusk Is Heading For Yugoslavia To Bolster U.S.-Tito Relations

By ALLAN JACKS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk goes to Belgrade today to bolster relations between the United States and this Communist country. President Tito will welcome him and his mission.

For nearly two years U.S.-Yugoslav relations have been sagging. They are at perhaps the lowest point since 1948 when Tito broke with Stalin's Soviet Union. Recently Yugoslav leaders have been trying to do something about it. They view Rusk's acceptance of their invitation as evidence of some success.

Yugoslav moves to improve relations have included two private talks between Tito and U.S. Ambassador George F. Kennan. A message from Tito was taken to President Kennedy by Yugoslav Ambassador Veljko Micunovic after consultations here.

Its contents have not been disclosed but it is understood Tito assured Kennedy that Yugoslavia intends to show independence of both Moscow and the West. tI also doubtlessly reiterated the Yugoslav position that closer Yugoslav-Soviet relations should not spoil relations with the West, especially the United States.

One factor in deteriorating U.S.-Yugoslav relations has been a series of visits exchanged between Yugoslav and Soviet leaders. Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev last September used Yugoslavia as a platform for anti-American statements. Tito went to Moscow in December and repeatedly emphasized close friendship with the Soviet Union. Premier Nikita Khrushchev is scheduled to come here this summer.

Rusk's visit is the first by a U.S. secretary of state since John Foster Dulles came here in 1955. He is expected to assure Tito that Kennedy will press Congress to reinstate Yugoslavia's status as a most favored trading nation. Cancellation of this special trading status will raise tariffs against some Yugoslav goods and cut into exports to the United States.

U.S. economic aid to Yugoslavia has virtually ceased. In the 15 years since Tito broke with Moscow such aid totaled more than two billion dollars.

The need for trade with the United States, and the dollars it brings, was enough in itself to prompt the Yugoslav initiative for better relations with Washington. But diplomats here believe that the initiative also results from a genuine desire for them.

Youth Is Booked On Molest Charge

Donald Harry Brown, 20, of 1345 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, was booked in Marin County Jail Thursday on suspicion of molesting a 3-year-old child.

A Sonoma mother brought her son and daughter with her to visit a friend in San Rafael on April 13, according to San Rafael police. The woman said she and the friend went shopping, leaving the girl with Brown, police said. The mother later took her daughter to a Sonoma doctor for a checkup suspecting she had been molested, according to the police, who said they have not completed an investigation of the case. The doctor's report has not yet been received, reported Sgt. Paul Selby.

2 Youths Hurt As Cycle, Car Collide

David Miller and Frank Hovanec, both 17, were thrown from a motorcycle about 8:48 a.m. Thursday as it collided with a car driven by Sherry Marie Wilson, 18, of 1045 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo at Nova Albion Way and Montecillo Road, according to San Rafael police.

Miller, of 2785 Heatherstone Drive, Marinwood, who was driving the motorcycle, was treated at San Rafael General Hospital for cuts and bruises. Hovanec, 310 Blackstone Drive, Marinwood, was treated at Marin General Hospital for scratches on his left leg. Miss Wilson was not injured.

Stinson Opposed To Dredging Plan

Stinson Beach Progressive Club directors Wednesday night voted to oppose a Senate bill which would permit dredging of the "Potato Patch" of the Golden Gate to obtain fill for developments in San Francisco Bay.

Main reason for opposition, said Harriet M. Green, secretary-treasurer, is fear of the possible effect of the dredging on beaches in Stinson Beach area.

Directors also voted to support in principle two anti-billboard measures, Senate bill 1132 and Assembly bill 2245.

They stated they favor a cancellation clause in the Steep Ravine Park lease which expires September, 1964, so future development of the area would not be held up. The park, south of Stinson Beach and a part of Tamalpais State Park, could be developed as a public camp and trailer site, the board believes.

The club voted approval of a Fourth of July carnival to raise funds for maintenance of the Stinson Beach Community Center.

Park Borrowing Measure Gains

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A bill to let local recreation and park districts borrow money for 10 years instead of five has the approval of a Senate committee despite a Hayward man's bitter objections.

The Natural Resources Committee backed the measure Thursday, sending it to the floor on an overwhelming favorable vote.

Samuel R. Basum of Hayward opposed the bill. He said it would allow "90 to 100 'little' recreation bureaucracies to each go its own merry way, jollily borrowing money for grandiose schemes."

Mission To India Told

Rev. Burton Weidman will speak Tuesday at the Bethel Baptist Church, 1929 Novato Boulevard, Novato, on his work of more than five years as a missionary in Bengal, India. The talk, to be illustrated with colored slides, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Seven Accepted By Stanford

Seven of 13 San Rafael High School seniors who applied for admission to Stanford University next fall have been accepted, Dean of Students Florence Abraham of San Rafael High reported today.

"Stanford informs us that they admit to their freshman class approximately one of every five applicants. We are pleased, therefore, that we have seven out of 13 applicants who have been accepted," said Miss Abraham.

The potential Stanford Indians are Dirck Brinckerhoff, Erica Gordon, Stephen Graham, Bruce Howard, Sharon Johnson, Eric Rogers, and Carl Schmidt.

Howard has also been granted admission to Harvard University; Graham, to Yale, and Brinckerhoff, to Dartmouth, Miss Abraham reported.

Aircraft Tires To Be Sold At Hamilton

Aircraft tires will be sold as surplus at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The tires may be inspected at Bldg. 729 at Hamilton from 8 to 11 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday until May 22. Bids will be opened at the Oakland Defense Surplus Sales Office, Bldg. 502, Naval Supply Center, Oakland, at 1 p.m. on May 22.

50 HAPPY FAMILIES

SAN RAFAEL—Fifty happy families now own and live in Ka Ha-Le Manor and Ha Le Kai, a condominium plan apartment near San Rafael's canal.

They have their own swimming pool, putting green, Sauna Finnish baths, shuffleboard, horse shoes, recreation room and barbecue area. They also have their own gardener and no painting, watering or maintaining to do.

There's lots of time for recreation and travel because there's no "homework."

At Ka Ha-Le Manor you may choose from one, two or three bedrooms with one, one and a half or two baths. You'll find spacious interiors, wall-to-wall carpeting and luxurious draperies, phone intercom to lobby, large decks, elevators, thermostatically controlled heat in each room. There is a central laundry room and central TV reception system.

There are still 41 apartment-home units available starting at $18,800. You can trade in your present home or property; there is special financing available.

Churchill Backs A-Arms For England

LONDON (UPI)—Sir Winston Churchill, in a surprise public comment, said yesterday that Britain must keep its nuclear deterrent because "these deadly weapons are safer in our hands than in any other."

Churchill, who had announced Tuesday he was retiring from the House of Commons, warned against "the folly of throwing away our arms" in a letter to the Primrose League, a conservative organization of which he is grand master.

The 87-year-old statesman's letter was considered a frank appeal for Conservative Party votes in the next general election in view of the fact that both the opposition Labor Party and the smaller Liberal Party have renounced the bomb."

Sewer Connection Rates Increased

The San Rafael Sanitation Commission Thursday increased the sewer connection rates for apartments.

The new rate, to go into effect June 1, calls for a $125 fee for each unit. Presently a $125 rate is charged for the first unit and $30 for each succeeding unit.

Rates on single family homes will remain the same at $125. The increase was made, according to secretary Norris Rawles, to bring the district into line with rates charged by other sanitation districts in the county.

Winery Trip Changes

The Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club, at a general meeting Thursday night, postponed its tour of the Asti Winery in Sonoma County from June 22 to June 29. Persons interested in going on the tour may get details at the June 6 club meeting or from Mrs. Herbert Owen, 704 Cabin Drive.

PROGRAM EXPANDS FOR ROSE BOWL

An expended program of entertainment for the 54th season of the Larkspur Volunteer Firemen's Saturday night dances at the Rose Bowl was described to Larkspur Chamber members Thursday.

The Musical Madcaps, a harmonica comedy team, and singer Sylvia Gaylord will entertain at the opening dance June 1, said fire prevention officer Arthur E. Wedemeyer Jr.

Jimmy Diamond's orchestra will play for dancing the first night, followed by Del Courtney's orchestra on June 8 and 15.

Wedemeyer said a portion of the dance floor will be occupied by 50 new tables and benches. A back bar will be installed and entertainers will appear on a raised platform to be wheeled onto the floor.

The dances will run through Sept. 14.

San Rafael Fire Station Site Is Recommended

The San Rafael Fire Commission Thursday night decided to recommend to the city council purchase of one fire station sit just north of the sanitation plant and close to Bellam Boulevard.

Cost of the site and fill required to improve the property was estimated at $19,000.

The commission took no action on setting a firm budget figure. Another budget session was set for May 15 at 7:30 p.m. The commission had considered asking for inclusion of two fire station sites in this year's budget.

The commission approved construction of a wall and ramp for fire station No. 2 on Third Street and will recommend to the council a call for bids on paving the drill yard at that station at its next meeting.

Sleepy Hollow Assn. Director Resigns

Resignation of Hutton Theller from the board of directors of the Sleepy Hollow Homes Assn. was accepted with regret by the board Thursday night. President Vernon F. Smith said he will appoint at the next meeting a successor to Theller, who is being transferred from the area.

A May 30 barbecue at the Sleepy Hollow Clubhouse is the next event planned by the association.

Students Awarded Six Scholarships

Six scholarships worth $250 each have been awarded to students at San Rafael, Terra Linda and Tamalpais High Schools by the Marin County Parent-Teacher Assn. scholarship committee.

The six, who competed with more than 50 applicants for the scholarships, are Donna Frost of San Rafael High School, Richard Levarro and Jeffry Moss of Terra Linda High School, and Sandra R. Burdette, Jan McCready and Laurette Smith of Tamalpais High School.

The scholarships were awarded to students planning to attend college and enter the fields of education, welfare or social science, according to Mrs. Sidney H. Diehl, committee chairman.

Marine Departs

Marinite Robert B. Kimmell, private in the Marine Air Reserve, has been assigned six months active duty. He will get recruit training at the Marine Recruit Depot, San Diego, and then be transferred to the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Station. He is the son of Mrs. Dumont Kimmell, 50 Sonoma Street, San Rafael.

New products are our way of progress. The loudspeaker field seems to be moving in two directions at present. Some units are becoming smaller and thinner, and other units are getting larger. At one time, the only speakers that had full range depth on the bass end were the large 4 to 6 cubic foot type cabinets and speakers. With stereo, two such large type enclosures were difficult to fit into most rooms. This led to the shelf type high compliance type speaker systems.

The trend in recent months has been to make these shelf-type units thinner and thinner. We have just tested two of University's new speaker systems in our Sound Room. One of the units tested in the MINI. The MINI is only two inches thick, and boasts the largest woofer for its size — 188 square inches. How did University achieve this? Based on an exclusive design, University utilized a thin, "piston action" sheet of veneered wood, and coupled it to a newly designed, custom-matched voice coil and magnetic assembly. This entire frontal area of the cabinet functions as the woofer and the mid-range speakers. A tweeter in miniature provides the high tones. The overall dimensions are 18" wide, 13⅜" high, and 2" deep.

Although we really didn't expect to hear much bass, we found that the bass was quite clear. A pair of these units would make an excellent speaker system for that extra room. The price is $44.50.

The other new University speaker system tested was the SYL-O-ETTE. This is a radically new design. The speaker system looks like a picture frame, and the grill cloth comes with a Neo-Classic art design, or a Petit Point design, or if you wish, a cane grill. The unit doesn't look like a speaker system, but more like a decorator piece. It can stand on the floor on its own attractive base, or without the base can be hung on the wall as a picture. The dimensions are 23" wide, 29" high, and 4" deep. The SYL-O-ETTE incorporates a three-speaker system with a manufacturers speaker response rating of 40 to 20,000 cps. It can handle 30 watts of program material.

To put it mildly, we were pleasantly surprised at the overall life-like quality of this attractive speaker system. The bass is definitely present together with the mid and high tonal ranges." It has a close-up type of sound that will be very good in most homes. The price, only $99.95. If you want pleasant sound without the look of two speaker systems in the room, try the SYL-O-ETTE.

A Marin Profile—

Mario Lamperti, A Man With An Inventive Mind

By RICHARD CARBONEAU

An inventive mind like that of Mario Joseph Lamperti isn't bound to any one field of endeavor. Problem plus mind equals invention.

Lamperti, born and raised in San Rafael, has been applying his inventiveness to things as diverse as food-freezing and repairing cracked ship engines. His talents also encompass cooking, photography and water-witching.

AS A BOY, living on Bayview Street, Lamperti developed early an interest in electricity. It was about the time the Northwestern Pacific electrified its former steam-operated trains to San Francisco.

"I was attracted by the flashes of electricity from the third rail," he said. "One day I took my dog and went down to the B Street station. I got on with my dog. The conductor asked me who I was. He thought I must be related to somebody on the railroad. But he figured he'd better put me off in Sausalito."

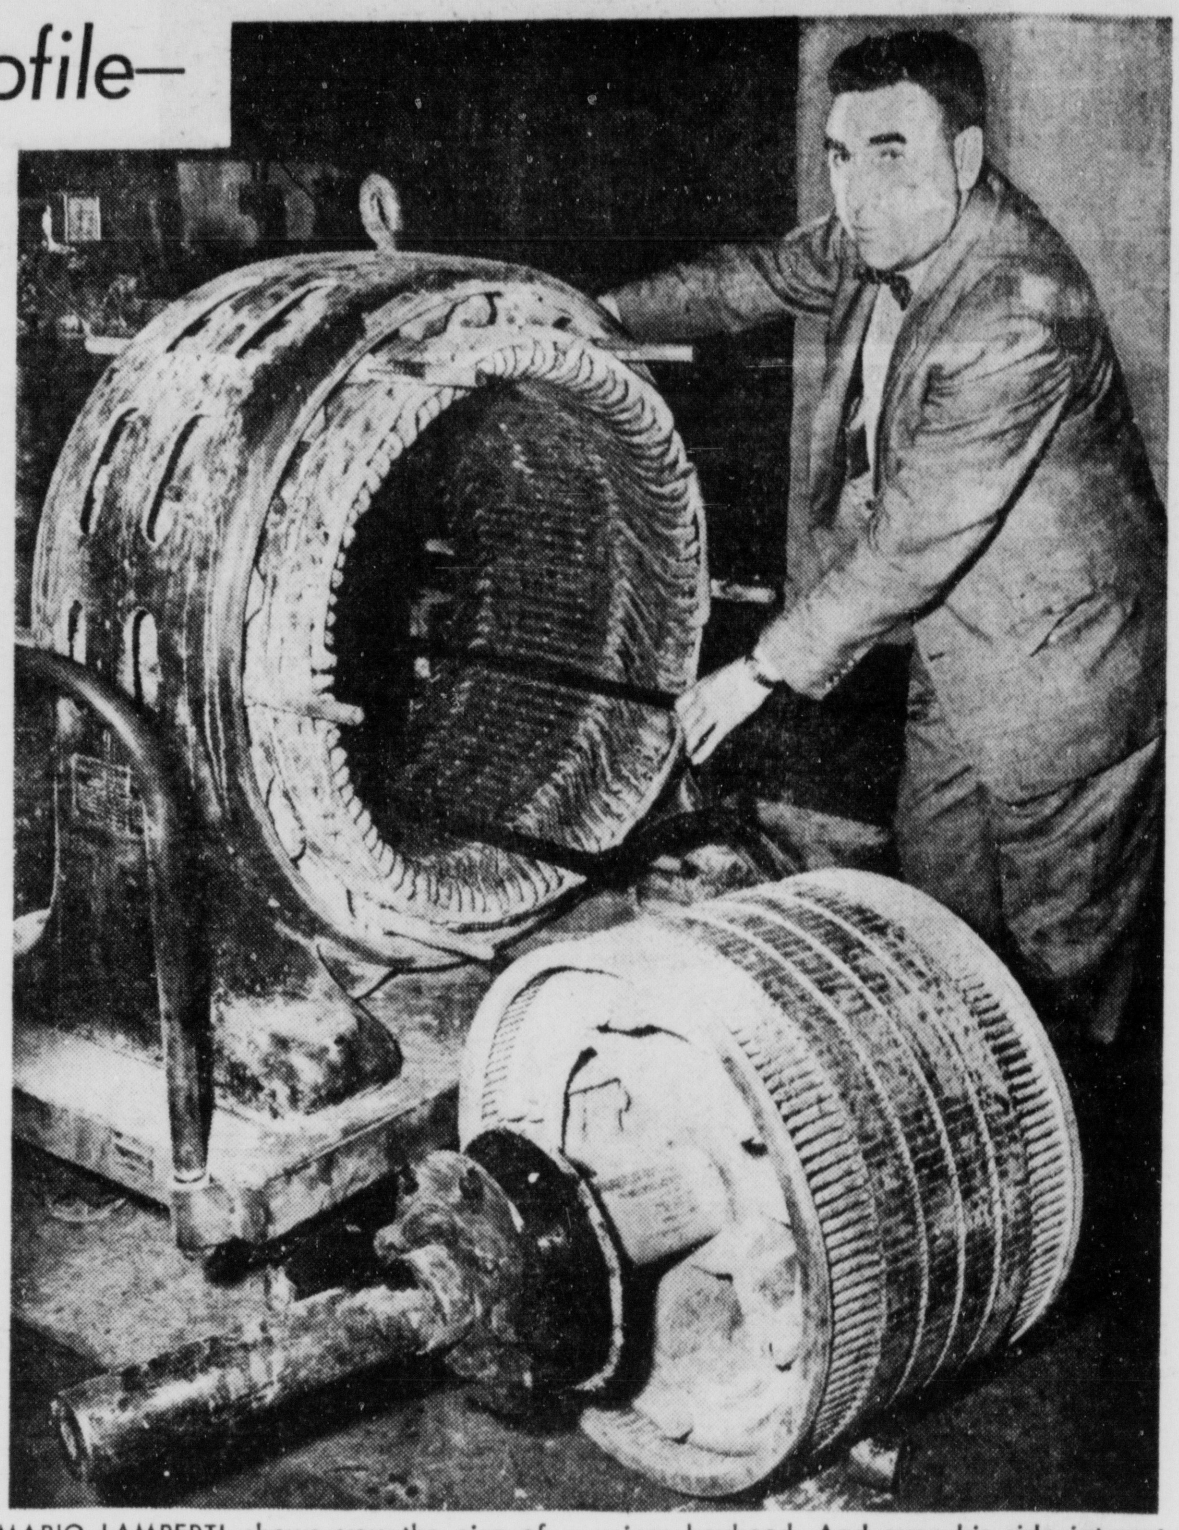
There was no electricity in the Lamperti house at that time.

Young Mario obtained a source of power for his boyhood experiments from discarded dry cells from automobiles. He and his friends salvaged the cells from trash cans and hooked up a neighborhood telegraph system with four or five boys on the line.

The 62-year-old owner of North Bay Electric Works Inc. went to elementary school at the Short School and then attended high school for two years at what is now the E Street School. He dropped out to go to work, however, and finished his education in night school.

IN LATER years he obtained both mechanical and electrical engineering licenses.

Young Mario started working in a large San Francisco electric motor shop, where he was employed from 1917 to 1926. He gained varied experience in motors, controls and other electrical equipment.



MARIO LAMPERTI shows you the size of some of the larger motors with which his North Bay Electric Works Inc. sometimes works. He has been interested in electricity since boyhood. And even his side interest of "water-witching" he attributes to electrical factors. "It's based on electricity somehow," he explains.

In 1926 he started his own business, which he built into a complete electric service organization, including wiring, motor repairs, controls, plumbing, heating, refrigeration and air conditioning.

LAMPERTI HAS designed and built numerous refrigeration systems in the area for dairies and other uses.

He designed a plant at Novato for processing pressed duck. In 1943 he built an experimental deep freeze locker plant, which he operated for several years before leasing it out. He experimented with freezing cooked foods, fruits, mushrooms and foods that were thought at the time to be unfreezable.

During World War II Lamperti developed a "key link process" for repairing large marine engines that were cracked. He and four men operated an organization. The process involved "stitching" the cracked cylinders of either steam or diesel engines with many precision-fitted key links.

"IT SAVED quite a few million dollars and kept a lot of ships going," said Lamperti.

He once repaired a cracked cylinder weighing 10 tons from a Russian ship, which made a number of voyages afterward before eventual replacement of the part.

His company installs steam, hot water and electric heating systems, including radiant floors and ceiling panels. Lamperti also manufactures coils for radiant heating of wood floors.

Lamperti's knowledge of plumbing extends to the installation of water systems in rural areas, and this is where his water-witching comes in.

"I don't know exactly how it works; my father taught it to me," Lamperti said.

"It's based on electricity, somehow," he said. "You can't have wet feet, I know."

HE SAID almost any forked green branch can be used.

"You can feel it; it will turn your hands," he asserted.

But even if he doesn't know how it works, Lamperti knows it works. He says he located springs last fall, he found and developed a well near Healdsburg.

There's never enough time to do all the things Lamperti would like to do. Besides his hobby of color photography, he has been active in the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, various school committees and as a director of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District.

Compare the size of this small motor with the king-sized one which Lamperti is displaying in the photo on the facing page. Lamperti now employs 20 people.

LAMPERTI, a widower with no children, likes people. He likes to dance—ballroom, folk dancing and square dancing—and was the first president of the Marin Dance Council. He likes to cook Italian dinners for the Mill Valley Folk Dancers—"I always did like to eat," he said.

Anchored right next door to Lamperti's shop at 535 Francisco Boulevard is his boat, Waltz Time, a twin-screw 36-footer. He applied his inventive mind to this, too.

The exhaust fumes from conventional ports at the stern tended to swirl up and make passengers ill, so Lamperti devised an underwater exhaust system using venturi tubes to prevent back pressure on the engine.

AT ONE TIME Lamperti operated San Rafael Marine, in which he designed equipment and tools to service boats. He also developed a thick liquid for removing paint from boat bottoms.

Lamperti would like to move to a smaller place and have more free time. His business, in which he employs 20 people, has ranged throughout design, installation, servicing and even appliances. He would like to confine it to electro-mechanical work.

Tiburon's Little Leaguers

Peninsula Goes All-Out For Its Youngsters

For lo, the winter is past.
The rain is over and gone.
Managers appear on the earth.
The time of cheering has come.
And the voices of the Little League umpire is heard in the land.

And who cares?

Out Tiburon way, 260 boys between the ages of 8 and 14 and all their mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, grandparents (not to mention friends of the family) care a lot.

BUT THEIR interest is nothing compared to the dedication of a small group of men who have built the Tiburon Peninsula Little League to its present complement of two pony league, five major and nine minor league teams. Last month at sign-up time, 65 per cent of the eligible boys enrolled. So many were judged ready for major league ball that another team was formed and today, a week later than most Marin communities, weather permitting, with the Reed School band playing and Boy Scout Troop 9 raising the Flag, the Tiburon season was to officially open at Del Mar field.

And thereby hangs a tale.

Little League baseball is not simply a matter of handing nine boys a ball and a bat and telling them to get out and "play ball." Uniforms, safety equipment, insurance, umpires and fields all require time and money not too easily come by.

REALIZING THE rapid growth of the league and the need for additional playing fields, the Tiburon Little League last year entered into a unique arrangement with the Reed Union School District and, through joint efforts, have readied two new fields. These will supplement Judge Field which serves both the semi-pro Pelicans and the Little League, and which must continue as the principal playing field for years to come.

Judge Field is owned by the Tiburon Peninsula Club, subject to the condition that it be used for recreational purposes.

Normally the league holds its opening day festivities at Judge Field—but late and abundant rains have flooded the playing area.

The new fields at Del Mar and Bel Aire Schools were the brainchildren of William A. Carroll, past president of the league and still one of its devoted workers. Construction of the fields began two years ago with Carroll at the helm, and the new diamonds will be brought into almost a fully finished playing condition this season by the league committee now headed by Harold F. Green as president.

Assistance and cooperation have been given by Reed District Supt. Edward C. Pino and school Principals John Fitch, Jack Usilton and Robert Gaw.

COMMUNITY service funds and undistributed reserves of the Reed School District have provided $1,500 for the Del Mar and $4,000 for the Bel Aire fields. The district committed itself to purchasing topsoil and materials for a sprinkler system, and promised to maintain and water the turf.

The Little League committee members contributed the "sweat of their brows" and $6,500 for professionally-drawn plans, architectural supervision, expert engineering and the equipment and labor needed to grade the sites and install the sprinklers, turf, backstops and bleachers.

And where did the $6,500 come from? Tired of ekeing out $100 here and $200 there from dances, brunches and Christmas tree sales, the committee turned to the community and raised $1,000 with a mail campaign.

Impressed by diligence and dedication of the men, the Arequipa Foundation made a

ONE OF THE TWO NEW baseball diamonds which the Tiburon Peninsula has provided for its Little Leaguers is this field at the Del Mar School. It and the Bel Aire School field were developed jointly by the Reed Union School District and Little League supporters headed by a group of "dedicated fathers." Judge Field, previously used, will provide the program with still a third diamond. Weather permitting, the 1963 Tiburon Peninsula Little League season was to open today.

New Fields For The Little Leaguers

substantial contribution. The remainder came from family donations and sponsorships.

ALSO IMPRESSED were the San Francisco Giants, who read the story of the big baseball project on the sports pages of the Independent Journal. Over came promotions man Walter Mails, bringing head groundskeeper Matty Schwab who gave the men the benefit of his expert advice on laying out the Bel Aire field.

And back again, three weeks ago, came Schwab with two sets of bases and concrete anchors to present to the league as a gift from the Giants.

This year, in order to raise additional funds for new uniforms and equipment, Little League vice-president Vernon Girtler has organized a finance committee which has launched a determined campaign to obtain additional sponsorships.

NEW SPONSORS have responded by joining the business concerns and organizations of past seasons in lending their vital financial and moral support to the teams.

If there is any single item which distinguishes the Tiburon Little League from the many other successful Little League programs in Marin, it may be the "Parent Conduct Rules."

Each year the league issues a "decorum memorandum" to all fathers and mothers. In brief, it states as the objective of the league the teaching of good sportsmanship, loyalty, courage and respect. Winning is recognized as important—but secondary.

The memorandum is really a "code of ethics" and calls upon parents, managers, coaches, umpires, league officials and players to maintain a standard of conduct above reproach in all league activity.

THE DEDICATED men, all with boys in the league, include Joe Murphy, Elmer Rieger, Fred Mantegani, Bob Beyries, Ed Ryall, Lowell Airola, David Kamp, Lee Larimer, Rolph Murk, Bill Roby, Paul Hantzsche, Charles Estudillo, Bob MacCarthy, Don Mitchell, James Morgan, Girtler, Carroll and Green.

In years to come, no one should be too surprised to see some of these same last names appearing on the professional baseball rosters. For, in addition to providing the best in equipment and fields, the men are also teaching their sons the right way to play baseball.

• This is the age of automation, of new methods and products. There is usually more than one reason for an industry adapting so-called automation—and there is more than one reason for the dry cleaning industry adapting "self-service" methods and equipment. One of the principal reasons, however, was to enable dry cleaners to render a more personalized service to customers.

• Personalized dry cleaning, the NORGE way, differs radically from past practices in the industry—of cleaning miscellaneous garments, etc., in "mixed" batches in large vats or tumblers. NORGE cleans your clothing, drapes, blankets and slip covers unmixed with others in 150 gallons of top quality, freshly-filtered solvent. The load is dried slowly at 145° temperature and aired for five minutes to remove all solvent odors. At the end of the overall 45-minute cleaning cycle most garments may be worn without pressing since this processing sets no wrinkles nor causes any shrinkage. This is new! This is different! Others may imitate, but NORGE equipment actually "does the job" for you.

• The price is right. Only $2.00 for a full 8-lb. load. Expert pressing services are available at low cost, if desired. And a licensed dry cleaner is always on duty to assist you.

A Dream Takes Shape At Civic Center

By PEGGY GANNON

The dream of an amphitheater and pools at the new Marin County Civic Center may well become a reality in the not-too-distant future.

And playing a major role toward the realization of this dream has been Mrs. Ralston Hodgson of Ross. For it was Mrs. Hodgson who was contacted by the late architect Frank Lloyd Wright for assistance in the drawing of plans for this portion of the Civic Center development.

ONE DAY IN 1957, Mrs. Hodgson remembers, she received a telephone call from Aaron C. Green, Wright's assistant, asking her to meet with the architects to discuss plans for the civic center pools. Her roles as originator, choreographer and production manager of Marin's annual Ballet Aquacade, a traditional event now in its 18th year, made Mrs. Hodgson a natural and well qualified choice as such a consultant.

The first meeting was held at the Roger Kent home in Kentfield where the earliest aquacades had been presented. Green took pictures and asked Mrs. Hodgson's advice as to the needs of future larger and more expensive aquacades and similar events.

After Wright had drawn the plan, it was again discussed with Mrs. Hodgson. She then emphasized the need for more area around the pool and a better accessibility for the entrances. The first plans were discarded and Wright then presented his second plan.

THE POOLS would be part of the amphitheater. There would be two pools—one of them Olympic size which is 360-feet-long so that it could be used if the World Olympics ever came to this Bay Area, and the other pie-shaped stage pool. Each section would be controlled by a hydraulic lift which could be raised or lowered and the pool instantly filled with water.

In explaining the pie-shaped stage pool, Mrs. Hodgson notes: "The pool, the way it is planned, would make a very spectacular setting not only for Ballet Aquacade, but many other outdoor productions."

To seat 3,000 persons, the amphitheater is intended not only as a key facility for the Marin County fairs, but also for year-round service to the community. Its design provides for a flexible, multi-purpose use to accommodate a wide variety of entertainment events such as symphony concerts, boxing and wrestling matches, historical pageants, waterworks and fireworks displays, ballet, ballet aquacades and diving exhibitions, folk dance festivals and theatrical performances.

AS ALAN BRUCE, county administrator, explains: "The smaller pool only, closest to the audience seating, is included in the actual architectural plans for the amphitheater. The larger swimming pool is in the master plan only as an eventual private concession.

"If current planning is followed, no tax dollars will be used for the amphitheater itself. The state government is now accumulating in parimutuel funds $105,000 per year for the account of the Marin County fairgrounds. Unless plans change, as they often do, the amphitheater could be constructed, on this basis, in 1965-66."

If and when that time arrives, the Ballet Aquacade will find itself with an ideal location, Mrs. Hodgson believes, and will be ready to encourage even greater participation by the youth of the county.

She thinks Frank Lloyd Wright expressed the philosophy behind the amphitheater and pools perfectly when, in an address to the people of Marin County in 1957, he said:

"BEAUTY IS the moving cause of nearly every issue worth the civilization we have, and civilization without a culture is like a man without a soul. Culture consists of the expression by the human spirit of the love of beauty."

Through the Ballet Aquacade, Mrs. Hodgson feels some 350 young people of Marin County have found one way of expressing their love of beauty and creativity.

This year's production will be held at the Ann Curtis School of Swimming on June 8 and 9 at 2:30 p.m. As a Marin General Hospital Auxiliary branch program, proceeds from the event will go to the hospital for the purchase of a much-needed cycle bed.

LOOKING AT DRAWINGS of the proposed amphitheater and pools at the new Marin County Civic Center is Mrs. Ralston Hodgson of Ross, who helped plan the facilities. When completed, the outdoor theater and stage pool will be the new home of the Ballet Aquacade, which Mrs. Hodgson founded and choreographs, along with other cultural and community events. THIS ARCHITECT'S SKETCH shows what the amphitheater-pool area of the Marin Civic Center will look like when completed. The design was by the late Frank Lloyd Wright and associates, who consulted with Mrs. Ralston Hodgson on local needs. Actual architectural plans cover the smaller pie-shaped stage pool closest to the audience seating only. The larger swimming pool is in the master plan only as a possible private concession of the future.

THIS PLOT PLAN shows how the amphitheater-pools area of the Civic Center sketched above has been laid out in the master plan developed by Frank Lloyd Wright. Seating is provided for 3,000 persons. The stage pool is regarded as an ideal site for future productions of the Ballet Aquacade, just one of the many community events which would probably find a new home in these quarters.

YOUNG JANET OLIVER arrives at Terra Linda High School to begin her school day 50 minutes earlier than most students. She and the other participants in the school's pilot program in team teaching begin their instruction at 8 a.m.

School Starts Early

For Terra Linda High School Students Enrolled In Team Teaching Program

Some students at Terra Linda High School are voluntarily taking examinations these days to assess the value of a new approach to education.

The approach is "staff utilization through team teaching" which is much on the national education scene these days, and which has been applied locally for nearly a year in a pilot block program for approximately 340 students in Marin's newest high school.

THE SAN RAFAEL High School District is now evaluating this program through a series of tests for block program students in fields ranging from mathematics, foreign languages, English comprehension and U.S. history to college aptitude, study habits and attitudes, plus the California inventory series designed to indicate responsibility, flexibility, achievement by conformity, achievement by independence, and intellectual efficiency.

One of the students in this block program is Janet Oliver, 15, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs Robert E. Oliver of 56 Circle Road in Los Ranchitos.

Janet is a sophomore who volunteered, with her parents' consent, to participate in the beginning of the block last fall.

Entrance in the program means that Janet starts her school day at 8 a.m., 50 minutes earlier than other students, and pursues a flexible program of studies in periods ranging from 20 to 100 minutes in length, within classes of eight to 100 students, on a schedule that varies from day to day as well as week to week.

AFTER LUNCH, at 1:30 p.m., Janet and the other block program students join traditional courses for the last two periods of the day.

School authorities assured all parents, including Janet's, at the beginning of the school year that block students would have at least all the work included in the regular program and possibly more.

The program consists of English, social studies, mathematics, foreign languages and physical education. In addition to these, Janet has been able to include advanced band work which she feels she would not have been able

IN A LARGE 90-member class in sophomore English, Janet Oliver discusses a paper with fellow student Larry Kirschbaum. The students are now taking examinations to evaluate the results to date in the new block program approach to education. (Independent-Journal photos)

A SMALLER discussion class in the social sciences includes Janet among the 18 students. Directing a study of the Battle of Santiago Bay is teacher Albert Gautraud.

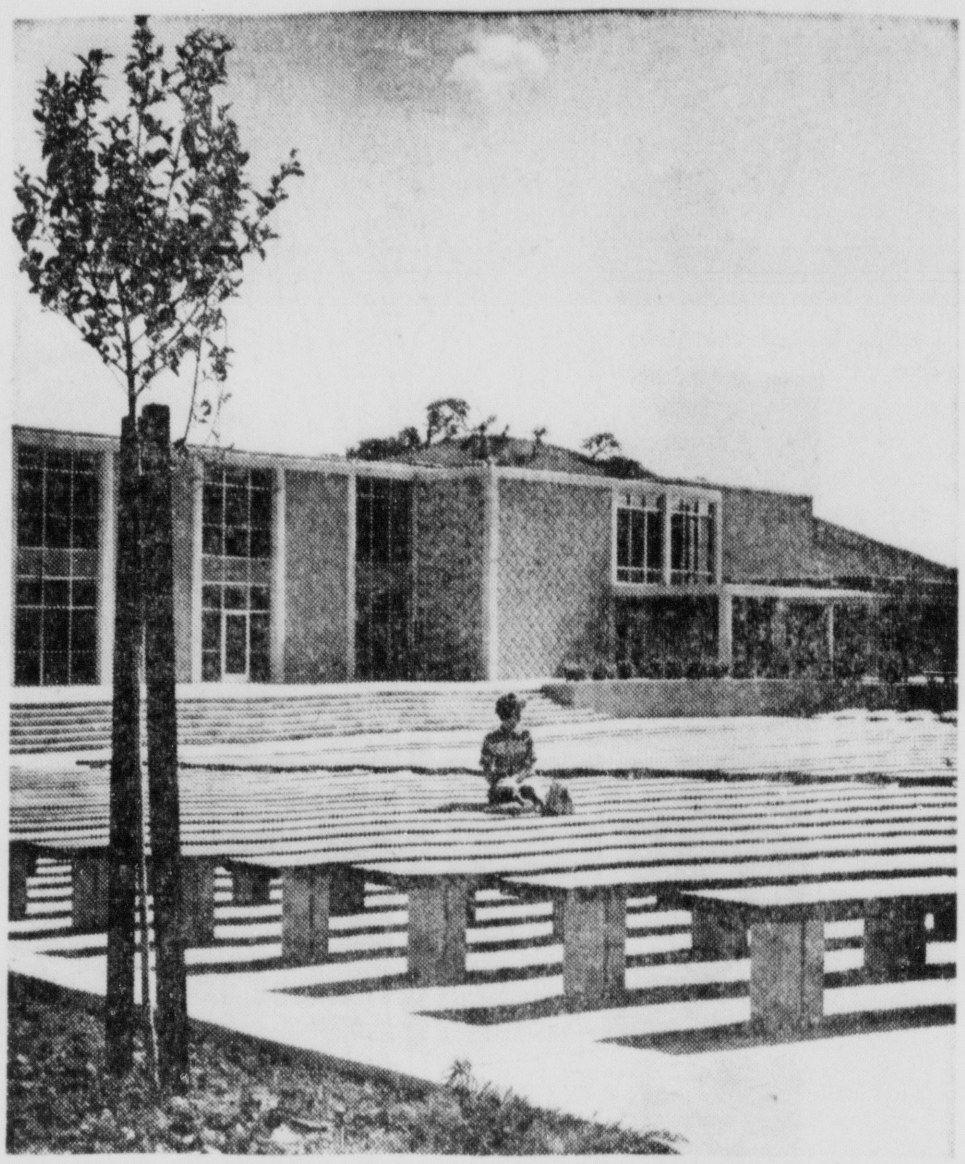
AS A BLOCK PROGRAM student, Janet Oliver can use the Terra Linda High language laboratory during any free time to "bone up" on her French.



THE SCHOOL DAY over, Janet does a bit of studying in the sunshine in the high school's amphitheater while awaiting transportation home.

to fit into her college preparatory program in the conventional course arrangement.

One purpose of the block program is staff utilization planned to enable teachers to work as a team presenting integrated materials.

FOR EXAMPLE, if a planned lecture is applicable to 100 students, it is given once and for the length of time required for the material. While one teacher is engaged with this large number of students, several other teachers are released to provide individual attention for small groups dealing with subject matter that cannot be easily encompassed in a lecture.

Janet described one day's schedule as beginning at 8 a.m. with a lecture on English literature in a class of 90. The period was followed by a social studies discussion group of 18 students at 9 a.m. and individual study in an English lab from 9:40 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Physical education was scheduled from 10 a.m. to 10:40 a.m. and after a brief brunch break, Janet joined a class of 18 students for 40 minutes of geometry instruction. The next class, a French lecture to 60 students, lasted 40 minutes.

That particular day, Janet also had 40 minutes to study geometry before luncheon. At 1:30 p.m., she joined the traditional program for a study period and advanced band work.

"FLEXIBLE scheduling," according to Lauriston Tardy, block program director, "breaks away from the customary pattern which assumes that all phases of all courses should have exactly the same amount of time each day."

Tardy also points out that "the block program permits teachers to better utilize their particular abilities as well as give more time to individual students."

Block students are encouraged to employ free time in independent work in foreign language, English and mathematics laboratories as well as the library and other available facilities.

The program includes students from all four years of high school who may cross levels during the day's course.

JANET SHARES the program with her "adopted" sister, Mona Wicknertz, a senior exchange student from Sweden who transferred to Terra Linda this year and lives with Janet and her family. The two girls meet in second year French courses, but otherwise seldom see each other during the day.

Despite the intensified program, Janet finds time to play the flute in the school band, take a leading role in last month's musical comedy as well as practice for the upcoming Aquafair.

She's busy, Janet admits. But there is also the compensation of "feeling that we are getting somewhere."

"I think the program is a good idea," she adds.

A College Invites Community To See Students In Action

Kentfield Campus To Be Scene Of Lively Open House Events

College of Marin administrators, teachers and students have been discussing the school's special role as "a community college."

Now, in addition to "telling," they plan to do some "showing."

THE PUBLIC has been invited to an open house to be held next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon on the college campus in Kentfield.

It is planned as a "students in action" exhibition of the college's varied educational and cultural offerings.

Says Thomas Rigby, chairman of the event and a sophomore student: "It will be our attempt to give the people of Marin a picture of the work and interests of students at Marin's community college. We have been telling them about our programs. Now we want them to see for themselves."

For the past eight weeks now the campus has been the scene of hammer-and-nail and pastepot-preparations for the event. Activity has centered around an arrangement of 20 student-manned exhibit booths to be arranged semicircle fashion on the lawn between the science building and the library.

IT THEN fans out to include demonstration and discussion of college programs by students and instructors in classrooms and laboratories.

If you come to the campus next Friday evening anytime between 7 and 11 p.m., you will be in time to see art students at work in any of 10 classes including painting, craft, weaving, design, advertising art, photography, lapidary, printmaking, sculpture, and ceramics.

Don't worry about asking the students questions while they work. They will be happy to stop and discuss any phase of their projects with you.

You, your son or daughter might be in their places a year from now, because these students are members of both day and evening adult classes.

AFTER YOU have toured the classrooms, stop in at the art gallery and see the more than 100 pieces of finished art work on display. If you miss any part you can come back the next day, for the students will be at it again all of Saturday afternoon.

The open house will move into full gear on Saturday afternoon with lawn exhibits, open classrooms, entertainment and an end-of-the-day "street dance" for the students on the program.

Events of the day will be capped by an evening band concert at 8 p.m. in Olney Hall.

If you arrive at noon or a little before on Saturday, you can get a snack, pick up a program and browse through the student exhibits before entertainment by some of the 32 foreign students on the campus begins.

THE STUDENT booths you will see are the work of 18 campus clubs and other organizations, each of which has put together an exhibit in line with its major interest.

First there is a general information booth where you can find out about courses and programs—what is available on campus and where. Here you will see a photographic exhibit of students at work in classrooms and laboratories through the campus.

Want to know what the campus will look like in 1970? The Engineering Club has prepared a special master plan exhibit.

The SECS Club, a girls' service organization, will show Marin's cultural opportunities and activities. Another girls' club, Semantor Gelanes, will profile the role of campus and Marin County women, past and present. The SG's, as they are called, annually sponsor a drive to provide Christmas food baskets for needy families, and are responsible for the campus Christmas decorations.

THE MARINER Discussion Committee, a group of politically-interested campus intellectuals, will give you an idea of what they are doing to stimulate critical thinking

STUMP SPEAKER Rich Gherman of San Francisco delivers a "Hyde Park"-style address on the College of Marin campus during the Wednesday noon "speakers' hour," a program fostered by the college's Mariner Discussion Committee. Gherman, an army veteran, witnessed the famous London Hyde Park speeches while in service and helped to introduce the idea at the college last month. It is typical of a new wave of critical thought and discussion at the college that is certain to be noted by visitors to the campus during next weekend's big open house. (Photo by Ken Nunes)

Invitation To A College Campus

THE BUSINESS DIVISION portion of College of Marin's open house next weekend will include a demonstration of business data processing equipment. among students. Champions of a movement to speak out on campus and general topics, the club revived the Wednesday noon "Hyde Park" speakers' hour this semester.

You will see a fencing match by members of the newly established Fencing Club, and the Radio Club will talk by shortwave with other ham operators on the other side of the world.

A history of the college including original documents and artifacts, has been put together by the co-educational Atheneum Club. This group sponsored a campus drive to raise funds for Marin retarded children last semester.

The International Relations Club will have a three-way booth including the club's work in behalf of the World University Service, handicraft by the college's foreign students, and the general activities of the club on campus. IRC, largest organization on campus with 75 members, annually sponsors a banquet, proceeds from which go to the World University Service.

THE ASSOCIATED Women Students will give you an idea of the kind of events and activities scheduled for women through the school year, and the Block M, varsity athletic club, will show films of college games played during the year. Block M handles the sale of programs and all concessions for basketball and football games.

You Can See For Yourself School's Community Role

The Naturalists, oldest student organization on campus, will show a record of field trip activities in line with their interest in the study of animal and plant life. Last year the Naturalists sponsored a county-wide books for Asian students drive, collecting more books and periodicals than any college or university in the United States in the effort.

The Art Club, sponsor of the college's spring film series, has pulled together examples of the art work of high school as well as college students. The Associated Students College of Marin, official student body governing unit, will review local and state-wide student government activities including the November 1962 state meeting sponsored by College of Marin.

EXHIBITS BY the Ski Club, Intramural Club and Christian Club are also planned.

Following demonstrations of Japanese and Panamanian dances and flamenco guitar by foreign students, each of the college's six divisions — fine arts, science and engineering, business, liberal arts, technical-vocational, and physical education—will hold demonstrations and tours of their facilities.

Since each of the divisions will make two complete hour-long presentations, you will be able to see at least two of the areas which interest you most.

Interested in seeing a modern language laboratory in which each student controls taped reading and translating assignments to suit his own rate of speed?

PERHAPS YOU would like to see the 15-amplifier electronic analog computer located in the engineering laboratory, business electronic data processing equipment, the simulated dental office-laboratory used in the dental assisting program, the home economics kitchen or the auto shop used in the industrial arts program, or the bones of a prehistoric elephant unearthed in Tomales Bay and located in the geology lab?

If so, just ask one of the student guides to direct you.

Plans for the open house were proposed by the student executive council before a group of student clubs, faculty, board and administration at a luncheon meeting held in March. College authorities welcomed the idea but were not surprised that the students proposed it.

"It's typical of a new wave of student interest and purpose we have noticed for the past several years," said Dean of Students Irwin P. Diamond. "There hasn't been anything like it since the end of World War II when we had all the veterans back."

DIAMOND SAID interest during the past school year has been particularly high but "in general, we've been dealing with a more serious student, one who is more ready to take leadership and accept responsibility.

"Scholastically we have had a 100 per cent jump in the number of students eligible for our honor society this year," Diamond said. "At the same time, there has been a significant decline in the percentage of students disqualified and on probation for academic reasons.

"Our standards haven't changed," he said. "You only have to look at the record of our students at the University of California and other institutions to see that."

The college's new counseling system and its broader program offerings have had a lot to do with the higher achievement, Diamond believes.

"STUDENTS NOW sit on the college's regular faculty committees," said Diamond.

"We now have a student-operated film series, a student-run speakers' hour, and the increase in the number of interest clubs has been gratifying. The students asked for and planned changes in the present cafeteria, and have revamped their constitution."

"A lot has happened this year," said Diamond. "The open house is one of the more dramatic, of course, but we haven't been surprised by the students taking matters into their own hands."

College of Marin officials may not be surprised at this new student leadership, but you might. Visit the open house and see for yourself.

A TOUR OF College of Marin's electronic engineering technology laboratory will be part to the science and engineering division presentation at College of Marin's open house next weekend.

THE VISITORS WILL also see action like this by the college's art students. The hands in the photo are busy polishing a bracelet in a jewelry-making class. The instrument being used is called a "polishing drill." Other arts taught at the college will also be demonstrated by both regular day and evening adult students. (Photo by Michele Meyer)

Lifting Veil From India's Religions

By DON KEOWN

THE SPIRITUAL HERITAGE OF INDIA by Swami Prabhavananda, Doubleday and Co., 374 pages, $4.95.

I OWE RUSSIA $1,200 by Bob Hope, Doubleday and Co., 272 pages, $3.95.

Most contemporary books about India's religions have been written by sympathetic westerners. None can speak with the authority and knowledge of Swami Prabhavananda, who is not only a believer but a revered holy seer.

In his "The Spiritual Heritage of India" he tells us that "Indian philosophy is not a mere way of thinking, but a way of life, a way of truth. To become a philosopher is to become transformed in life, renewed in mind and baptized in spirit."

And that, in India, philosophy is indistinguishable from religion.

In his latest book, written with the assistance of Frederick Manchester, the Swami describes the roots of the great religions of his country and how they flourished. What to many westerners seems mysterious, contradictory and even weird is shown, under his guidance, to be simple, pure and basic—and beautifully expressed.

You can read excerpts and interpretations of the Vedas, India's earliest and most important Scriptures, and of other great sacred writings.

You can read about true Yoga, very different from the meaning that word has come to have in the West.

You can read of the lives, sacrifices and teachings of the great holy men down to Sri Ramakrasna who studied and practiced many sects of Hinduism, Mohammedism, Buddhism and Christianity, and who taught:

"Do not depend on doctrines, do not depend on dogmas, or sects, or churches, or temples. They count for very little compared with the essence of existence in man, which is divine . . ." Pursue diligently and sincerely any spiritual path, he said, and you will ultimately achieve "realization."

Swami Prabhavananda's latest book is certain to do much to clear away the misunderstandings and misinterpretations which have grown up about India's spiritual beliefs and practices. It is a most valuable and most stimulating exposition on a subject most worthy of such treatment.

BEFORE WE comment upon "I Owe Russia $1,200," let us frankly admit that we are one of those for whom Bob Hope can do no wrong.

He can tell the most ancient and corniest of jokes (and he frequently does), he can mess up the punch lines (which he does, although not frequently), and still, as long as it is Bob Hope, delivering one of his rapid-fire monologues or mugging his way through some outrageous skit, we are convulsed with laughter.

"I Owe Russia $1,200" is a Bob Hope monologue in writing, atypical otherwise only in its length.

With a gag ratio of a good half dozen per page, Hope quips his way through an account of his adventures and misadventures as one of America's busiest traveling entertainers. It is the story of his trips abroad to perform for American servicemen and/or to make movies and TV film—including, of course, the visit to Moscow, from which the Kremlin may never recover.

It is pretty much standard Hope fare with the usual large measures of jokes about Crosby, pretty girls, income tax, golf, political figures, the military brass and the relative "hardships" Americans at home are enduring while servicemen "live it up" at their remote outposts.

If you are not a Bob Hope fan, there is no reason to read this. But you will hardly be missed. For many, many of us—and for even more overseas—Hope is "the" American comedian.

WORLD Publishing Co. has issued in paperback form ($1.55) "A Practical Manual of Screen Playwriting" by Lewis Herman.

Herman has covered both television and movie scripts, aiming his text primarily, but not exclusively, at the beginner. He has covered the elements of dramaturgy, the filmic components and the technicalities of writing in a most complete and practical manner.

The manual is part of World's Forum Books series planned for limited special audiences. But for those who have always wanted to attempt a TV script, and have never known just how to start, this seems to be the answer.

COMEDIAN BOB HOPE retreats from Moscow after firing a barrage of quips and jokes. In his new book, "I owe Russia $1,200," Hope tells of his travels to Russia and elsewhere around the world to make TV films and movies and to entertain servicemen. It is typical Hope comedy fare. # An Inside Story Of The OSS

OF SPIES AND STRATAGEMS by Stanley Lovell, Prentice-Hall, 191 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Of Spies and Stratagems" is a "now it can be told" account of the work of industrialist Stanley Lovell in the OSS (Office of Strategic Services—although Of Spies and Stratagems would suit it better) during World War II.

Lovell obviously relished the problems, which ranged from how to communicate with undercover agents in enemy-occupied territory to a scheme (never carried out) to infect the entire civilian population of Spanish Morocco with "an assortment of bacteria from tularemia and psittacosis to all the pests known to the Fourth Horseman of the Apocalypse."

Bacteriological warfare was not practiced in in World War II, but at least one man highly placed in the OSS advocated it: Stanley Lovell, industrialist and author of "Of Spies and Stratagems." Perhaps it may make its appearance, alongside such atrocities as the hydrogen or cobalt bomb, in World War III.

Author Lovell (who, incidentally, is board chairman of Raytheon Corp., manufacturers of major components for missiles and rockets) is confident World War III will come. His timetable, drawn from the late Oswald Spengler, calls for its arrival in 1964.

"Of Spies and Stratagems" is an interesting account of a side of war but little known. It is interesting also in its disclosures of the depravity within the human mind, for which war provides release.

Books For The Young Reader

Some new books for the young, younger and youngest readers:

"Bones and the Black Panther" by Jean Caryl (Funk and Wagnalls, $2.95) is about an 11-year-old who has his heart set on a very special English bicycle. And of the many ways he goes about raising the necessary funds. It reads like an especially entertaining book for the boy 10 to 12. And Jessica Zemsky has added some simple but effective illustrations. Her jacket are is particularly delightful.

"See A White Horse" by Miska Miles (Little, Brown, $2.75) can be substituted if your youngster is more interested in things four-footed than those on wheels. The white horse of the title shares top billing with young Henry and a dog. It's a kind of a story which small boys relish. Wesley Dennis is the illustrator.

"The Mystery of Hidden Harbor" by John Stephen Doherty (Doubleday, $2.50) is a mystery-adventure novel for young boys about how Pete Dana risks danger to foil a threat to the peaceful seaside town where he resides. There is lots of action. And in addition to the mystery angle, boys will especially enjoy the space which is devoted to skin-diving.

"The Forests of Adventure" by Werner F. Schmidt (Little, Brown, $3.75) is a bit of derring-do for children 10 to 13 with a junior hero named Eric. Schmidt, a Millbrae doctor, has authored a book for the first time, and it is a return to the traditional with princes, barons, outlaws, huntsmen, the beautiful maiden and plenty of high adventure. There's a bit of bloodshed in this one, which, again, is in keeping with the tales of old.

"Horsemen of the World" by Jack Coggins (Doubleday and Co., $2.75) covers a bevy of colorful riders from the American cowboy and Indian to the Russian Cossack. The horseracing jockey, the Canadian Mountie, the Hungarian herder, the fox hunter, the Mongol, the polo player, the gaucho, the Arabian desert rider and many others are also present in its pages. The subjects lend themselves well to Coggins' dramatic style of drawing. And much information on riding gear and styles, mounts, etc., is included Most boys from about 11 to 14 will revel in this.

"August Explains" by Phil Ressner with pictures by Crosby Bonsall (Harper & Row, $2.50) is for the younger readers and read-tos about 4 to 8. It's about a young bear who wants to become a boy, and who is "tutored" for his new role by an older and wiser bear. Both text and pictures deal heavily with such day-to-day tasks as lacing shoes and eating with a fork —something which we adults take for granted, but which can represent major challenges and accomplishments for the little ones.

A Summer Guide For Teen-Agers

BARRON'S TEEN-AGE SUMMER GUIDE by Meyer Reinhold, Barron's Educational Series Inc., 188 pages, softcover, $2.25. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

With vacation months near, Barron has issued an updated and expanded 1963 version of its summer guide for teenagers.

Covered are travel opportunities and camps, both abroad and in the U.S.; summer educational programs; work camps and community service projects; summer job suggestions, and recommended reading. Special features include a pollen index for hay fever sufferers and a temperature and rainfall chart of the U.S.

While necessarily limited in its audience, the publication should be of concrete benefit to families where teen-agers are faced with "time on their hands" this summer.

Photos From A New Railroading Album

Marin photographers are well represented in the new Lucius Beebe book, "The Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroads." Shown on this page are three photos by Richard Steinheimer, former Independent-Journal staff photographer. Upper right, S.P.'s cycle of steam locomotion came to an end in the 1950s with such scenes as this 2-10-2 type freight engine resting on the storage track in the Roseville yard, awaiting a call that never came. Diesels had taken over. Below, the S.P. Oakland-San Francisco ferries were still running in the early 1950s when this Northwestern Pacific steam engine came out of the train shed at Oakland Pier en route to the roundhouse after pulling a special train. Bottom left, cab-in-front locomotives were an essential part of the S.P. scene for nearly half a century. Here in 1954 Steinheimer found No. 4165 humming to herself by the water plug at Colton. She was waiting to help an eastbound passenger train over Beaumont Hill. Also included in the Beebe book are photographs by Marin railroad buffs Robert Hale and Warren Marcus and Marin Historical Society Museum curator Roy Graves.

MARIN POETS' CORNER

ECSTACY

I am dumb when I see
Green clad mountains,
Breath-taking sunsets,
Lakes that are a bit
Of heaven's blue, dropped
From the dome above,
Wild rhododendrons
Massing their gorgeous beauty
Or dogwood in the rain,
Old ocean's blue-white sparkle
Of countless shore-swept waves.

I cannot say the things
I think: The joy and pain
That beauty brings
Silences articulation.
I stand and gaze
And suffer ecstacies
Of rapture,
My heart expands
My throat contracts
My ready tongue is stilled
And I am dumb.

HAIR PEACE

Gram hid a switch with her hair
And pulled down waves in "dips."
She thought herself extremely fair
With pomade on her lips.
Yet these were secrets in her past;
It known, she'd have been judged fast!

The girl today does not lose face
When in her search for charm,
She flaunts a well stocked make-up case
That weights her good right arm.
And only those not in the know
Would fail to have a wig to show!

THE STEREO SCENE

Classical, Folk And Jazz Discs

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

Some records — classical, jazz and folk:

BACH: The Magnificat in D Major, N. Y. Philharmonic, Leonard Bernstein and soloists with the Schola Cantorum —Columbia Stereo MS 6375.

A sort of pocket-size version of the "B Minor Mass," the "Magnificat" features brief arias and choruses of great beauty. Among the excellent solo voices are soprano Lee Venora and the striking timbre of counter-tenor Russell Oberlin.

LOVE, LILT, LAUGHTER. Jean Redpath—Elektra EKL-224.

A beautiful voice in a concert of Scottish folk songs. But wae's me for I can nae understand the lass . . . Have to use the enclosed lyrics and translation booklet, but guess that's what it's for anyway.

THE UNFORGETTABLE GUITAR OF HANK GARLAND—Columbia Stereo CS 8713.

His first Columbia lp. "Jazz Winds," was fascinating and called for another effort from guitarist Garland. However, the monotony of sound on this second release (despite talented vibist Gary Burton) causes Garland's guitar to be extremely forgettable.

SONNY STITT & THE TOP BRASS — Arranged and conducted by Todd Dameron and Jimmy Mundy—Atlantic Stereo 1295.

The distinctive Stitt alto sound is here pitted against a nonet containing trombones, trumpets and French horn for a new view of his persuasive work. The hard-riding blues are here, as are the introspective ballads. A swinging session.

SCHUBERT Moments Musicaux Opus 94; Three Pieces Opus Posthumous, Alfred Brendel, piano — Vox PL 12.140.

The six short lyrical piano pieces of Opus 94 show the composer's melodic and harmonic imagination at fullest bloom and set the stage for the deluge of similar compositions later in the Romantic Period. The three pieces on the second half of this lp have been referred to as "posthumous Impromptus," a clue to their content.

SHOSTAKOVICH: Quartet No. 4 and Quartet No. 8; Borodin String Quartet—Mercury Stereo SR 90309.

Another of the "First Time Ever" Mercury lp's recorded in the Soviet Union by their own staff and equipment. A rare entry from this label in the chamber music field, and amazingly exciting and almost mesmerizing works. This is the second stereo version of the Quartet No. 4, with better sound; the first recording of the No. 8.

'How Can I Get Mustard Out of My Husband's Suit?'

Hot dogs and mustard have become a year-around habit at sports events and at home, and there is nothing that squirts quite so deliciously as a generous supply of mustard from a squeezed roll. Husbands are especially adept at this.

The best way to get the mustard stain out is to get the suit to your drycleaner at once. This is what he is up against. First, mustard is one of the most difficult stains to remove. It is a combination of salt, spices, oil, vinegar, tannin, tumeric and possibly oxidized oil. The National Institute of Drycleaning's stain specialists say it requires fourteen different spot-removal steps to remove that little mustard stain.

You can see that proper cleaning of this type is beyond the skill and equipment of the average housewife. You may be above average in skill, but there is always the risk of using some spotting agent that may set the stain. Then even an expert cannot remove it. Tell him what it is and let him go to work. It's the safest and least expensive method.

The Boardwalk Now Serves Suburbanites

Old Western Standby Goes Sophisticated

Many modern suburbanites are faced with some mighty old-fashioned problems, such as — "Look, Ma, no sidewalks."

Granted, sidewalks aren't an essential of life. But they are rather nice to have, particularly on wet days when company's coming.

THERE ARE various ways to compensate for the loss of sidewalk:

You can pave the front yard.

You can widen the driveway to accommodate guests' cars and hook it up to an entrance walk.

Or you can do what some smart suburbanites have done and build a sophisticated boardwalk to double as sidewalk and exterior entrance area. This works especially well if the front yard is shallow and the house is built on a down slope from the street.

The boardwalk is actually a wood deck adjacent and parallel to the street and at the same level. It could extend only part of the yard's length, or stretch entirely across it, from property line to property line. The effect can be highly intriguing and serviceability is tops.

THE DECK boardwalk can be built of stout Douglas fir two-by-fours laid flat and with an eighth-inch spacing between boards to permit proper rain water runoff. This also allows a speedy cleaning job with the garden hose.

For absolute minimum upkeep, install the fir two-by-four decking without finish and let it weather naturally. In about a year's time, the boardwalk will acquire the soft patina and color of fine pewter. From there on, it becomes more beautiful with passing time.

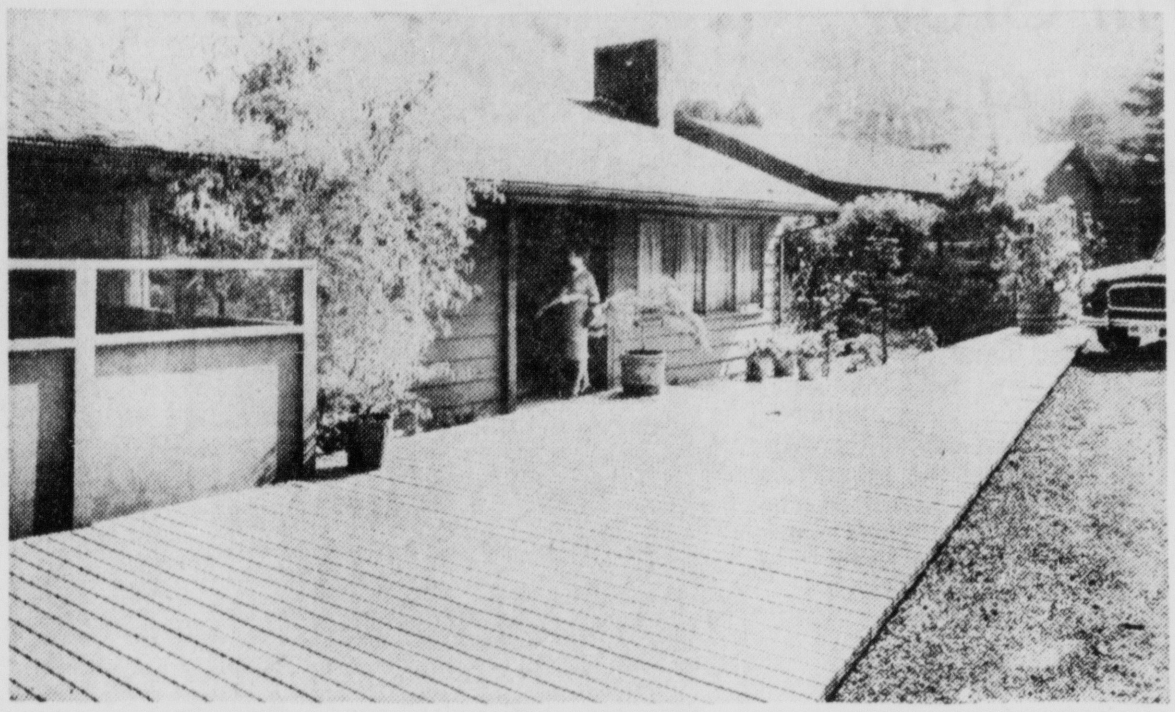
For the most interesting effect, choose something other than an ordinary rectangular shape for the boardwalk. It could be a triangle, broad at one end and narrowing to a stiletto tip at the other. For the triangle, lay deck boards at right angles to the street.

Other possible shapes are the trapezium, rhomboid and circle—or several circles connected with narrow walks.

CHOICE OF shape will depend on the depth of the yard. If shallow, the triangle works best. Other geometric figures work well for deeper front yards.

If the house is built much above or below street grade, the boardwalk can then be connected to a system of steps and platforms also built of two-by-four fir. This could culminate in one broad platform acting as the front porch.

One word of caution: The street-level boardwalk will rest, at least in part, close to the ground, and Douglas fir framing members and decking should be pressure treated with preservative for long, trouble-free life. Paint-on or dip preservative treatments are generally not considered adequate, and pressure-treated fir is readily available.



SOPHISTICATED cousin of the boardwalk of the Wild West town is this Douglas fir deck which provides a practical sidewalk and a fascinating entrance for the suburban home The house set below grade profits from the interesting lines of the deck. Fir two-by-fours have weathered to a silver grey. (West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. photo)

A SHADE-LOVER

Coleus Will Grow Outside The House

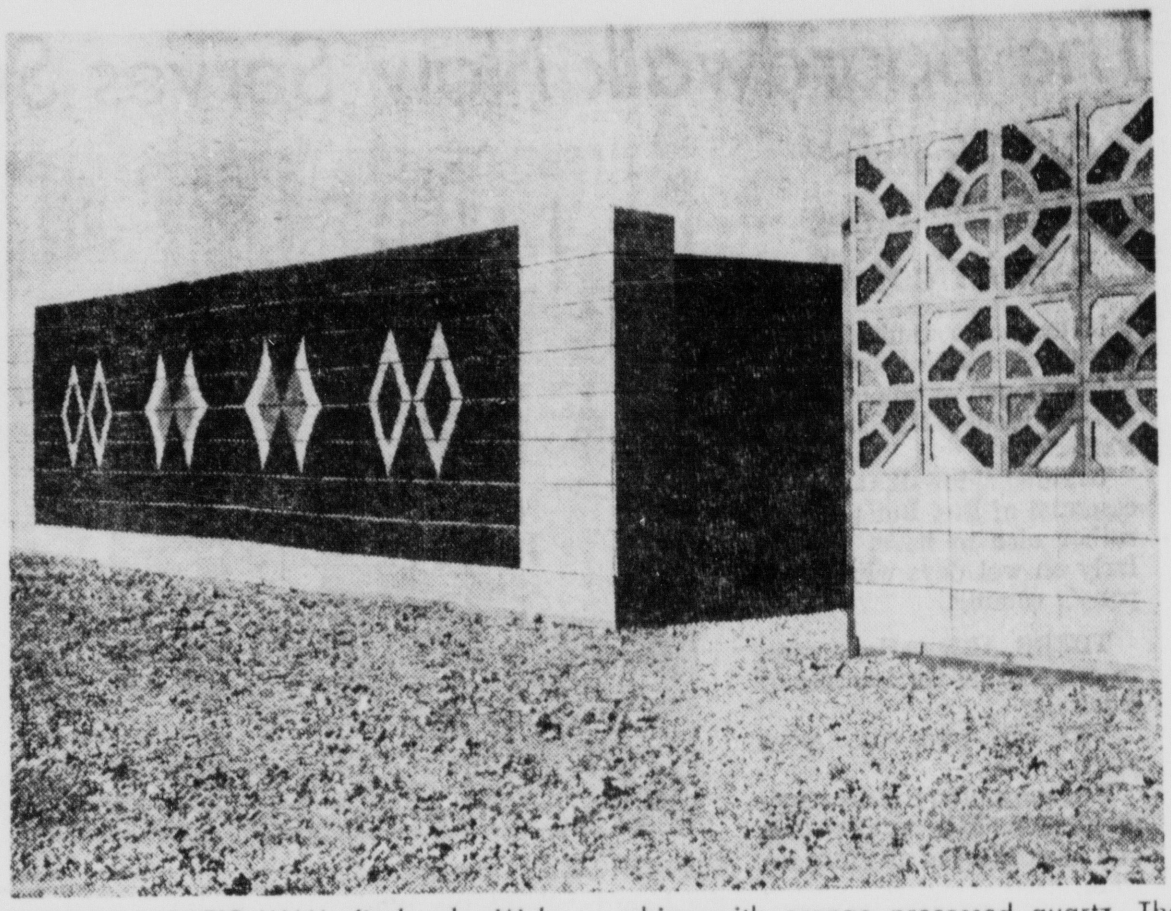
Gardeners are forever seeking flowers that will bloom in partial shade, and there are all too few that will perform well under such conditions.

There is an alternative, however, that gives bright and varied foliage which is every bit as attractive as most flower blooms, and that is the easily grown coleus.

You may have considered coleus only as a house plant, but it also does wonderfully well outdoors in the summer if it is in a partially shaded location. The best kind of shade is that dappled sort that trees give, not the dense shade of a building during part of the day, alternating with full sun the other part.

Coleus may be started from cuttings of your house plants, or very readily from seed.



PART OF A PATIO WALL display by Web-A-Stone Inc. on the grounds of its McNear's Point factory, these designs show the colorful creative effects which can be attained with mosaic blocks. In wall at left, the two end pieces are of imported Travertine marble three-eighth-inch venier which has been bonded to the face of standard-size concrete blocks. Center background blocks are faced with Lake County dark brown volcanic rock. Two of the designs are done in gold marble chips, two in white marble chips with orange processed quartz. The wall at right consists of screen wall blocks in matching decor. Colors are gold, orange and brown. Because of heavy truck traffic during week days, the company recommends that the public visit the display, which also includes other products for patios, drives, home dividers and swimming pool walls, on Sundays. The plant is located at the Baysalt Quarry on McNear's Point, San Rafael. (Independent-Journal photo)

Marin Gardening In May

May is not too late to plant Chrysanthemums. Nurserymen still have young, rooted cuttings in plant bands or pots and these can be started on their way toward fall bloom. One of the easiest and most satisfactory ways to grow new chrysanthemums, however, is to buy blooming plants from your nursery and enjoy their bloom until it fades. When this happens, simply set the plants out in the garden, cut them back to about six inches and they will form new tops which can be grown for a second bloom in fall.

One of the most effective ways to conserve water in California is to mulch. Steer manure and peat moss are both satisfactory mulches and should be spread in good heavy layers around such drought-susceptible shrubs as camellias, fuchsias, azaleas and rhododendrons. Two inches is a minimum mulch and three inches is none too much. Be sure the mulching material is moist when you spread it around a shrub and be sure to keep it moist as the need arises. You can tell readily enough when the time comes to water.

When you shop for bedding plants for summer bloom, don't overlook the new All-America zinnia Thumbelina. This little charmer is a true miniature, growing only six inches high. The flowers come in mixed colors only and are up to one and one half inches across. Thumbelina starts to bloom early, when the plants are only three inches high, and they keep blooming until frost cuts them short in fall.

Young citrus trees benefit more from adequate water than from any other single factor. There is a right and wrong way to water them, however, and gardeners should follow advice of the California Assn. of Nurserymen. Make a basin for irrigation around the trees, but leave a ridge of soil right around the trunk and out a few inches from it. This will prevent over saturation at the crown, a condition which can cause trouble if allowed. Occasional feeding with a high nitrogen fertilizer will also push young citrus trees to their maximum performance.

"REALTY VIEWS"

As I was walking past Paul Suppley's shop, Paul waved me in. "I'm out of a job," he said, "can you find a new one for me?"

"What do you mean?" I asked, knowing that he owned his own small business.

"Do you remember the house you sold me a couple of years ago?" he asked. "It was under construction. I bought it because I enjoy completing a home. Well now, the cabinets are finished, the painting is done and the lawn is in. I've added a covered patio, metal window awnings, and an ornamental fence. There's nothing left to do."

William A. Lewis

Paul continued. "Someone would enjoy having a nice home like that—one that's all fixed up with nothing to add. So I'd like to sell our home and buy another smaller one under construction. Completing a home is a hobby with me. Besides, I can make a little extra money that way."

A few weeks later, a traveling salesman dropped by our office. "I'm gone a lot," he said. "And when I am home, I like to spend my time enjoying my family rather than working around the house. Is it asking too much to try to find a house where everything that might need attention has been done?"

You know the answer! And two more families were satisfied with our real estate service.

If you want to sell your home for any reason—including finding another "job"—call on us.

GARDENER'S PAGES

For Summer Color, Try These Shrubs

Gardeners the world over have certain shrubs they rely on more than others.

Not that they are any more spectacular in bloom, but simply because they have proved themselves time and again, these shrubs have become standbys for garden display.

IN MARIN, we have many standbys, but even here, there are a few which warrant special attention. Right now let's consider some that help to carry the summer garden:

Abelia is one of these—not a shrub which you'll see at garden shows, but one which you see a great deal of in our gardens.

The commonest form is Glossy Abelia, a shiny-leaved shrub of medium height which bears masses of fragrant white, tubular flowers through summer. It seems indifferent to summer drought, and always looks fresh and green no matter what care you give it.

Another variety found in Marin is the Pink Abelia, more compact in growth, but with the same shiny character to its foliage.

GARDENERS have a tendency to shear abelias and they lend themselves well to such handling—especially as flowering hedges. We suggest using them less formally, however, pruning by selection of branches rather than shearing. Such practice will convert the abelia into a more open and graceful shrub, resulting in more bloom at the same time because the older spent wood is removed, leaving the fresh new blooming branches.

A second standby for summer display is the hydrangea, a shrub of truly spectacular bloom.

The large leaves are not in the least unattractive and actually make their own contribution to the garden during spring and summer. But the great beauty of this deciduous shrub lies in the huge terminal blossoms which crown each woody stem.

Flower color ranges from white through shades of rose and pink to a rich blue. The latter requires iron in the soil to maintain its blue color, but this is easily supplied by several compounds available through nurseries.

HYDRANGEAS make wonderful table displays when cut and the flowers can be hung upside down in a garage or basement to dry, after which they can be used for months in dry arrangements.

Give the shrubs a good rich soil and mulch around them with steer manure or peat at the beginning of summer. Water them well and this rapid grower will give an all summer colorful display.

The escallonias are a third family of shrubs which can be heavily relied on for summer color. They range in size from the semi-compact Red Escallonia up to the tall-growing Pink Escallonia.

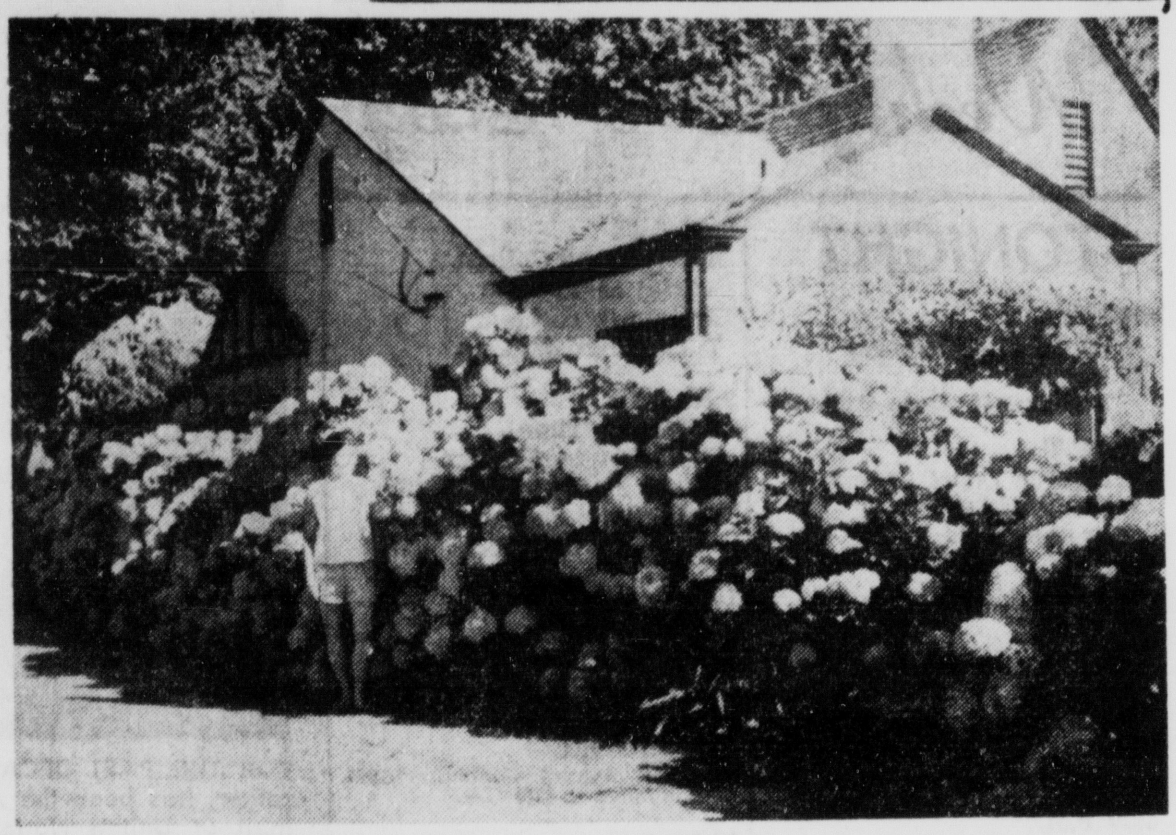
In between are numerous named varieties such as the red C.F. Ball and pink Apple Blossom, which give the gardener a wide variety of choice including the paper-white ones.

EVEN THE smallest escallonias make good size shrubs, and the larger ones can be easily trained into small trees. They bear their flowers in terminal clusters and should be given an annual pruning in winter so that plenty of new wood will develop to carry more bloom the following year.

Escallonias have considerable appeal for lazy gardeners since they are practically indestructible and withstand not only drought, but the onslaught of wind. The foliage is always green and glossy and the flower clusters come each year whether you prune the shrubs or not. An all-around good shrub, escallonia makes a fine informal hedge or screen.

The fourth most useful shrub for our summer gardens is the Oleander. Here along the coast it may fail to produce the bloom it is capable of. Inland, when weather warms up, it breaks out in a coat of delicate blooms, ranging in color from white to red, with rose and pink and chamois colors in between.

THE OLEANDER is a true sun lover and should be given its full quota of it. There's nothing to match the robust display it produces when weather conditions are right, and many an incoming tourist is stopped in his tracks by the sight of a shrub 10 feet high and 10 feet wide simply smothered with color.



FOR A DAZZLING DISPLAY of summer color, it is hard to beat hydrangea. Generally, they will be kept pruned more closely than this to prevent legginess. But they have been purposely permitted to grow tall so as to serve as a screen between the house and the nearby sidewalk and street. (Independent-Journal photo)

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Among the bedding plants you can set out for quick color are dwarf dahlias, marigolds, zinnias, asters, petunias, stocks, snapdragons and ageratum.

✓ Roses are now coming into bloom, or soon will be. There's no better time to select the varieties you want. They are available in cans at your nursery.

✓ Mulch around camellias with two or three inches of leaf mold or peat moss. In warm areas it will keep the ground cool and moist.

✓ Pinch back new chrysanthemum plants when you set them out and continue pinching the new growth until July. This makes bushy, sturdy plants. Fertilize regularly.

A MYSTERY TO its owner and grower, Mrs. Russell Bjorn, is this giant Iris growing in the front yard of the Bjorn home at 47 Curtis Avenue, San Rafael. Mrs. Bjorn says she received the seed from Japan along with her regular order of Chrysanthemum seed. To her surprise, the Iris has grown to a good five feet tall with blooms three times the size of the normal Iris flower. At first a deep black, the flowers have turned to purple and then to a pale pink with lavender veins. Leaves have a leathery texture. Mrs. Bjorn says she has been unable to find a gardening authority who could furnish her with additional information on her mystery plant. (Independent-Journal photo)

Marin County BOATING SECTION

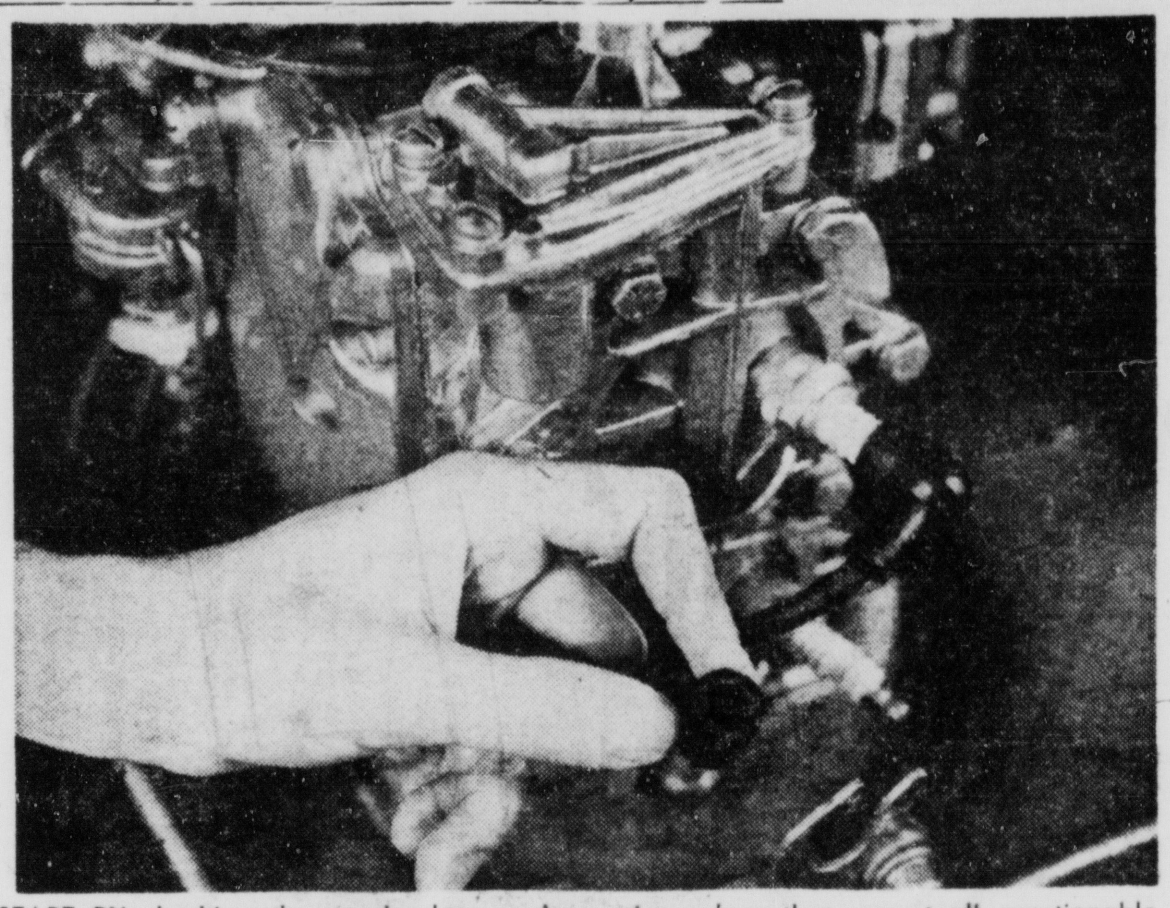
Marin Magazine

Independent-Journal • San Rafael, California, Saturday, May 4, 1963



START BY checking the spark plugs and the rubber insulated caps. It is best to replace plugs that are at all questionable. Rubber caps should be inspected for deterioration.

Spring Is Boating Time—And Also Time To Tune The Motor

It doesn't require an awful lot of mechanical aptitude to get your outboard motor in tiptop shape for the boating season.

With a few basic tools, an average knowledge of what makes the motor work and an hour or so of spare time, just about anyone can do it.

To help you here's a simple step-by-step procedure.

Start by removing the spark plugs. Spark plugs may seem to be rather insignificant parts of the engine, yet they are vitally important. Rough idling, hard starting and excessive fuel consumption can all result from defective plugs.

INSPECT THE plugs carefully for burning, fouling or cracking. If they appear to be in good shape they can be cleaned, gapped and reused. If they show signs of deterioration, don't take chances, replace them with the type recommended by the manufacturer. Also check the rubber spark plug caps for deterioration.

The ignition system—breaker points, condenser, coil and wiring—can be quickly tested with a spark checker. Spark checkers are inexpensive to buy or, if you prefer, easy to make.

Next check step is the fuel system. If you ran the carburetor dry last fall, you shouldn't have any problems. It's a good idea, however, to remove and clean the fuel filter bowl. Wash the bowl and the filter with neutral spirits or clean gasoline. If the filter is badly clogged with varnish or other deposits, it should be replaced. Check all fuel lines for leaks or cracks.

See that all parts are properly lubricated. Using a grease gun fill the fittings with the proper lubricant. Your owner's manual will list other points that require attention. Lubrication is important. Don't overlook it.

THE LOWER unit housing the propeller shaft and gears should be drained and refilled with the lubricant recommended by the manufacturer. If water or metal chips are detected in the drain oil, have a qualified marine dealer check the motor. If you changed the lubricant last fall before the motor was put into storage, there is no need to do it again now. It should be checked, however, to be sure it is full.

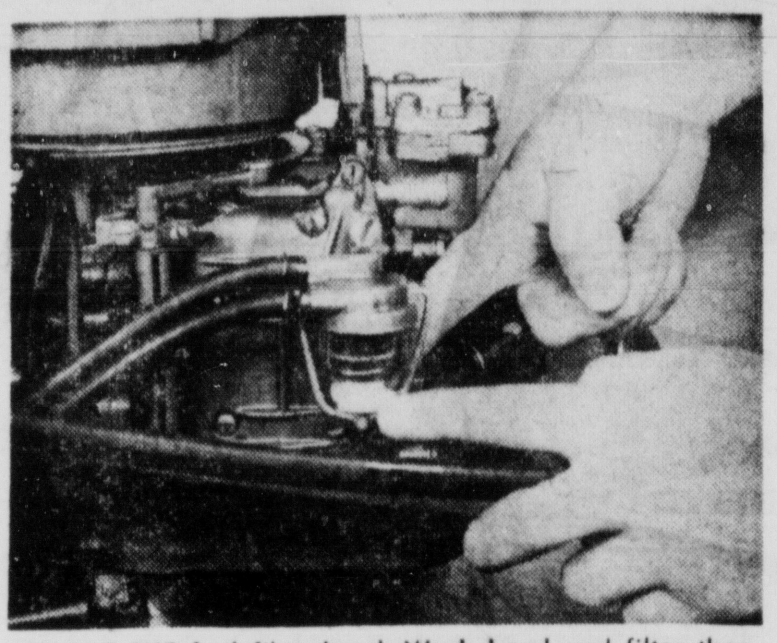
Don't make the mistake of using fuel left in the tank over the winter months. It has probably lost its ability to ignite properly and using it can cause hard starting, rough running and poor performance. Throw it out.

Especially on high horsepower motors, propellers are extremely important in getting top performance. Mismatched or damaged propellers are the most common cause of problems related to speed and power losses, short spark plug life, excessive fuel consumption and vibration.

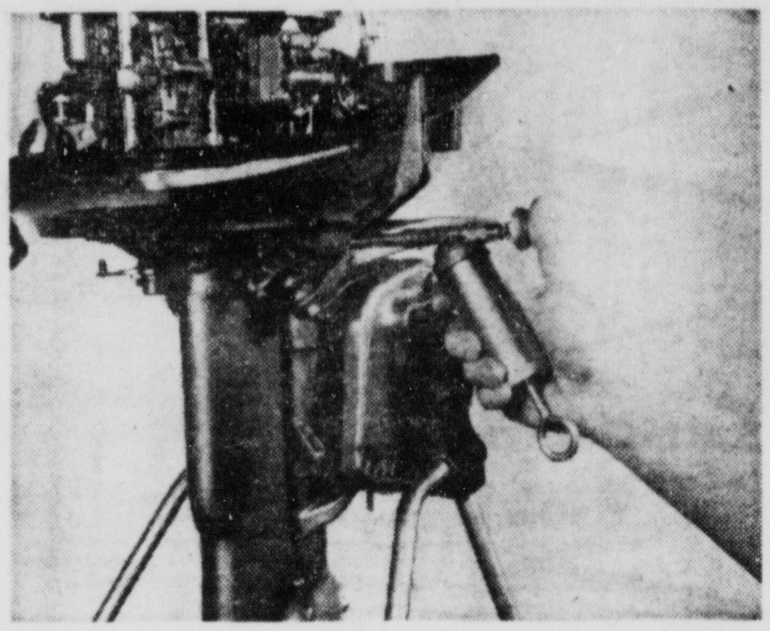
A propeller that is nicked or bent should be repaired, repitched or replaced. If your motor does not deliver the kind of performance that can reasonably be expected, have a marine dealer check the propeller. It may not be suited to your boat and the load you normally carry. While you're checking the propeller, lubricate its shaft and inspect the drive pin for wear.

WHEN YOU have completed these steps, experts recommend giving the motor a thorough visual inspection. Look for loose screws and trim and damaged parts. When everything is shipshape, connect the spark plug wires and put on the engine cover. Wipe down exterior metal parts with a lightly oiled cloth.

Apply a coat of protective wax to fiberglass engine covers.

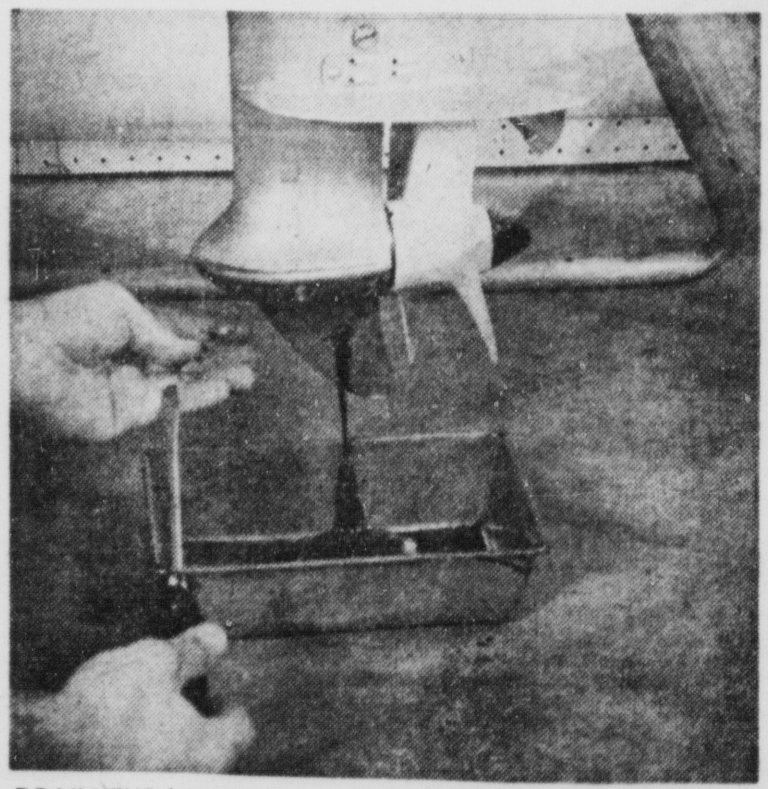


REMOVE THE fuel filter bowl. Wash bowl and filter thoroughly with neutral spirits or clean gasoline. Check all fuel lines for leaks or cracks.



PROPER lubrication is extremely important. Use a grease gun to fill the fittings. Check your owner's manual for other points that need lubricating.

THE EXTERIOR of your outboard motor should also get some attention. Wipe down the metal parts with a lightly oiled cloth and apply wax to fiber glass covers.



DRAIN THE lower gear case and refill it with the type of lubricant recommended by the manufacturer. Even if you did this last fall, check it now to be sure it is still full. Remember, if a major repair job is involved, or if you haven't the time, skilled men stand ready to do the work for you at Marin's many fine boatyards.

A Variety Of Craft To Sail

Ranging From Ocean Racers To Dinghies

From sailing surfboards to ocean racers, the 1963 fleet of windjammers offers sailing fans a broad and varied selection of sailing craft.

All this should please the sailing fans, who have spurred a quickening interest in power-less boating in recent years.

Though they still consider themselves a breed apart, sailing buffs will find that the line between sail and power isn't drawn quite so finely as it was in 1827, when the Royal Yacht Squadron tossed out one of its members for appying steam power to his craft.

The bigger boats, for the most part, are sailing auxiliaries which offer the customer the choice of inboard power or a well or side-bracket for outboard power. Even many small catboats and sailing dinghies in the 1963 fleet have strengthened transoms for a small-power outboard.

Many of the craft are one-design racers, built to exacting specifications to insure that races are a match of sailing skill. Although major changes are forbidden in these boats, enthusiasts will note many minor innovations aimed at improving creature comfort for the crew, improvements such as increased storage space, better cabin and deck arrangements and more live-aboard features.

Boating Is On Upswing

It's $2.5 Billion Dollar Industry In The U.S. Now

Last year about one out of every five Americans went boating.

That's a pretty sizable percentage when you stop to think about it.

The swing to recreational boating didn't really start until after World War II and it's now a better than 2½ billion dollars per year industry. What's behind it all?

The Evinrude Motors people set out to find the answers and came up with some interesting facts.

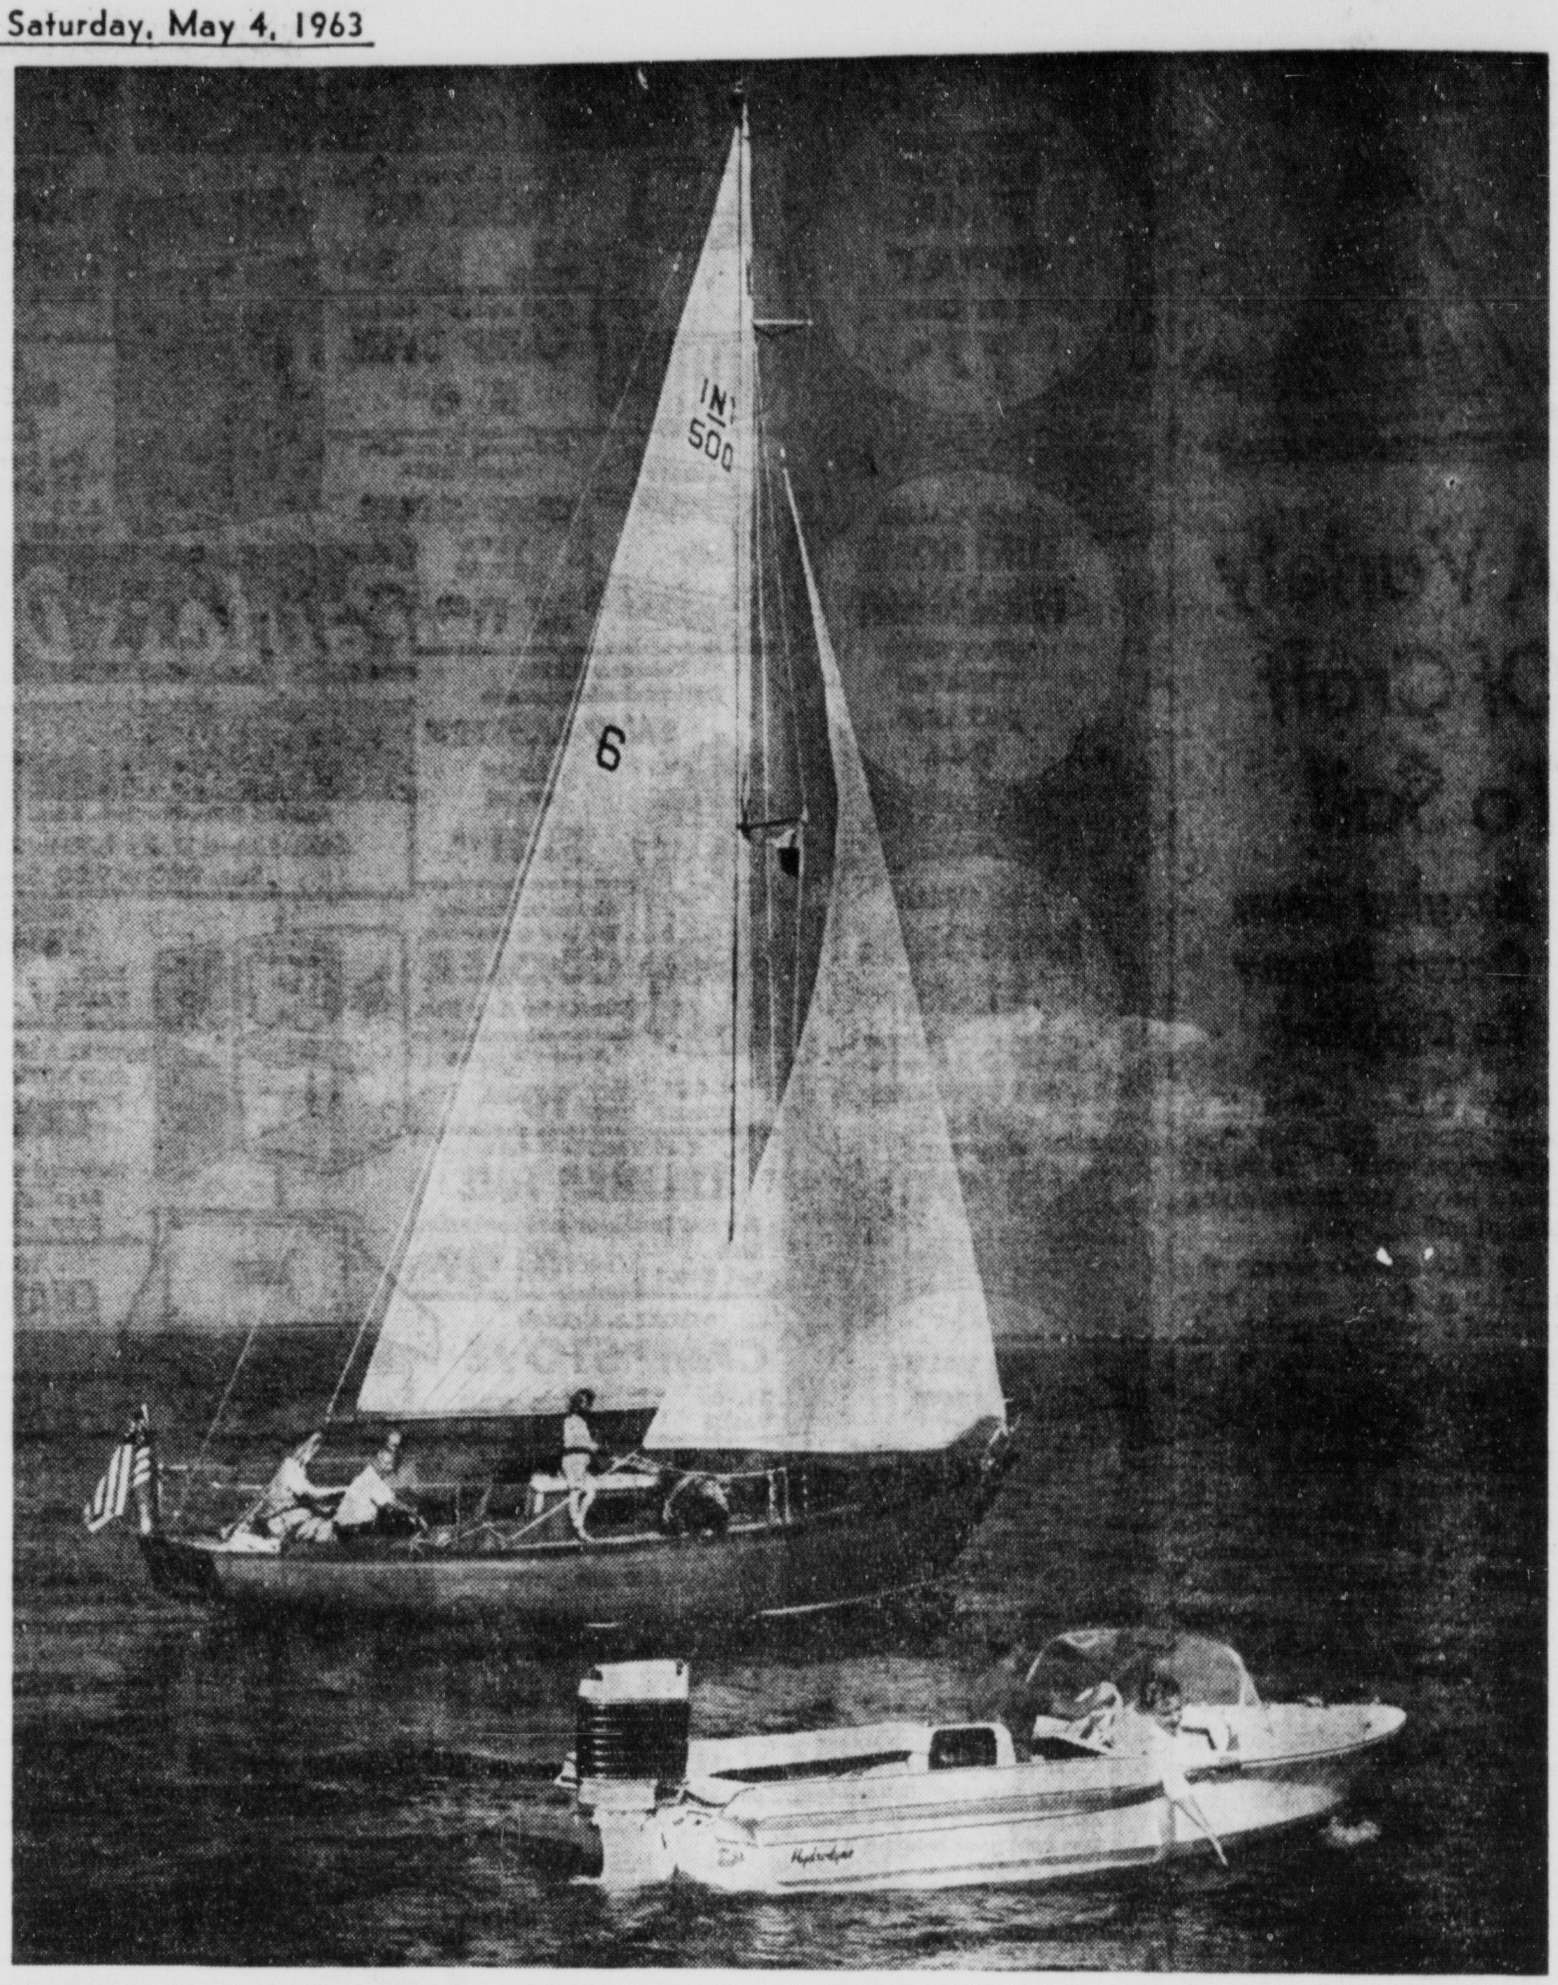
They were interested, of course, in why people buy outboard motors. Here's what the study revealed.

It's almost a toss-up when the two most mentioned reasons—fishing and all-purpose boating—are compared. Next came water skiing. Over 20 per cent of the motors sold are bought specifically for skiing use.

What type of boat do beginning boatmen usually buy?

Most popular is a runabout in the 14-15 foot category. It's usually powered with an outboard of from 18 to 40 hp. Such a combination makes an ideal all-purpose rig. It can be used for fishing, water skiing, skin diving, cruising in sheltered waters or for any number of other water activities. Prices for a rig of this type will vary considerably but start at les sthan $1,000.

If you've been toying with the idea of getting into boating, go ahead, give it a try.



SPRING IS the pleasure season for boatsmen — whether they prefer craft powered by engines or sail. And their favorite recreation of cruising in the sun will continue through the summer—and, in climatically-favored Marin—right on through the fall and into the winter.

Choose Rig With Care

If you've ever attended a boat show, you might have felt somewhat like a youngster in a candy store. Everything looks so good that it's hard to decide just what is best. Actually, choosing the right boating rig is not as big a problem as you may think but it does require some serious thought.

Before trying to decide on a particular rig, we suggest that you ask yourself two questions: For what use is the rig intended and on what type of water will it be used?

Once you've decided on these two points, your pleasant task of selecting the boat that will best suit your needs will become quite simple.

OUTBOARD boats are made in many styles. There are runabouts, utility models, cruisers, prams and pontoon boats, to name a few. You'll have to decide which is most suitable for your particular need. Another of your questions will probably concern the various materials used in building boats. Fiberglass, wood and aluminum are the most common and all have certain advantages. Which is best? It's all a matter of personal preference and, as long as you buy a reputable brand, you won't go wrong.

One of the most important steps in buying a rig is to make sure the boat and outboard motor are properly matched. In other words, the motor is the right size for the boat. Most boat manufacturers make recommendations as to maximum horsepower but the best way to be sure you are getting a properly matched rig is to consult a qualified marine dealer.

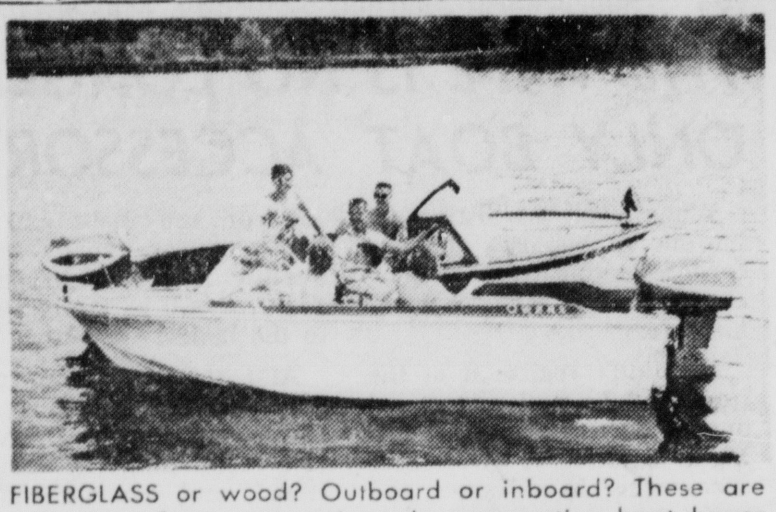
CHOOSE AN outboard motor as carefully as you do a boat. Features that make the engine easier to operate as well as those built in to keep it running longer are important.

Most of the larger outboards sold today are equipped with electric starters. With the exception of fishing boats, most outboard powered boats are fitted with remote steering, shifting and throttle controls. Two lever remote controls are the most common; however, single lever controls are also available this year, one manufacturer has introduced a new fingertouch push-button method of shifting gears.

A trailer will increase your boating fun for it will enable you to go more places and at the same time see and do more things.

OUTBOARD trailers are available in a variety of styles and sizes and are rated according to their carrying capacity. The combined weight of the boat, motor, fuel and gear should be considered when shopping for a trailer.

Maybe a certain rig caught your eye at a boat show. If so, that's the one you should look at first. If you do not have any particular model in mind, catalogs and boating magazines, or better yet a visit to your local marine dealer's showroom, will give you many ideas.



FIBERGLASS or wood? Outboard or inboard? These are only two of many questions the prospective boat buyer must answer. Design, materials, etc., are largely matter of personal preference. Important, though, is that motor and boat be properly matched.

THE WIFE IS NO LONGER ONLY BOAT ACCESSORY

When Noah was fitting out for one of history's first recorded boating trips, he took along—among other items—his wife.

He didn't realize it at the time, but he had introduced one of boating's most enduring accessories. A lot of other accessories have come and gone since then, but the wife remains.

Nowadays it not only takes a lot of accessories to satisfy the skipper, it also takes accessories to keep the first accessory happy. The manufacturers of boating accessories would be the last people to lose sight of these facts, and each year they vie for attention with an amazing variety of products to tempt the skipper and his first mate.

The ideal boating accessory, of course, is one which appeals to the instincts of both the gadget-prone male and his economy and convenience-loving wife.

ACCESSORIES for 1963 are definitely headed toward that ideal. The many gadgets provide the man with enjoyment in their operation and the woman with enjoyment in the results they produce. The do-it-yourself projects offered will give the skipper his fun while abuilding, and the first mate hers when in use.

Electronic equipment is just one of the areas in which this dual appeal is becoming apparent. Thanks largely to transistors and other technical advances, electronic equipment is becoming less expensive and more compact. By their nature these devices will intrigue the men; and the lower prices, space-saving qualities and the added safety features will certainly appeal to the ladies.

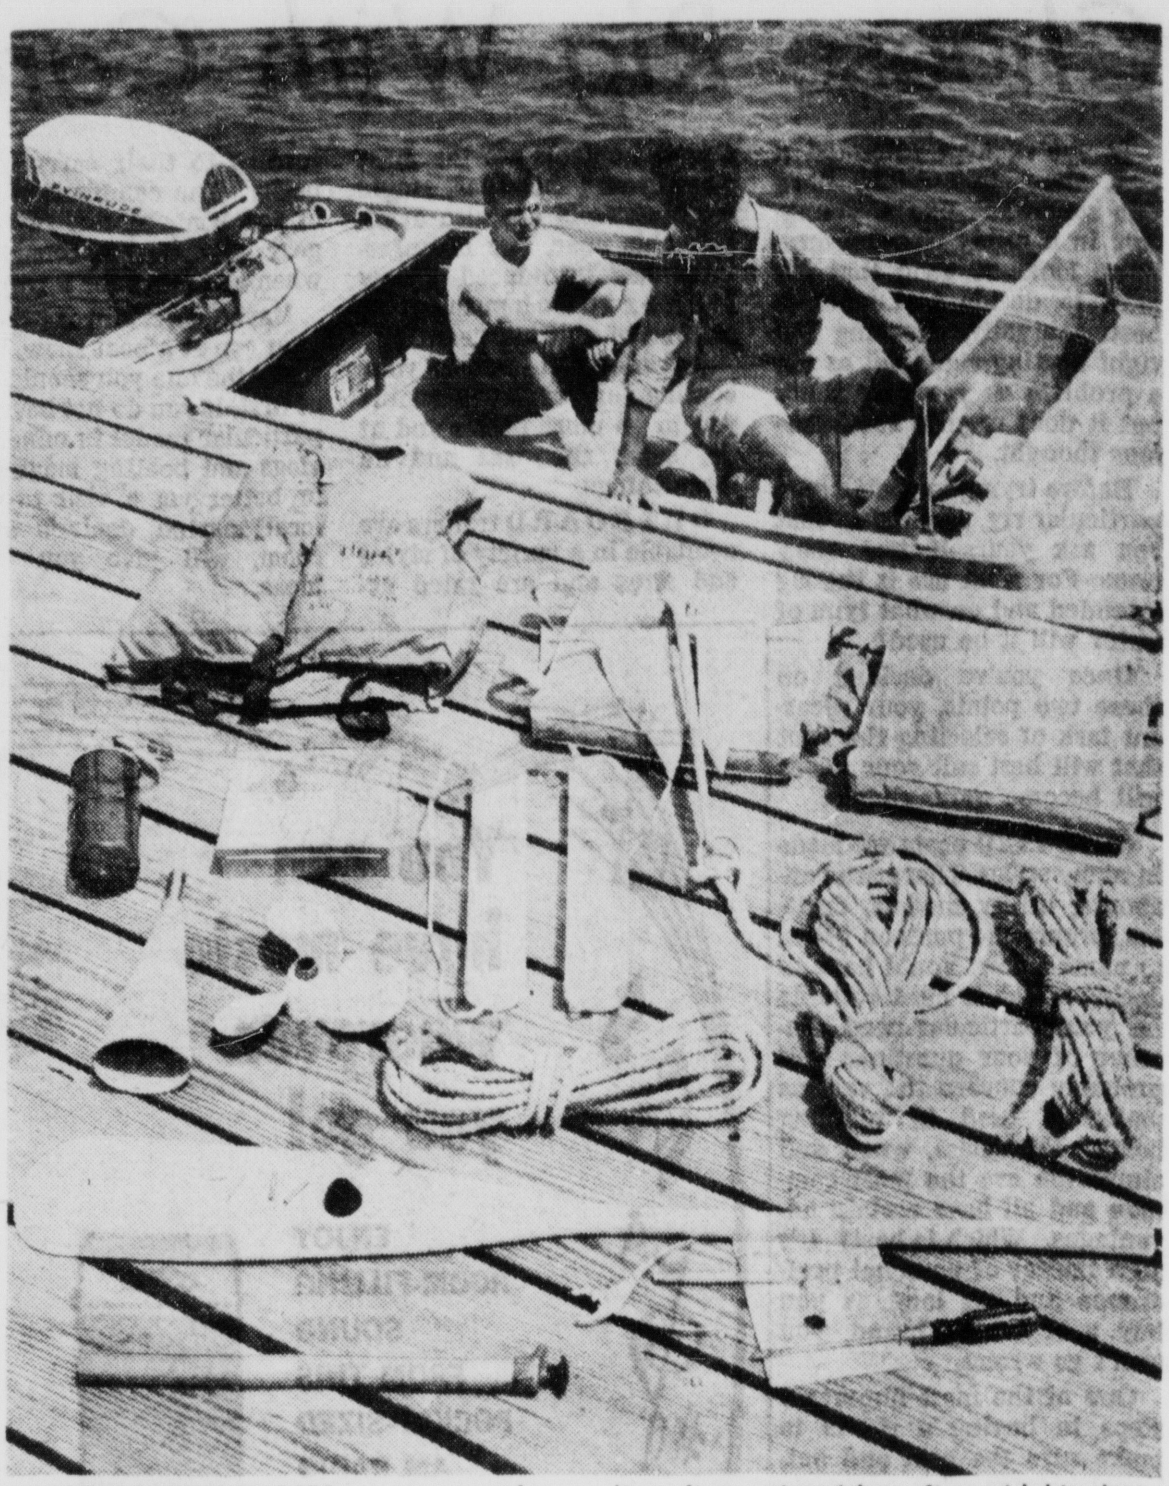
And there is more good news to come. One manufacturer predicts that a new device combining all navigational and communications equipment into a single, compact unit is only a few years off.

HERE ARE some examples of the new 1963 accessories:

An automatic anchor hoist from City Engineering Co., Inc., Indianapolis, Ind., lies flat on the deck when not in use. Once the switch is turned on, the anchor arm raises over the bow, the anchor is lowered, and the cable continues to play out until the desired length is reached. In another switch position, the cable reels in until the boat is pulled to the anchor; the anchor is reeled in and returned to its horizontal position on the deck.

Vinyl boat carpeting from U.S. Rubber Co., Chicago, Ill., is wear-resistant, easy to install and affords sure footing inside the boat cabin. Product was tested for three years before being put on the market, the manufacturer says.

The Navigator 410 radio direction finder from Bendix Marine, North Hollywood, is smaller than a cigar box, weighs 2½ pounds and costs less than $100. With power supplied by four flashlight batteries, the 410 features consolan-beacon and marine bands and can double as a standard radio broadcast receiver.



CHOOSING THE PROPER equipment for both fun and safety will make your boating more enjoyable. The equipment shown here includes Coast Guard-approved life jackets and cushions, anchor with plenty of line, fire extinguisher, first aid kit, horn, extra propeller, fenders and extra line. On the paddle are extra cotter pins, drive pins and propeller nut. At the bottom is a bilge pump, basic tools and an outboard owner's manual.

Tips On Buying Used Motors

With more veteran boatmen moving up to larger boats and motors, plenty of good used boating equipment is now available.

Buying your pre-owned equipment from a reputable dealer is best, however, since you'll know it's been carefully checked over to give you many hours of carefree enjoyment on the water.

Here are a few tips to keep in mind when selecting a used outboard motor to measure its relative worth:

Compression — Grasp the starter rope and pull the motor over, checking the "pull" and "bounce" as the motor turns over.

Crankcase bushing—Check for excessive dirty oil accumulations on the armature plate; an indication of faulty upper bearing asembly.

Cylinder condition — Remove sparkplugs and by using a pencil flashlight peer into the cylinder head, checking for excessive carbon accumulation which will ultimately affect the performance of the motor.

Propeller bushing — Exert up-and-down pressure on the propeller shaft and look for sepage around the propeller shaft seal . . . excessive up-and-down play or seepage indicates a worn bushing.

While the motor is idling, check wiring for cracks in insulation, abrasions and breaks; fuel connections and gasoline line for leaks; and the smooth running of the engine.

If you have the opportunity, take the motor out for a run before you buy it to check acceleration, idling and general performance.

Trailorboat Of San Rafael Takes Pride In Its New Jet

Trailorboat Engineering Co. of San Rafael has special reason to be proud of its new jet boat.

The Trailorboat, with jet by Jacuzzi, is being hailed as a "first" in the industry—the first such boat to be designed with complete compatibility for jet propulsion.

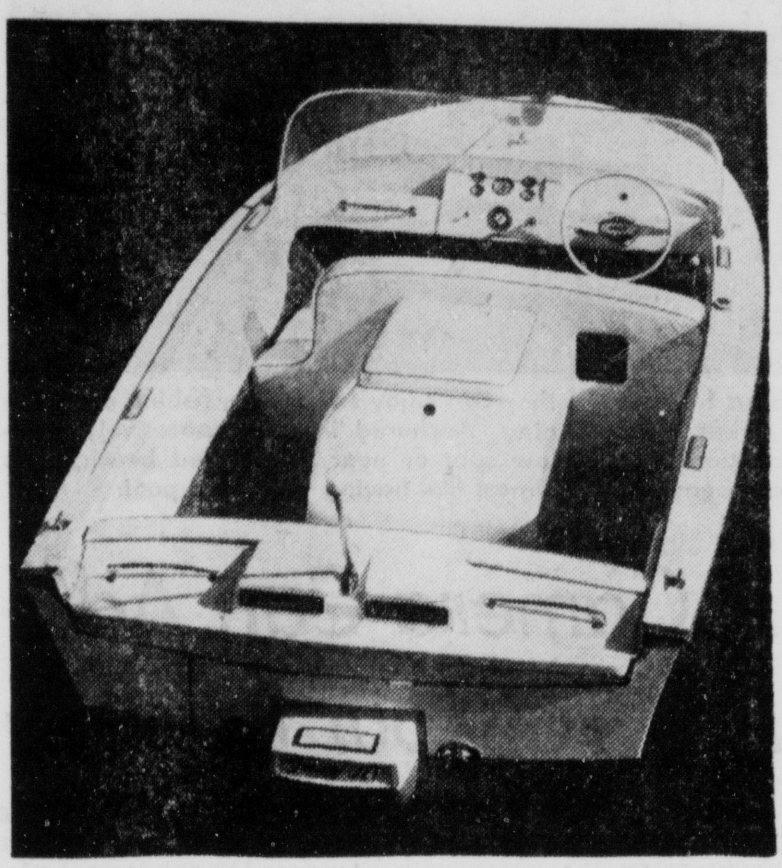
The hull has a unique bottom with an ingenious planing section so that the craft will not drift or "fishtail." A safety-action rudder coupled wth steering vane provides lateral stability and control at all speeds.

"Lively action and fun," says Trailorboat of the jet. "Instant thrust for ski take-offs; safe in tight turns: maintains speed in ankle deep water."

Trailorboat also boosts the jet as one of the safest boats afloat, especially since it has no propeller or stationary rudder to pose a hazard to swimmers or skiers.

The boat has seating for six.

The Jacuzzi Marine Jet engine offers a number of advantages including a double row ball thrust bearing that is removable while the unit is in the boat, twin seals easily accessible for replacement, easy lubrication, stainless steel impeller shaft, streamlined aluminum turbine bowl, fast actuating shifting mechanism, foul-free reversing gate, one piece grill with square flange, etc.



TRAILORBOAT Engineering Co. of San Rafael is claiming a first with this fine craft—"the first in the industry to design a boat completely compatible with jet propulsion." Driven by a Jacuzzi Marine Jet unit, it is hailed as more maneuverable, safer, more economical and offering extra power. It seats six, has instant thrust for water skiing take-offs, maintains speed in ankle deep water and is designed for lateral stability and control at all speeds.

Even Houseboats Now Stress Speed

There's no place like home—unless, of course, it's one of the new convenience-packed houseboats.

The main appeal of these floating pleasure domes continues to be spaciousness, but several firms this year are putting emphasis on another factor—speed.

Houseboats were once associated with slow and easy living, but the modern mania for going faster and faster has now spread to houseboating. For example, one firm says its prize-winning design houseboats can skim along at water-skiing speed—35 miles per hour.

Shop For Your Boat The Same As A Car

Buying a boat is as simple as buying a car and should be approached in the same manner.

As in buying a car, ask yourself two questions; for what use is it intended and how many people must it safely carry?

With these questions in mind, shop several marine dealers in your area to see what each has to offer. Price is certainly important, but don't sacrifice quality and features to save a few dollars.

Boating rigs are usually purchased through time payment plans and most dealers will help you by making the arrangements for financing.

A BOATLOAD OF fun is the bonus harvest reaped by the family which takes their boat along with them on vacation. Far from the crowded and littered beaches, they can enjoy swimming, fishing and sunning. Anchored in a comparatively shallow spot or near a secluded beach, it is almost like having your own pool.

A Camera Can Add Fun To Your Boating

Boatmen can get added enjoyment by reliving their adventures on the water with still and motion pictures.

Johnson Motors photographer Dick Matt offers these tips to boatmen who plan to become camera bugs this season.

Cut down on exposures to compensate for the water which acts as a giant reflector. Either increase the shutter speed or cut down the lens openings one or two stops. Use a lens shade, too.

Protect film, cameras and other photo equipment from spray and heat. Keep them in a shaded spot in a waterproof bag or wrapped in oil skin.

Don't aim the camera into a stiff breeze. The spray is likely to coat the camera and hit the lens. To protect the lens, and at the same time dramatize the scene, use a filter over the lens.

You might not find photo counters at stores near the water. Carry all the film you need for your trip with you.

If you must shoot from the boat when it is moving, take a solid stance before taking pictures.

Everyone Can Afford A Boat

That venerable old cliche, "If you have to ask how much it costs, you can't afford it," attributed to one of the robber barons in palmier days early in the century, has to be rewritten it it's to have any meaning for today's boating market.

It should read:

"ASK HOW much it costs. You can afford it."

The truth is that boating has been growing in popularity faster than ice cream in the Sahara desert.

A quick look at the facts will prove that one of the major reasons for the continuing increase in boating's popularity is the success of the industry in marketing products that don't scare off the potential customers.

Consider that in 1951 there were only 3,710,000 recreational boats in use on the nation's waterways. By 1962, barely more than a decade later, the number had more than doubled, reaching a whopping 7,468,000, according to estimates based on the number of boats registered in 42 states and industry sales figures.

FOR LESS than the cost of a second car, the prospective boat owner will find that he can purchase a runabout, outboard motor and boat trailer, even if the prospect is thinking about a new compact. During 1962, for example, the average length of the outboard boat purchase was 14.9 feet. It was powered by a motor of 30.3 horsepower.

Complete with trailer, a rig of this type can be had for less than $1,700. But this is just the average.

The beginning boater will find he can spend just as much more or as much less than this amount as he chooses and still get on the water. Boats on display at the show range from light sailcraft selling for less than $200 to luxury inboard cruisers costing more than $1,000 a linear foot.

FIRM FOOTING is assured by a new non-skid plywood decking on the boat dock above. Skin Guard, a Simpson Timber Co. product, can also be used on boat deck and floors.

For any prospective buyer there are lots of choices, including fishing boats in the $200 to $400 range; outboard runabout from approximately $700; inboard speed boats for $2,000 and up, and outboard cruisers with live-aboard accommodations for under $3,000.

As an indication of outboard motor prices, here's a rundown on a few of the popular horsepower sizes: (FOB factory) 7½ horsepower, $249 to $260; 12 horsepower, $345 to $355; 25 horsepower, $445 to $557; 40 horsepower, $500 to $683; and, in the 60 horsepower and up range, prices start at around $835 and climb to well over $1,000.

BOAT TRAILERS range in price from around $150 to $2,000, depending on load capacity and design features.

What should the beginning boatman buy? That, of course, depends on how the buyer intends to use his rig and what he feels he can afford. The truth is that almost any craft can provide unlimited hours of fun as fishing boat, a base for skin diving or swimming, or just playing lazy on the water.

A new world of excitement and fun await you, once you take the plunge and get your feet wet.

Basically, Safety Is Common Sense

Concern for the safety of companions should be uppermost in the mind of any boatman at all times. Carelessness has no place in recreational boating.

Common sense will override carelessness in any experienced boatman, and the novice will do well by being overly cautious until he gains the knowledge that comes only with experience.

ONLY CARELESSNESS or lack of knowledge allows a boatman to operate his craft without life preservers for his companions and himself; without proper safety devices according to the size of the boat.

The first safety precaution to observe is to take stock of your boat. If it has metal trim strips, make sure the trim has not lifted, leaving sharp edges on which the unwary might suffer a nasty gash.

Even the most careful of builders might inadvertently leave a sharp, unfinished edge protruding somewhere.

Make sure your mooring hardware is mounted so that it does not interfere with persons boarding or leaving the boat. If the cockpit floor is unusually slick, it may be a booby trap for the unwary.

YOUR STEERING hardware, pulleys and cables should be periodically checked so that you run no risk of suddenly losing steering control when underway.

Small outboards often have no special place for stowage of the anchor. Be certain it is stowed in a spot where rough water will not cause it to become dislodged and injure some passenger. Stow your gear neatly so there is no possibility of boat passengers becoming entangled in it either while boarding or when underway.

If the boat is shipshape, there are common safety precautions to observe in and around it. Board sensibly by stepping as nearly as possible amidships in a small boat, keeping the body low and the hands and arms free. Stow equipment after you have boarded. Give a helping hand to others boarding your boat.

It's strictly common sense, and the law in most cases, that you have a life preserver aboard for each person in your boat. Check to see that your other safety equipment, such as fire extinguisher, emergency paddle and lights are in operable condition.

KEEP YOUR load within the safe carrying capacity of the boat, whether the load is passengers or cargo. Balance the boat load properly for safety and efficient operation. Keep passengers seated on the seats, not on the gunwale or deck.

One of the major tendencies is to overpower a small boat. Too big a motor can make your boat dangerous to operate.

Whenever you are out in a boat, watch the weather and respect it. If caught in a storm, keep the passengers low and, if possible, head into the waves at low speed to reach shore. If your boat should ever capsize, stay with it and depend upon its built-in buoyancy.

YOU INVITE trouble if you launch in swift waters or near a dam or waterfall.

If you leave a pier with a current running, always have your motor started before casting off. Proceed at low speed in harbors or anchorages or when passing close to swimmers, fishermen or other boats.

Follow the marine "rules of the road" when underway. Stay alert for obstructions, especially when in unfamiliar waters. Watch your wake; you are legally responsible for any damage it might cause.

Safety afloat is basically courtesy and common sense. The combination of the two seldom fails.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE that invites an accident — and possible tragedy — is to change seats in a small boat, once it is in the water and especially if it is in motion. This party may soon find one or more of their number in the drink, and their gaiety marred by a dunking or worse.

What's New In Motors

Speak of live bait and you immediately think of minnows, crayfish, night crawlers, grasshoppers the size of a finger and perhaps a small, freckle-cheeked boy coming home with his first string of bass, his chest sticking out like a mountain.

But there are other kinds of bait and they are equally related to fishing, water-skiing, SCUBA diving and other kinds of boating fun.

The nation's outboard motor manufacturers have found a new lure in two short English nouns—choice and refinements. These two words represent the bait being dangled before the 1963 boating public.

MORE CHOICES of horsepower, added accessory options, a selection of color combinations and engineering refinements by the score have been introduced by the industry's major manufacturers.

Naturally, the female of the species is getting a lion's share of the attention. She's being enticed with striking colors, improved sound baffling to further quiet the outboard engine and increased emphasis on features that contribute to ease of operation such as electric starting.

For the skipper of the family, manufacturers are promising almost complete freedom from maintenance and two leading producers are offering a two-year warranty on the entire 1963 line; another is marketing a modified version of a racing engine.

Here's a rundown on just some of the important innovations boating enthusiasts are finding in the new outboard motors:

THE WEST BEND Co. has added four new models to its 1963 line of motors. The new models include two 45-horsepower Golden Shark 450s; the 30-horsepower Golden Shark 300 and the 20-horsepower Silver Shark 200. The 45-horsepower motors are available in electric starting models, one of which has a 25-amp alternator generator.

West Bend is one of the firms claiming a dramatic improvement in silencing its outboard motors for 1963.

Owners of the new Evinrude 75- and 40-horsepower models have a choice of four propellers, each designed for a specific operating purpose. Evinrude is also offering a remote-controlled electric tilt that will lift or lower the 75-horsepower models and radio noise suppression kits as optional accessories. The power tilt consists of a tilt-actuating cylinder, an electric-driven hydraulic pump, necessary wiring and a dash-mounted control switch. The hydraulic pump is powered by a 12-volt electric motor that operates off the battery.

EVINRUDE IS attracting the lady customers with a color option on its two deluxe push-button, electric-shift models. Customers may select the light seal gray motor with white side panels and decorative trim on the shroud or Evinrude blue and decorative trim.

One development attracting a lot of attention is the announcement by Johnson and Evinrude that they will provide a full two-year warranty, the first of its kind in the outboard industry, on all of its 1963 outboard engines.

In addition to the new warranty, Johnson has announced more than 100 engineering refinements for its 1963 line. Company officials say definite progress has been made towards a completely maintenance-free outboard motor.

Top of the Johnson line remains the 75-horsepower engine with the Electramatic drive, an automatic-clutch system that uses electricity to shift gears by means of a single lever control. Current is controlled by the same lever that operates the throttle. The gear lever feeds fuel in both the forward and reverse operation.

JOHNSON IS also tempting its customers with a wide range of accessories for its 1963 models, including a unit that tilts the 75-horsepower engines out of the water for beaching and shallow water operation.

Economy is the watchword at Gale Products for 1963 as the land-of-Lincoln manufacturer continues a policy established last year.

According to Gale officials, prices on Gale's eight models, ranging in horsepower from three to 60, average from $5 to $60 lower than other major brands. Top of the Gale line is the 60-horsepower V-Sovereign with a gear ratio of 2:23. Reserve power is said to be assured by a 70.7 cubic inch displacement. More than 300 stainless steel engine parts provide corrosion resistance against all weather and water conditions.

THE ELECTRIC outboard motor has been a gleam in the eyes of fishermen everywhere since Thomas Edison discovered you could put a stream of moving electrons to work by means of a magnetic field and produce kinetic energy. Described as whisper quiet and weighing only 32 pounds, an electric outboard has been produced by City Engineering Co. Inc. that may be just the thing to start an angler's hands itching for the touch of a rod and reel.

Operating on either six- or 12-volt batteries, the My-te Electric is designed for use in fishing, game observations and photography where the noise of gasoline-powered engines might be a handicap.

Choice And Refinement Are Key Words For 1963 Motors

the 1963 line of Mercury outboard motors produced by the Kiekhaefer Corp.

Ranging from 6 to 100 horsepower, the 1963 model line includes eight motors, all of which are available with single-lever remote controls.

THE NEW Mercury engines include the Merc 200, a 22 cubic inch, two-cylinder motor that develops 20 horsepower and is said to be light enough for a small fishing boat but powerful enough for water-skiing; the Merc 350, a 35-horsepower engine with 30 cubic inches of displacement and electric starting as an option; Merc 650, a 60-horsepower engine of 60 cubic inches that features a new balanced manifold system for superior idle and minimum air intake sound.

The 650 is claimed to be the lightest, most compact engine available in its horsepower class.

The largest of the new Mercury models is the Merc 850, which has 90 cubic inches of displacement and a six-in-line powerhead producing 85 horsepower. According to company officials, this engine was engineered specifically to develop high thrust at low and moderate speeds for water-skiing and for large, heavy boats. It is also said to make light- and medium-weight hulls into high-performance boats.

SEARS, ROEBUCK and Co. is appealing to a wide range of tastes with its new 1963 Elgin outboard motors. Sears is offering seven models this year in a horsepower range from two to 75.

If you've ever wondered what it feels like to sit behind the wheel of a hot racing rig and smell the alcohol, you have your chance in 1963. The McCulloch Corp.'s Scott Division has introduced a new high-performance outboard engine that can be used in racing competition. The new engine has selective gear ratios, an external rotary valve, individually tuned carburetors, a selection of six propellers and two lower unit lengths.

The new motor is said to be a production version of the engine that holds the American Powerboat Assn. sanctioned quarter-mile drag course outboard record.

MANY BOATING buffs have always preferred the four-cycle engine to the two-cycle outboard but have admired the outboard's hydrodynamic efficiency, light weight and compact power plant. Now Homelite, a division of Textron, Inc., has combined the two in the new Homelite four-cycle, 55-horsepower outboard.

The new four-cycle Homelite 55 is said to cut gas and oil consumption in half when compared to two-cycle outboards of similar power. The Homelite product burns straight gasoline instead of a mixture of gas and oil as in conventional outboards. The engine is said to be so quiet that the boat operator often needs a tachometer to tell if engine is running at idle.

Inboards—Lighter, Safer And More Powerful In '63

Boating enthusiasts come in all sizes, shapes, dimensions and colors of both sexes, but if he or she's inboard size in 1963, there are some nice surprises waiting.

The truth is that a lot of older salts would hardly recognize the new 1963 inboard engines because they've become smaller, lighter, easier to maintain, safer to operate and are still adding horsepower while retaining these advantages.

Not only that, but the nation's leading manufacturers have added new models in the middle of line to give boat owners a greater choice of power selections.

Consider these developments:

The Gray Marine Motor Co., one of the nation's oldest manufacturers of marine engines, has increased the horsepower at the top of its 1963 line by adding a powerful new V-8 rated at 310 horsepower at 4,400 revolutions per minute.

Two brand new engines have been added to the 1963 line of the Crusader Marine Corp. Known as the Challenger Series, the new engines have all their accessories on the flywheel end of the motor, incllding, among others, alternator, starter motor and water pump. The new arrangement promises huge reductions in maintenance time.

Eaton Manufacturing Co.'s 1963 line includes two new models at 125 and 155 horsepower. All of the firm's V-8's include a drip collector nestled in the engine V. It confines excess fumes and fuel and draws them off to be consumed in the system. Eaton claims this innovation as an exclusive safety feature. The use of new lightweight alloys has also reduced weight of the new Eaton transmission to 50 pounds.

Use A Strong Line On Trailer's Winch

If you need a new line for your trailer winch, don't substitute clothesline or any other inferior quality line that will "suffice."

Check you winch every month or so, according to the amount of trailering you do. Don't take chances. A great deal of strain is placed on the winch line and if it becomes worn or damaged, it might snap when needed the most some day

Also, always use a good quality line; it will pay off in the long run.

Stern Drive Engines—

Fuel economy and more horsepower options are the big news in stern-drive power packages in 1963.

HERE ARE some of the new developments that promise to keep the inboard-outboards prominent in news of the boating scene over the next several months:

OMC Boats has boosted the horsepower of the engine installed in its 1963 line of boats from 80 to 88 horsepower. Known as the OMC- V-488, the new version of the OMC engine has an independent oiling system which is said to drastically reduce oil consumption.

New economy of operation is promised Shark-O-Matic 800 owners by engineers of The West Bend Co., producers of the 80-horsepower inboard-outboard engine and drive unit. Oil consumption has been reduced to permit the two-cycle power plant to run on a mixture of oil to gasoline of 48 to 1, 50 per cent less than previously required.

KIEKHAEFER Corp. is introducing a new 190-horsepower V-8 known as the MerCruiser 190 that will be coupled to the MerCruiser II stern-drive unit. Kiekhaefer is offering seven stern-drive power packages in 1963, including two Mercedes-Benz diesel engines of 39 and 100 horsepower. The remaining five engines are four-cycle gasoline powered and are coupled to MerCruiser I or II stern-drive units.

Eaton Manufacturing Co.'s Dearborn Marine Engine Division has boosted the top engine in the Interceptor line to 125 horsepower for 1963.

Gray Marine has announced that its four six-cylinder and 10 V-8 gasoline engines are available in "bobtail" versions for stern- or turbine-drive installations.

THE OUTBOARD CRAFT

The Emphasis Is On Economy In This Year's Boat Models

If Queen Isabella were financing a boating venture today, there would be no need to even consider hocking the royal sparklers, provided the lady checked the new 1963 lines of outboard craft.

Boat builders say there never has been a better time than 1963 for those who want to get into boating on a shoestring.

For example:

A BUILDER of aluminum craft offers savings of up to $300 on some models, savings attributed to improved production methods.

A nationally-known wooden boat builder now offers some of its models fitted out with "standard" grade marine items instead of its usual "custom" fittings—the savings to the dollar-conscious buyer are about 12 per cent.

A manufacturer of luxury-loaded fiberglass runabouts is introducing this year a new model stripped bare to the hull to tap the economy market.

A line of low-price aluminum models is being offered the dealers of a nationally-distributed line of aluminum and fiberglass outboard craft.

There's another kind of economy in the 1963 outboard fleet—higher quality for the same price.

ONE WOOD boat manufacturer who has held fast on the price line, offering precisely the same range in price as last year, reports that he has even added improved features to many models at no extra cost.

A fiberglass boat builder has so much faith in the quality of its hulls that it is offering what is said to be the first two-year warranty for defects in materials and workmanship in the industry.

Another major fiberglass producer says improved production methods have increased the strength of its hulls 30 per cent, while an aluminum boat producer tells how a new 1,000-ton capacity press is enabling it to market hull designs never before possible in its aluminum craft.

However, no one should be deceived into thinking that an austerity wave is about to break over the nation's boatmen. Luxury is there for the asking in the 1963 fleet, reflected in sports car styling, wide choices of color, seating arrangements and interior appointments, and, in a significant number of craft, wall-to-wall carpeting.

LAST YEAR, recognizing one basic human need, many boat builders installed back-to-back seats which convert into lounges at the twist of a wrist, providing weary mariners with a place to catch a cat nap or lap up the sun.

The trend toward offering these sleeper seats continues apace, this year paralleled by the installation of devices to meet another basic human need—eating. The 1963 crop of outboards sprout with pop-up, fold-out and drop-down tables and beverage holders for a fast snack afloat, as well as compartments for storage of some seagoing victuals.

The development of now-you-see-it, now-you-don't cabins aboard outboard craft started last year when a manufacturer introduced a boat with a forward cockpit with a snap-on roof. This year the same firm is back with a report that such an arrangement shifts passenger weight forward, leading to faster planning.

THIS IS THE YEAR FOR REALLY BIG INBOARDS

"Yes sir, this is the year I'm going to get that really big one."

Countless inboard boat fans start the new season each year with a declaration similar to this, to the extreme gratification of inboard manufacturers. One of the companies kindly explains what the boatman means by that "really big one": A boat larger than the one he already owns.

MOST OF those who inspect the gleaming 1963 inboard beauties are able to find a "big one" without difficulty.

The big, beautiful inboard cruisers offer their potential masters all the luxury of a fine hotel suite afloat, with carpeted salons, spacious master staterooms, up-to-date galleys (one model boasts an all-electric kitchen) and many other sophisticated luxuries.

While inboard builders offer the last word in luxury, an invitation to sea-going sybarites is not their only message for 1963.

The sportsman will find several models expressly designed for the pursuit of blue water fishing and, in addition, the flying bridge perched atop the pilot house, once the mark of the sport fishermen, is now an optional extra in many lines of cruisers.

THE ACTIVE boatman will also view with favor the new inboard run-abouts, sleek craft packed with power. Jet propulsion, no longer a novelty, is now available as standard equipment or an optional extra in many lines of inboard runabouts.

And what about the fellow who wants to get a "really small one" this year?

Well, one inboard craft measures only 78 inches long, an aqua kart which combines the joys of boating and the thrills of karting. The manufacturer, who says that the little fiberglass one-man craft has been clocked at speeds in excess of 50 miles per hour.

Safety Is The Principal Concern Of Survival Equipment Corp.

Life Rafts Are Among The Products Of This Sausalito-Based Enterprise

Safety of life at sea is the principal concern of the people at Survival Equipment Corp., located on the third floor of the Industrial Center Building in Sausalito.

The concern manufactures the Elliot inflatable life raft and is the only company in the United States with eight sizes of fully Coast Guard-approved life rafts.

THE ELLIOT raft was originally designed in England and has been sold under the Ministry of Transport approval there for over 30 years. Five years ago the English manufacturer of the Elliot decided to bring the raft to this country and apply for Coast Guard approval, which has since been granted.

The plant in Sausalito was open in the fall of 1958 with a handful of people, and has gradually grown to more than 60 employees.

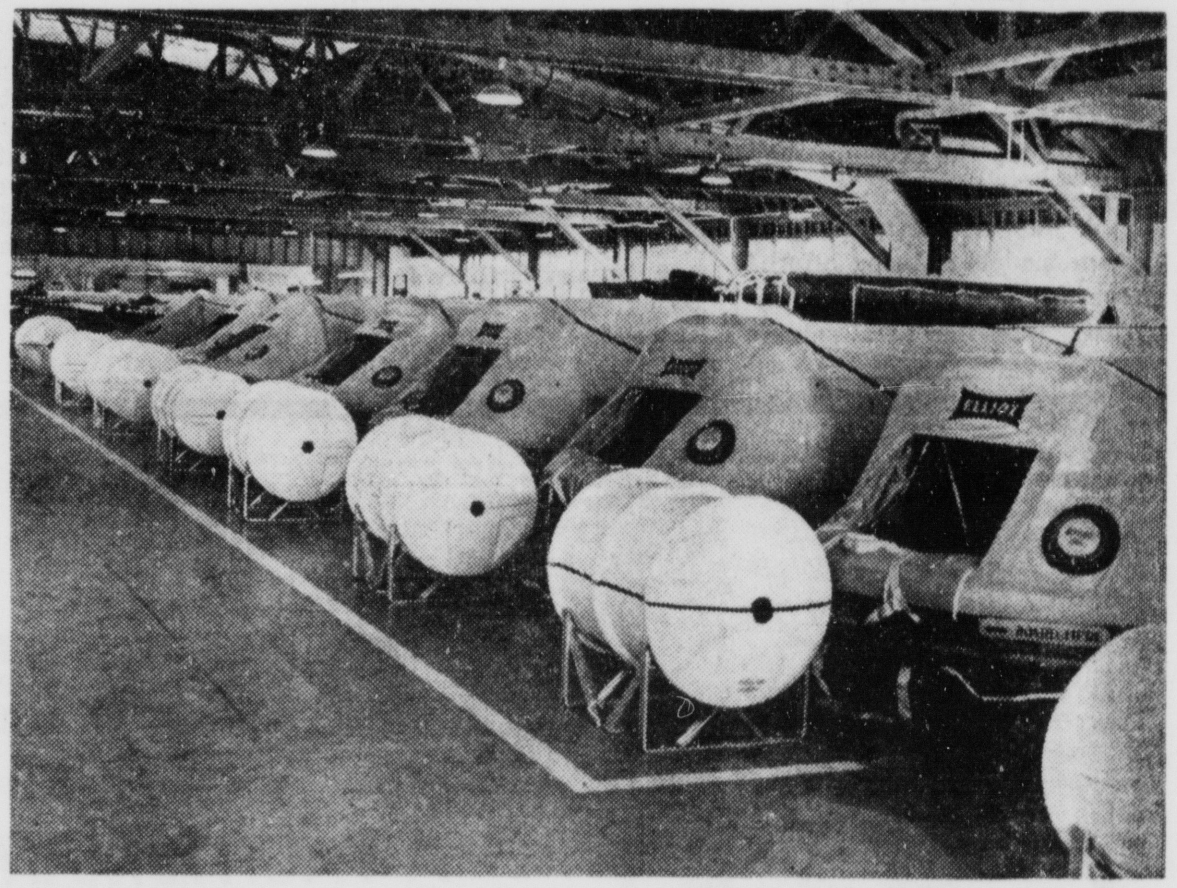
Survival Equipment Corp. has developed many other products designed for marine as well as air safety.

An inflatable evacuation slide is manufactured which is used on commercial jet airplanes. These slides are jetisoned from the doors of the aircraft in the event of an emergency landing so passengers can "slide" safely out of the aircraft.

THE PELICAN and Penguin rafts are designed for the small boat owner and are completely automatic. They are packed in a fiberglass container which is handy for seats on board cabin cruiser or sail boat yet small and light enough to be easily carried.

Over a year has gone into the design of an inflatable surfboard and skindiver float which will be marketed very soon.

GENERAL MANAGER L. B. Clapham Jr. of the Survival Engineering Corp. inspects the 3,000-gallon inflatable fluid storage tank which is being tested with more than 12 tons of water at the Sausalito factory where it was manufactured.



THESE LIFE RAFTS manufactured by Survival Equipment Corp. of Sausalito have been tested and approved for service by the U. S. Coast Guard. They will be deflated and packed in their fiber glass containers for shipment to customers throughout the country.

Electronics Play Major Boating Role

A trend toward increased use of electronic equipment aboard today's boats has become evident.

Almost without exception, at least one piece of electronic gear is now carried. Usually such equipment is utilized to provide an added amount of safety while cruising.

IN MANY cases the equipment may be nothing more than a small transistor radio, receiving both standard broadcasts and marine radio weather information.

Radio telephones have also increased in popularity with many boatmen finding the new 25 watt sets ample for the distances they normally cruise.

Medium size cruisers and larger offshore yachts are fitted with radar and radio direction finders as well.

A trend to the used of two-way radio telephones is increasing. The purpose for such installations is simply added safety. One unit, usually between 25 and 50 watts is utilized for normal short range transmissions from one boat to another. A more powerful 150-watt unit functions during extended cruises where ship to shore transmissions become increasingly important.

With the addition of two or more radio-telephones aboard a cruiser added security is gained in the event of damage or malfunction of one set.

ANOTHER PIECE of equipment that's now found in popular use regardless of the size of a boat is some type of depth finder or sounder. The advantages of such a piece of equipment are obvious, both from a practical standpoint while entering a strange harbor to finding reefs when fishing.

This dual usage has given this type of equipment widespread appeal.

Additional navigational instruments and directional finders have all gained in popularity. With longer cruising ranges, found in today's boats due to more efficient designs and improved horsepower ratings, a cruiser can roam farther than before and reliable means for efficient and certain navigation is a must.

Just How Many Horses Do You Need In Bay Area?

If you want to buy an outboard boat to use on San Francisco Bay, how do you set about choosing it?

According to dealers for Johnson outboards, the most popular buys are the compact 10 horsepower and the two largest motors of the line, the 40 and 75 horsepower models.

THE TWO BIG ones deliver enough speed for any purpose. They are popular with those who like to water-ski in calm spots like Richardson's Bay, the McNears Beach area in San Pablo Bay, and the sheltered waters below Candlestick Point.

The 75 is suitable for boats of 18 feet and up, and the 40 can push boats of 14 feet or more. Both are available in standard electric starting models.

The 10 is popular with Bay fishermen. Powerful enough to cope with Bay currents, it can propel even a heavy boat to the fishing ground fast, and then provide a smooth, slow trolling speed. Supposing that it took an hour at full throttle to reach the angling spot, it would still consume only 60 cents worth of gasoline. It is also very popular locally as auxiliary power for sail-boats and as a motor for light run-abouts.

There are also the in-between motors, for those who want to get to the fishing grounds faster or water-ski more economically. Behind a light-weight 14-foot boat a 28 has power enough for good water-skiing and has proved popular for small to medium sized runabouts. In twin combination, it can provide a highly satisfying speed for day cruisers and big utilities.

Another intermediate motor is the 18 horse, a compact model that is fine for fishing, since it can deliver 20 miles per hour or more and then troll down to dead slow.

BOATMEN ON California's 325 lakes and reservoirs, and on the calmer streams, can get great economy from the two smallest of the Johnson stable — the 5½ and the 3 horsepower. Either of them can putter about such waters as the sloughs of the Delta area for hours on a negligible amount of fuel.

According to Thomas B. Kalbfus, an executive for the firm, "We notice an evolutionary trend in our customers, too. If they start with one of our smaller models or even with a used motor, we are almost as happy as if we had sold them the big 'Electramatic' V-75. Nearly every boatman starting with a small rig will trade up to a larger one eventually. In the San Francisco Bay area, fully 90 per cent of those with boats 15 feet or less plan to buy a longer one some time — with a more powerful motor."

Avoid Bad Weather

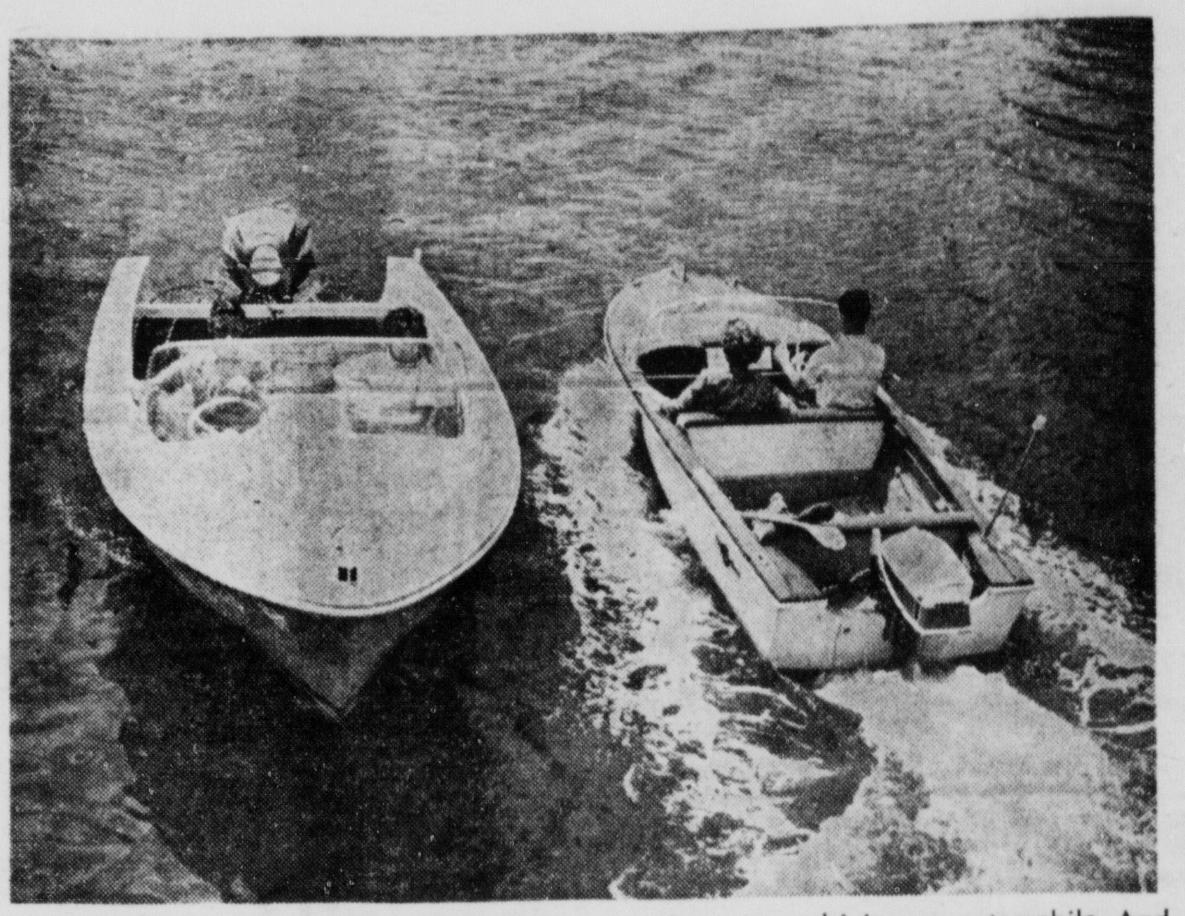
Boating is fun, but not in bad weather; so the good boatman never looks for trouble by going out in bad weather.



WHEN TWO BOATS are running in opposite but parallel directions and meet, the drivers should keep to the right. It is the same as if you were driving an automobile. And by the observance of such common sense regulations and practices, better boating is made possible for all.

To Prevent Theft Of Motor—

Captain Hook and the days of piracy are gone but modern day thieves still present a problem for outboard skippers.

Each year thousands of outboard motors as well as complete boating rigs are stolen. In many cases, the loss could have been avoided had a little extra precaution been taken by the owner.

THERE ARE several things a boatman can do to discourage theft of his equipment, say the people at Evinrude Motors who handle stolen motor complaints.

On most outboard motors holes will be found in the handles of the clamp screws used in securing the motor to the boat. If the clamps are tightened so that both handles point downward, a regular bicycle lock can be passed through the holes making it impossible to remove the motor without first disturbing the lock.

A boat stored outside and left unattended on a trailer is easy pickings for a thief. All he need do is attach the trailer to a car and speed off. If you store your rig outside, it's a good idea to lock it down in some manner. A heavy chain can be used to secure the trailer to some stationary object such as a tree or post. Another solution is to chain one of the wheels to the axle. Anything you can do to make it difficult to hitch the trailer without causing a commotion will help.

If your boat is kept in the water, it's a good idea to keep the area lighted at night. Many thieves are quite bold but most prefer to work under the cover of darkness. A light may be enough to keep them away.

INSURANCE won't prevent theft but it will make your loss less serious if it should occur. It's only good sense to have your rig fully insured for its current value at all times.

To establish a record of ownership the Evinrude people suggest that a new motor be registered with the manufacturer at the time of purchase. When buying a used outboard, make sure that the bill of sale, which should be kept, includes both the model and serial numbers of the engine. If you should experience the misfortune of having your equipment stolen, immediately report the theft to local law enforcement officers and to your insurance company.

LET'S TAKE A TEST ON NAUTICAL TERMS

Here's a test to see how well you know the terms of boating:

According to the Johnson Motors News Bureau, if you answer all 15 statements correctly you're a real "salt"; 11 to 14 correct answers indicates you've been traveling with a boating crowd! If you are correct on five to 10 of the statements, you're a beginner and better start getting hep.

Less than five right means you're a lubber (land lover)!

OK, here you go, circle the word you think is correct . . . and no cheating.

1. The side of a boat opposite that from which the breeze is blowing is called the (a) lee, (b) windless or (c) portside.

2. The extreme front of the boat is called the (a) peak (b) bow or (c) tiller.

3. A cork, rubber or plastic device hung over the side of the boat to prevent chafing and scratching when moored is called a (a) fender, (b) buoy or (c) cushion.

4. A kitchen on a cruiser is termed the (a) head, (b) hold or (c) galley.

5. The width of a boat, measured at the widest point, is known as the (a) gunwale, (b) beam or (c) plane.

6. When looking forward, the right side of the boat is the (a) starboard, (b) port or (c) abaft.

7. A nautical distress signal is (a) "Ahoy," (b) "dry rot" or (c) "Mayday."

8. The upper edge of the sides of the boat are known as (a) chines, (b) transoms or (c) gunwales.

9. The after part of the boat, the rear end, is termed the (a) stern, (b) freeboard or (c) hold.

10. A diary of events on the water is called the ship's (a) scroll, (b) log or (c) register.

11. The cross structure at the end of the boat, upon which the outboard motor is mounted, is known as the (a) aft-bracket, (b) flying bridge or (c) transom.

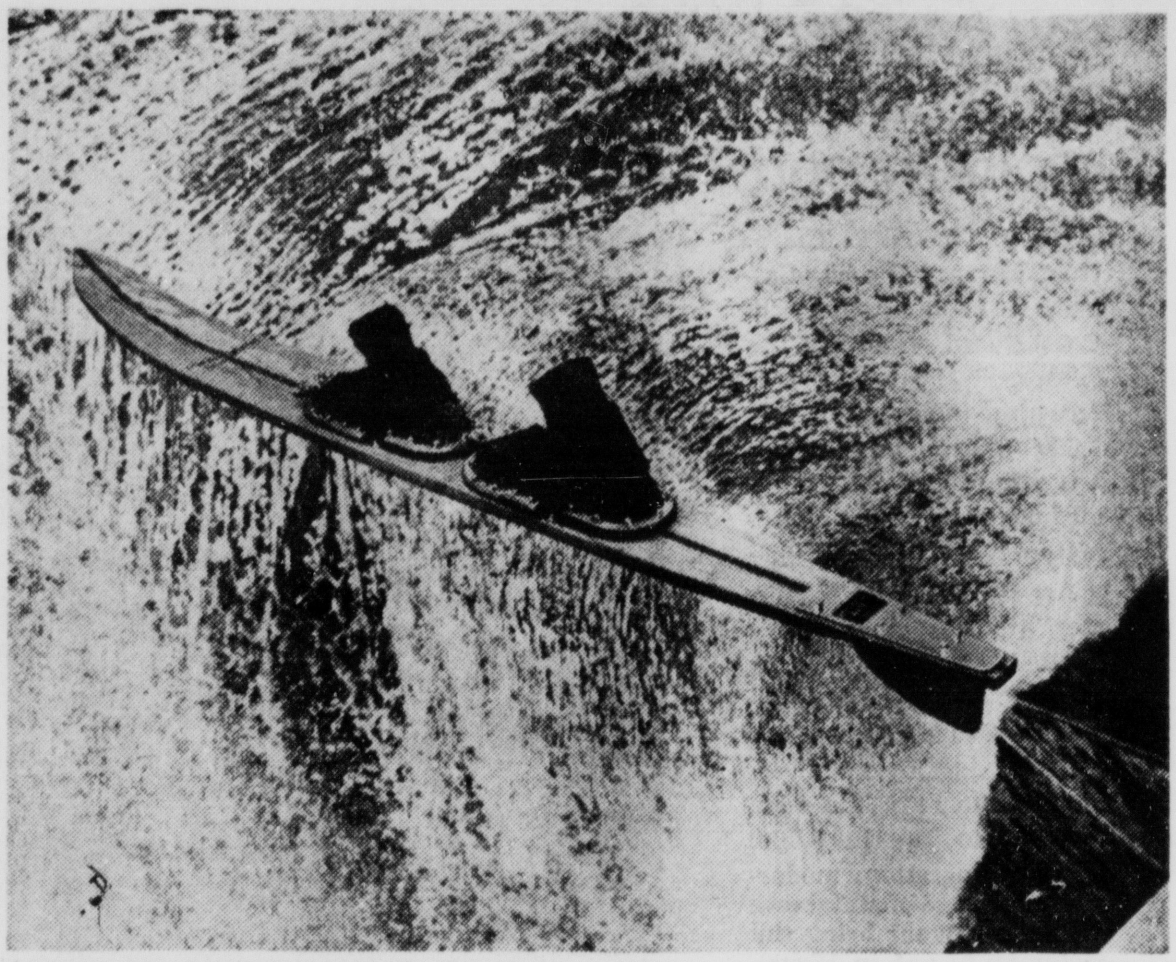
12. Nautical term for "rope" is (a) line, (b) cable or (c) binding.

13. Does a boatman (a) heave, (b) drop or (c) toss the anchor?

14. A measure of marine speed, a nautical mile, is termed (a) phantom, (b) cuddy or (c) knot.

15. A partition or wall in a boat is known as a (a) bilge, (b) binnacle or (c) bulkhead.

ANSWERS: 1-a, 2-b, 3-a, 4-c, 5-b, 6-a, 7-c, 8-c, 9-a, 10-b, 11-c, 12-a, 13-b, 14-c, 15-c.



MAHERAJAH SLALOM SKIS, manufactured in Sausalito at 1 Gate Five by Maherajah Water Skis, are popular with California's top slalom skiers—and for good reason. Wearers have won more than 2,000 trophies for competitive skiing and attained speeds of 99.4 miles per hour. Each ski is produced for the individual, considering the skier's weight, height, shoe-size, boat speed and power. Its manufacturers hail it as "a ski with superior control" that is not only best for competition but also "the best ski for every-day use."

Watch Boat's Stern When Leaving Pier

Unlike an automobile, the back end of a boat responds first to a turn of the steering wheel.

Keep this in mind when pulling away from a pier.

If the boat is snugged against the pier and the steering wheel is turned too sharply, the stern can swing into or under the pier. Either push the boat away from the pier before accelerating or leave the pier at a slight angle until the boat is clear.

YOU CAN HELP CUT BOATING ACCIDENT ODDS

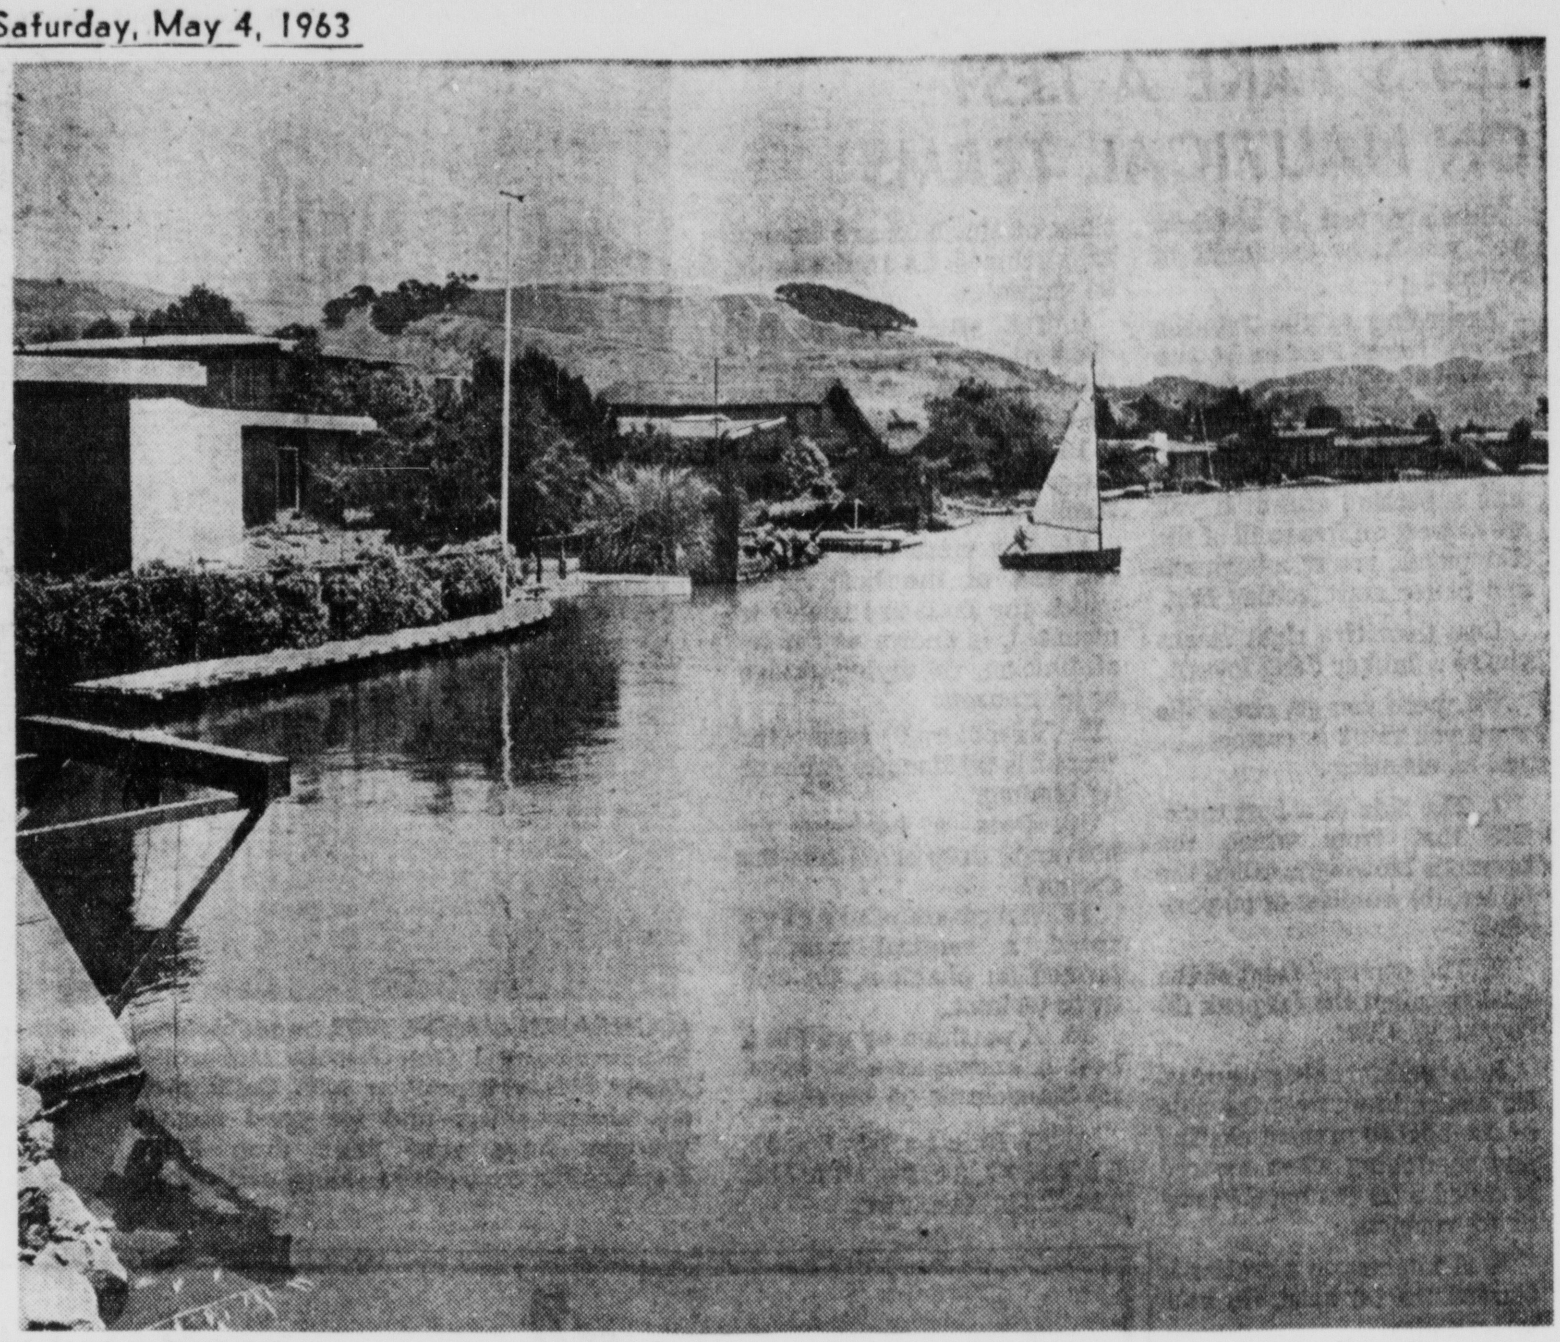
Cmdr. Edward R. Tharp, chief, Pleasure Boating Casualty Section of the U.S. Coast Guard, states that the "average" boat operator faces the odds of one in 7,500 of having an accident, according to an analysis of mishaps reported to Washington.

As the "average" operator becomes more safety minded, his chances of an accident decreases, Commander Tharp reports. For instance, just by not overloading the boat, the odds increase to one in 8,000. Prudent operation, moderate speed and maintaining a proper lookout bring the factor up to one in 17,500.

Knowing winds and water conditions and avoiding storm conditions will advance the margin to one in 19,500 and if you have the occupants of your craft seated comfortable and properly where odds increase to one in 63,000.

Finally, if you could make all hands wear life preservers (if, he says), the chances of avoiding a fatal mishap is one in 210,000.



SAILS ON THE WATER are a familiar sight to Marinites—yet one they never get tired of. THERE'S A world of difference between motorboating and sailboating. And yet the two groups of enthusiasts also share many things—mainly a love of the water and the outdoors and a devotion to good craftsmanship and seamanship. And each group is a stout defender of its own particular type of seacraft.

THE "FLOATING HOME," a modern, luxury-type houseboat intended for year-round occupancy, will be introduced by two firms in Marin next month. This illustration is an artist's conception of the "Balboa," a two-bedroom dwelling to sell for approximately $10,500 by Radec Industries, Inc. Other models range upward in price to $50,000.

New Luxury Afloat Due Soon In Marin

A new phase in luxury marine living will make its entry in Marin waterways next month—the "Floating Home."

Two dealers, operating entirely separately, will introduce their respective versions of this type of residence which goes beyond the popular conception of a houseboat.

Pacific Floating Homes, operating from 240 Redwood Highway, Sausalito, and Radec Industries, Inc., locally represented at Loch Lomond Marina, San Rafael, will display models offering all the conveniences of a land dwelling and designed to give years of occupancy without hull deterioration. Pacific expects to have its grand opening on June 1; Radec at about the same time or shortly afterward.

Models will be featured in sizes from studio and one-bedroom units to four-bedroom homes and duplexes designed for commercial marina motel accomodations. Prices range from $5,000 up to $50,000.

Both firms will bring in their prefabricated dwellings from out of the county—Pacific from Southern California on lumber barges towed to Marin; Radec from the East Bay towed to the site or by trucking in prefabricated sections and then assembling them on the site if towing is impractical.

Here's The Right Technique For Towing With Outboard

Should you want to tow another craft or a large object with your outboard boat, could you do it in a seamanlike manner?

The Mercury outboard people say that if you remember the following points, you'll be prepared for this eventuality:

Your boat's anchor line is the handiest rope aboard for emergency towing. It should be fairly stout. Don't ever economize by using clothesline or other light rope for the anchor, because it is too apt to break while you are anchored—or towing a friend who's run out of fuel.

PLANING-TYPE outboard boats usually tow handily and at a fast clip. Often, though, outboarders are asked to tow sailboats, rowboats and similar craft with displacement hulls. Such boats are characterized by a bottom which curves up and narrows from amidships aft. These hulls tend to get cranky when towed at too fast a clip, so tailor your speed to suit the tow.

Frequently, craft like canoes and tenders dart this way and that, especially when the tow line is attached to the top of the bow. The pull then tends to bury the bow in the water.

To remedy this, tie a loop rope around the hull about one-third back from the bow. Attach the tow line to the loop down under the keel. The pull will then tend to lift the bow, and the stern will follow like a "tail," keeping the tow straight.

SPEEDS WILL be very low when you are pulling swimming rafts, logs or similar objects, and steering control may be limited. Try adapting a method used by many river towboat captains.

Go alongside your tow and make your boat fast to it, bow and stern. The boat and tow then become one unit and your propeller thrust can be used to steer both, usually more effectively.

Night Precaution

When boating at night, extra lights, entirely independent of your boat's electrical system, are handy to have.

A KIMBALL PRODUCT

Marin Is Home Of Best Selling Water Skis Of Fiber Glass

Marin's role as a boating and water sports center is widely known around the world. And, of course, it's an old story to Marinites, who frequently take their recreational advantages for granted.

Less well known, however, is the fact that Marin also boasts a factory where the world's largest-selling brand of fiber glass water skis is manufactured.

Kimball Manufacturing Corp., located for the past five years in a sprawling factory at Harbor and Mill Streets in San Rafael, has led the way to maintenance-free water skiing with its pioneering developments.

The idea of manufacturing a pressure-molded fiber glass ski was the result of a rare collaboration. William R. Kimball, president of the corporation, and Don Ibsen, considered by many to be the inventor of modern water skiing, put their minds and their experience together to put an end to a troublesome chore.

Ibsen, who has been skiing since the mid-20s, felt that there ought to be a high-quality ski on the market which would eliminate the disadvantages of wooden skis—annual maintenance, fracture, delamination.

The sport had, he contended, too long suffered from wooden skis that became so heavy that it was hard to ski on them.

In 1955, the first Kimball skis were made. Since then, the ski has been completely redesigned. The greatly increased horsepower of today's in-and-outboard boats has necessitated a product that is hardly comparable to those made eight years ago.

The early Kimball models were soft, flexible, and noted for their gentle easy-going ride. Today's models, while still primarily designed for the average skier, are geared to high-performance, high-speed skiing.

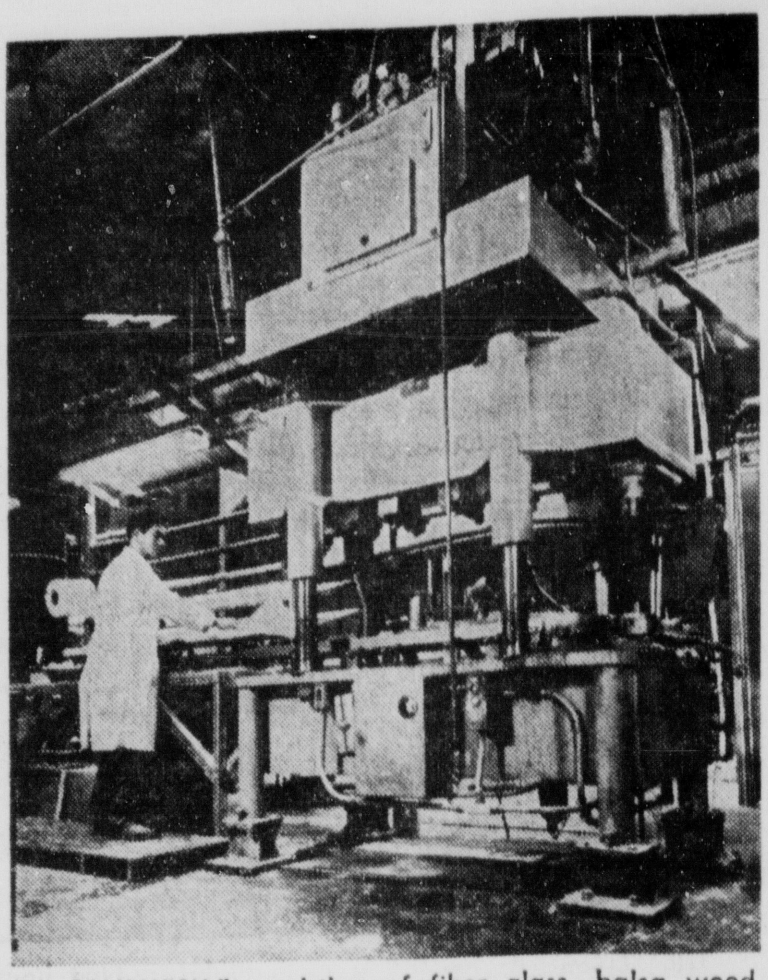
Models which Kimbal presently manufactures are of full rocker, banana-shaped design. Kimball engineers, guided by Ibsen and a panel of world-champion skiers, have proved that the present design offers a unique combination of easy maneuverability and high-speed performance. The wide array of patterns and models includes slaloms and popular combination pairs.

During 1962, in order to further strengthen its position in the marine field, Kimball purchased Futurity, Inc. —maker of a famous line of ski hitches and anchors.

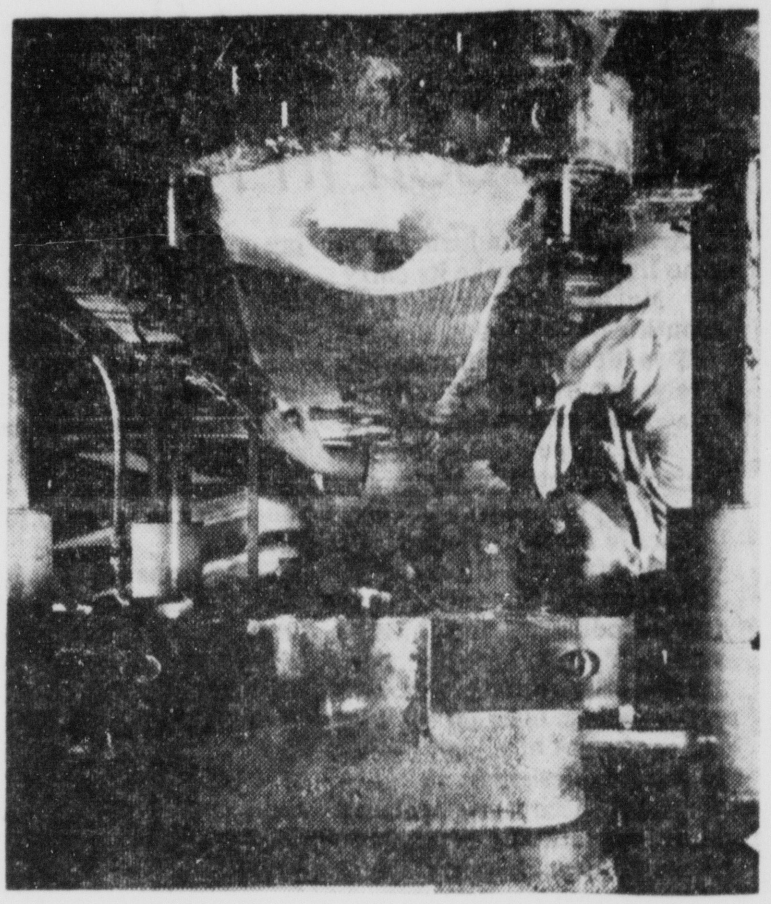
Futurity hitches are a unique product, since they bring a Water Ski Assn.-approved and required tournament product to the marine market at a popular price. The Futurity hitch extends the rope above the motor and, as such, out of the water and safely out of reach of the propeller. The tilting hitch is also unique in that it can work as a motor-lift by using the weight of the top of the motor as a counter-balance.

The anchors made by Futurity are of non-fouling type, sold at leading marine and sporting goods stores in every part of the country.

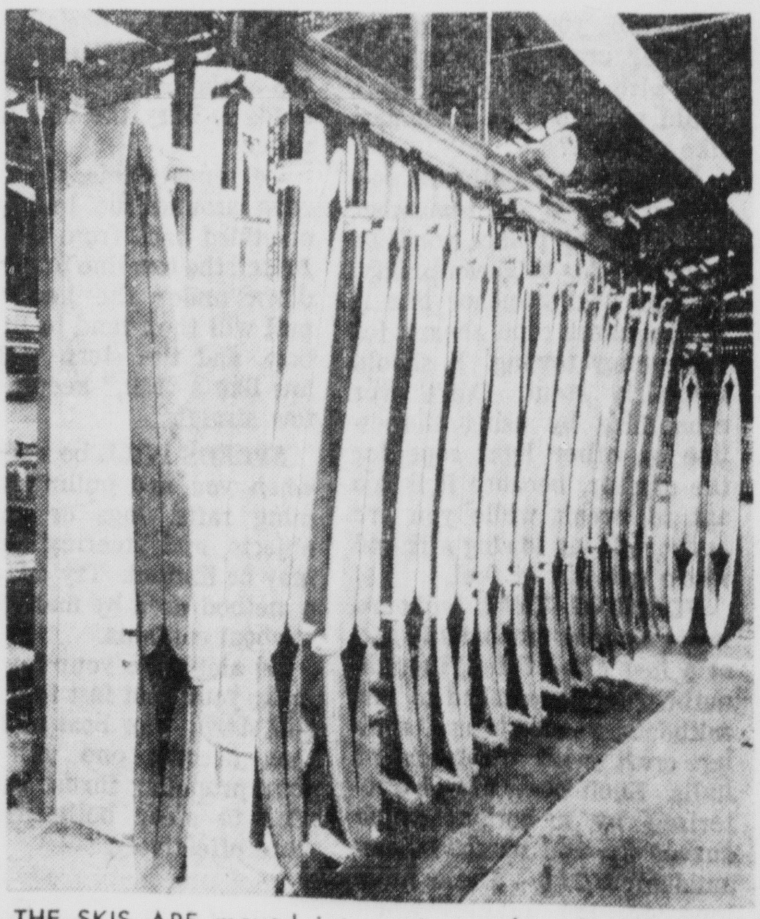
New recognition has just come to Kimball and its products with the announcement that the concern's water skis have been selected for exhibit this year under U.S. Department of Commerce sponsorship at trade fairs to be held in Rio de Janeiro and in Sydney, Australia, as "representative" of the work of American industry.



"A SANDWISH," consisting of fiber glass, balsa wood flotation core and resins, is squeezed and cured under steam heat into its permanent shape by this 100-ton press in the Kimball Manufacturing Corp. plant in San Rafael. It is part of the process in the production of fiber glass water skis.



YOU ARE LOOKING at one of the "sandwiches" inside the mold, showing the paper overlay which is molded into many of the Kimball skis to create an imitation wood finish. The skis remain and cure in the mold under tremendous pressure for four minutes.



THE SKIS ARE moved into curing racks where the end result will be handsomely-decorated and almost indestructible skis. The process used is similar to that employed by production molders of automobile bodies.

Anchors: A 'Must' For Boat

A rock tied to a clothes line and dropped over the side will do a pretty fair job of holding a small boat in calm water. But as the size of the boat and the turbulence of the water increase, so does the need for a better method.

An anchor, of course, is the answer.

AN ANCHOR is one of the most useful pieces of equipment a boatman can own.

Anchors are made in various size, shapes and weights to be used with different boats.

Most popular with outboard boatmen are the mushroom and Danforth types. Mushroom anchors resemble an inverted mushroom and are used as permanent moorings. Lightweight Danforth type anchors have pivoting flukes which exert tremendous holding power. They are preferred by most boatmen.

"HOLD IT!" her instructor tells this pretty mariner. You don't heave an anchor—you lower it. And first you get your foot out of the line. And please, lady, don't stand on the gunwale. It is not only important that you have an anchor aboard, but also that you learn to use it properly.

JUST AS important as having the right anchor is knowing how to use it. When anchoring, first check to be sure the bitter end of the line is attached to the boat and the line is not tangled around your feet or gear. Select the spot where you want to anchor and then approach it into the wind or current, whichever is stronger. When over the spot, lower the anchor, don't heave it.

After the anchor has caught the bottom, play out additional line until the ratio of length of line to depth of water is about six to one. In rough seas, it's best to increase the ratio. Keep the engine running until the anchor is set. If it doesn't catch the first time, try again. Anchors are set quite easily in mud or sand. On rock bottoms, it may be necessary to drag the anchor some distance before it catches.

DEPENDING upon the type of bottom, retrieving the anchor can sometimes present a problem. The easiest way is to run the boat to a point directly above the anchor and then give the line a good straight pull. If it doesn't break loose, attach the line to the boat and utilize the pulling power of the motor at a slow speed.

Keep your anchor in a place where it can be reached conveniently.

The Marine Paints Are Durable

New and better marine paints have resulted in finishes which are more resistant to mildew, barnacles, rot and marine growth plus weathering from being in the water.

But of utmost importance is the refinishing which is necessary to maintain your boat properly as well as producing a smoother finish to enable your craft to move through the water efficently.

You can sand your boat by hand, use power tools or there are a variety of commericial products on the market—some of which make revolutionary claims as to ease of working the wood and production of excellent end results.

On bottoms consideration must be given to the amount of marine growth present. If this is not too heavy, you may not want to sand through to the bare wood. It is desirable to use a respirator because dust created from bottom paints is injurious.

The number of scars, nicks and chipped or peeled paint areas also must be determined on topsides before a decision is made to go down to the paint-free wood. If mars are neglible, it may not be necessary. This same procedure applies to decks.

On brightwork it usually is not necessary to remove all varnish. The main thing here is that more than one coat is desirable to get the finish protection desired.

A goodly number of sailors prefer to leave polishing of the propeller to a boat yard but there are some with experience who do the job themselves—especially if nicks and gouges are at a minimum.

Pitch Of Propeller Can Mean A Lot In Boat's Performance

It Is Seldom Seen, But The Prop Is An Important Part Of Motor

Propellers, seldom seen when a boat is in the water, are one of the most significant parts of outboard motors.

This rather simple part has the important job of converting the energy produced by the powerhead to power in the form of thrust necessary to propel the boat.

MODERN outboards are certified to develop their rated horsepower at a specified number of crankshaft revolutions per minute. Within certain limits, if the engine does not operate within its recommended rpm range at full throttle, it is likely that the propeller is not properly matched to the load it is being required to move.

Failure to select a propeller of the correct pitch can cause poor performance, a great deal of irritation and even damage to the motor. Pitch, incidentally, indicates the distance that the propeller would move ahead through the water in one complete revolution, assuming there was no propeller slip. For instance, a propeller with a 12-inch pitch would theoretically move ahead 12 inches in one revolution.

Take the case of the man who last spring purchased a new boat. He had been operating a 40 horsepower on a 15-foot boat and getting good performance. But he decided he wanted a little more room, so traded it in on an open-cockpit 16-footer of lapstrake construction — a boat considerably heavier than the one he had been using.

HIS FIRST use of this boat came when his family went camping with another family group. He was somewhat disappointed, but not too concerned, when his speedometer registered only about 23 miles per hour at full throttle with three people in the boat. He became alarmed when he had difficulty pulling an adult water skier from a deep water start, and then could pull the skier at a top speed of only 20 miles per hour.

Following his vacation, he took the rig to his marine dealer and recounted his experience. The dealer first checked the prop to see if it was properly balanced. Finding nothing wrong with the balance, he put the rig in the water with two passengers. At full throttle the speedometer indicated 23 miles per hour and his tachometer indicated the motor was turning only about 3700 rpm. As the engine develops its rated horsepower at 4,500 rpm, he knew the propeller was not correct for the load.

The dealer then put a lower pitch prop on the motor and immediately top speed jumped to near 29 miles per hour and the rpm moved close ot 4,500. To make sure the pitch was not too low at minimum load, the dealer took the boat out alone. Although top speed increased by slightly over one mile per hour, the rpm's did not increase significantly.

From these facts, a valuable lesson may be learned. If your motor does not rev up to within the recommended operating range, it is likely you are using a prop with too much pitch. You are trying to push too heavy a load too fast. Undue strain is placed on the motor if it operates below recommended range at full throttle. It will also fail to develop the rated horsepower you paid for when you bought the engine.

AT THE SAME time, a propeller acts as a governor on engine speed. If you are using a propeller with too little pitch, it is possible your engine will turn over faster than the recommended safe operating range.

The only certain way to test engine speed is by use of a tachometer. If, under normal load with the proper tilt angle and transom height the motor turns faster or slower than the manufacturer's specifications, the propeller is wrong for the rig. If the motor turns too fast, you need a prop wth greater pitch to reduce the rpm. If it turns too slow, you need a propeller with less pitch.

A marine dealer is the best qualified man to help you check your propeller.

A PROPELLER in this condition can cause many headaches. Bent or badly-nicked propellers should be repaired, repitched or replaced.

Some Dos And Don'ts For Plastic Windshield Care

Wrap-around plastic windshields—popular with many owners of small craft because of their post and frame-free visibility—must be cleaned often and correctly because they impair vision if they are dirty and scratched.

Plastic windshields develop a static charge and attract dust with heavy deposits especially common after a trailer trip over the highways.

Spray dries and leaves highly abrasive salt specks on tidal waters and silt-laden droplets create pumice-like spots when cruising on muddy rivers. Sand gets on the foredeck near beaches and grains of it can adhere to the windshield if wet.

Here are some "do's" and "do nots" for your windshield's protection:

DO NOT—Wipe off dust with any handy piece of cloth because this eventually will put countless tiny scratches into the surfaces.

DO NOT—Use common cleaners intended for home and automobile glass because they could dull the surface permanently.

DO—Rinse off heavy coatings of dust, salt or silt with plain water and follow up with a gentle washing with mild soap and soft cloth.

DO—Purchase scratch-removing compound or a plastic cleaning kit at a marine store to insure a good job of restoring your windshield. Some of them contain agents to minimize formation of static charges and some also leave protective films.

DO—Install transom lift handles on your dashboard so that passengers can hold on instead of grabbing the windshield when boarding.

There's A Right Way To Launch Your Boat—And Here Is How

It doesn't take a bottle of champagne to launch your outboard. Better use is made of a keen sense of direction and a guide standing at the rear of the trailer to call out instructions.

Here's how to do it, according to the National Safety Council:

1. Back slowly at a right angle to the launching site. Remember that when you want the rear of the trailer to turn one direction, steer your car the opposite way.

2. If the site is natural or unimproved, pick a sloping spot hard enough to give your tires a lot of traction.

3. When you are a few feet from the water's edge, remove the rear tie-downs from the boat. Tilt the motor up and unlock the bow winch, but keep the boat snubbed tight.

4. Back again until the trailer wheels are an inch or two in the water. Set the hand brake and put the car in gear, ignition off. Now give the boat a firm push down the trailer.

DON'T BE one of those landlocked sailors who scuttle their boat before they get it to water. Be sure your boat, trailer, and car are matched and that you have an adequate well-designed hitch.

Use a safety chain, which is required by law in most states. Check your hitch and tie-downs whenever you stop for gas. If you park for a long time, loosen the tie-downs to relieve strain on the boat.

Don't permit yourself to become distracted when towing the trailer and forget it's fastened on behind you. Drivers have been known to do this, then back up and damage boat, trailer and automobile by sharply jackknifing.

You have extra weight and length of boat and trailer while driving, so make sure you have extra room when you have to pass, and plenty of space in which to stop. Give other drivers clear arm signals if your signal lights are hidden by the boat.

WHEN BUYING a trailer for your boat, match it to your boat and your car. Check the Outboard Boating Club of America weight capacity rating, and if your boat comes within 100 pounds of it, get the next larger trailer. You'll probably load your boat with a motor, luggage and extra gear.

Often overlooked on small trailers is wheel alignment. If the wheels are not properly aligned, tire wear increases. Worse yet, out-of-line wheels cause the trailer to swing from side to side to take up more than your share of the road.

Equip your trailer to meet the requirements of your state laws and those of any other states in which you will use it. The Uniform Vehicle Code recommends the following:

At least one red light visable for at least 500 feet to the rear of the trailer.

Trailers weighing up to 3,000 pounds gross should have two reflectors, one on each side. Those weighing more than 3,000 pounds should have additional clearance and side marker lamps. All trailers should have a stoplight if the towing car's stoplight is obscured.

TRAILERS OF more than 3,000 pounds should have brakes adequate to control their movement and which can be operated from the towing vehicle. Brakes should work automatically should there be an accidental unhitching.

All new boat trailers weighing more than 1,500 pounds loaded should have brakes on all wheels.

WHITE STILL FAVORED FOR BOATS

White remains the most popular hue with boats among boating enthusiasts throughout this country.

The annual marine paint color preference survey by C. A. Woolsey Paint and Water Color Co. has disclosed a slight increase in the use of color on boats on the nation's waterways. But white remains the strong favorite, with just under half the volume of topside paints being white of varying degrees of luster.

Black has declined in favor. Greys, blues and greens remain the three most popular color families. Such "warm" colors as shades of sand, yellow and coral are the least chosen.

In Foul Weather

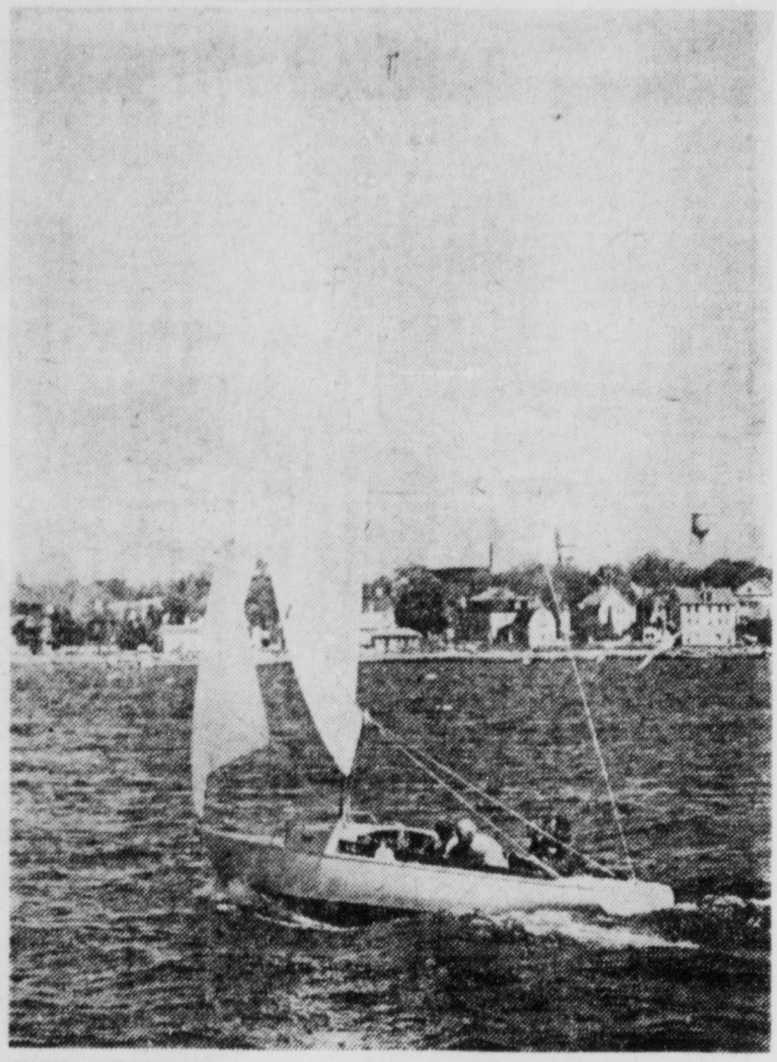
Heed nature's warning and put for shore when signs of a storm appear. But, if you should be caught in open water, steer your boat into the waves and reduce speed. Keep the center of gravity low by having passengers sit on the floorboards.

HIS PROWESS at single-handed sailing is demonstrated by Bill Cruz of Sausalito after five sailing lessons at the Pacific Coast Sailing School in Sausalito



THIS POPULAR sailing version of the Electric Cruising Sloop is handled by the Mariner Yacht Sales Inc. of Sausalito where a demonstrator is available. There will also be a rental unit this summer.

FORMER NATIONAL champion in doubles skiing, Dorwin illustrates the dry land instruction as given to the beginning water skier. # Anyone Who Loves Water Can Learn To Ski Well

Any water skier will tell you the easiest way to experience the free-wheeling thrill of flying is to skim lightly over the top of the water on a pair of five foot boards with foot bindings.

For sheer exhilaration, a feeling of complete cleanliness, and the thrill of swiftness multiplied several times actual speed, nothing holds more fascination than water skiing.

THE MOST captivating thing about water skiing is that anybody can do it, says Tom Dorwin, water ski advisor for Evinrude Motors.

He says the degree of accomplishment depends upon the individual—his determination, natural rhythm and early instruction. However, the only ones who fail to get up and ride the skis are those who really don't want to.

Anyone who loves water, speed, fun and a thrill will want to try water skis. Learning the fundamentals for pure family fun is easy.

Progress into competitive water skiing, with its tricks, jumping and slalom is another problem, Dorwin says.

All you need to water ski is a boat, fitted with a motor of 18 horsepower or more, a tow line, a pair of water skis, and a water ski belt.

SELECT SKIS that are of proper size. In general, skis that are five feet in length are best for those weighing up to 120 pounds, and five and one-half feet in length for those over 120 pounds. The bindings should fit the foot snugly but comfortably.

Dorwin, as most instructors, favors the dry land instruction preliminary to the actual water attempt. With a little practice on land the beginner will feel more comfortable when in the water, with the skis quite difficult to control on the first attempt.

Wet the bindings and feet at the water's edge and slip the toes into the front binding first. Then adjust the heel until it fits correctly.

NOW SIT down on the skis with a tow bar in hand. The instructor will grasp the tow rope and simulate the pull of the boat and motor against the tow. Skis should be about six inches apart. The knees should be tightly doubled up, with the arms around the knees and straight out in front of you.

The instructor will pull you into a standing position several times. Let him do the work—just let your body come up as he pulls.

This is the way it will be when you get in the water.

After a few such lessons, don a water ski belt or jacket and you are ready for the water. Even if you are a good swimmer, you should wear a floatation device, Dorwin insists.

YOUR START will be made in water that is at least hip deep.

Dorwin prefers to ride with the beginner the first few times so he can steady the novice as he comes out of the water. This is the critical point in learning to ski. Once up, riding is easy.

The driver will take the slack out of the tow lines, which are of exactly the same length for safety's sake. As the slight pull of the motor in gear steadies the beginner, word to "Hit it!" is given. Letting the boat do the work, just as the instructor did on land, you will glide to the top naturally. Then stand up and ride!

KEEP THE arms straight, the knees slightly flexed to absorb the shock of slight bumps, and the body leaned back against the pull of the tow boat.

If you just ride behind the boat a few times you will feel perfectly at home on the skis. Then you can start crossing the wake and some of the other activities that make the sport more enjoyable.

Before you start you should review a set of hand signals with the observer in the boat, as this will be your only means of communication once under way. On him and the driver rests the responsibility for a safe ride. An experienced driver will give you only short rides when you first start.

Watch Your Step

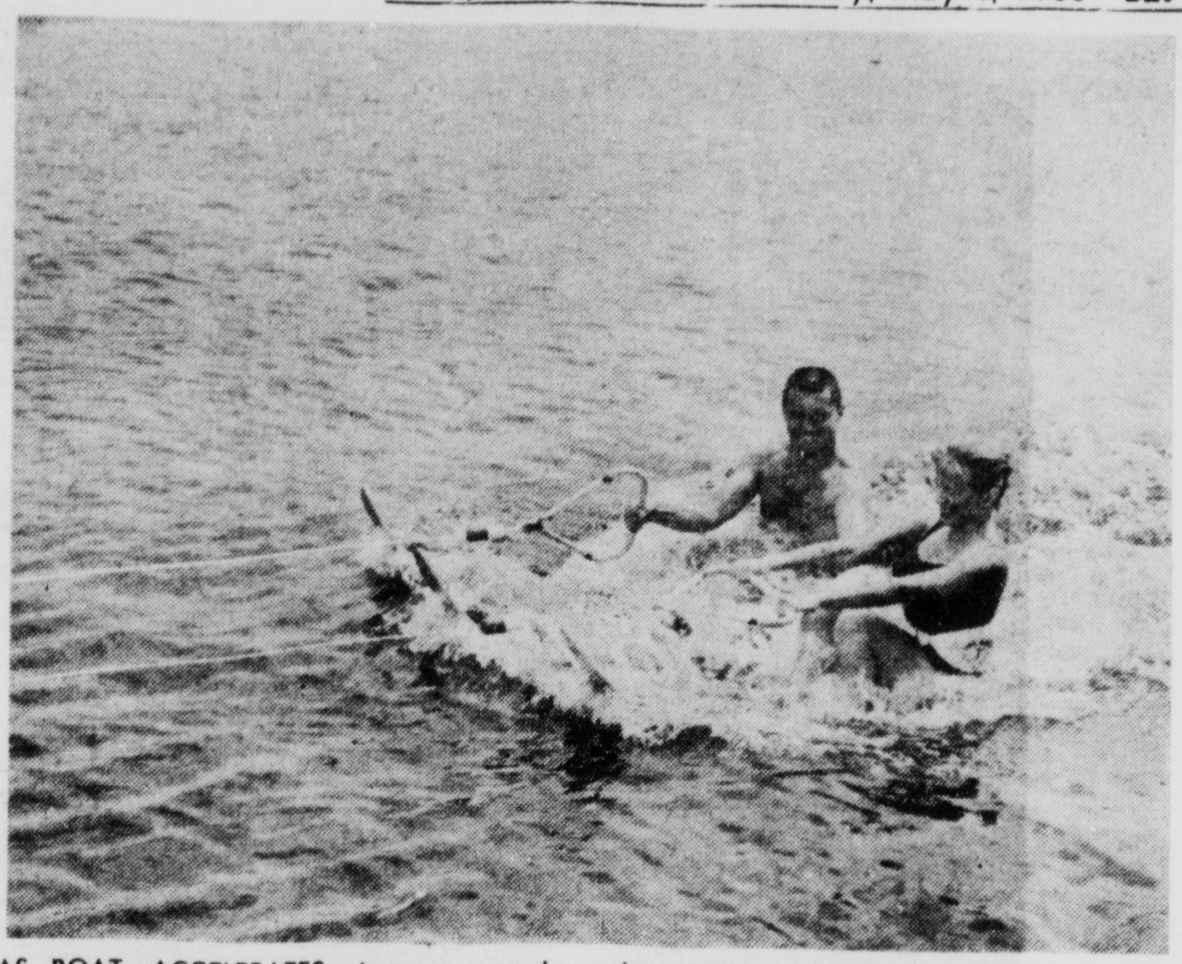
When boarding a small boat, step to the center of the boat and not on the gunwale. You'll stay drier that way.



AS BOAT ACCELERATES, instructor and skier begin to come out of the water. Note that student is still in crouched position, knees doubled and arms straight, letting power of the boat pull her up.

NOW THEY'RE UP and running, with the pupil doing fine. She keeps her knees slightly bent, arms straight, and leans back slightly against the pull of the tow rope.

OPEN FRIDAY NIGHTS

WITH A LITTLE PRACTICE, anyone can become an expert boat trailer handler. The important thing to remember when learning is to take it easy—don't try to back up too fast. When launching, it's a good idea to have another person direct you onto the ramp. Properly used, trailers are a tremendous boon to the boaters.

Boat Trailering Just Takes Practice

Boat trailers have played a big part in the growing popularity of outboard boating.

With a trailer, outboard skippers can enjoy boating on many different waterways whether they be near or even hundreds of miles away. A trailer also eliminates the need to rent a mooring slip. The rig can be brought home after each outing and stored in the owner's garage or back yard.

DESPITE THE many advantages of trailer boating, some boatmen are a little reluctant to give it a try. Some have the notion that trailering is a real chore. Not so.

If you've never pulled a trailer or are not the expert you would like to be, follow these suggestions:

Practice makes perfect. Hitch the trailer to your car some quiet Sunday morning and drive over to a large, empty parking lot. A shopping center is ideal. Spend some time getting the feel of backing the trailer. Try to back in a straight line for 50 feet or so. Then try to back into a marked parking space.

It won't take long to get the hang of it if you remember one point—turn the car wheel in the opposite direction from the way you want the trailer to go. The simplest way to do this is to get into the habit of gripping the steering wheel at the bottom, and from that position, turn it in the same direction you want the trailer to move. Sounds a little confusing, but by turning the steering wheel left when it is held at the bottom, you're actually turning the car wheels right and vice versa.

AFTER A short practice session you'll be ready to give it a try at the launching ramp. Perhaps your biggest problem will be the tendency to over steer which can cause the trailer to jackknife. Don't let it botner you. Just pull ahead and try again. Even an experienced trailer handler may have to make a couple of tries on a bad day.

Just before you back onto the ramp, loosen the trailer tie-downs, tilt up the motor and check to see that the drain plug is inserted. It's easier to do this before the trailer is backed to the water's edge. When the trailer is in launching position attach a mooring line to the boat, unhook the winch line and shove the boat off the trailer.

WHILE YOU'RE parking your car, either have someone hold the line or tie the boat to a pier where it will not interfere with other boats being launched. When others are waiting to use the ramp, get your car out of the way as quickly as possible. It's only common courtesy, the same as you would expect from other boatmen.

When You Ski, Keep Line Neat

When water skiing, make certain the tow line is free of knots.

It is estimated that a simple knot in a tow line decreases its strength up to 45 per cent. Back splice or whip the ends of the line to keep the ends from fraying.

If you construct your own tow lines, make certain that the yoke off the tow handle is no more than 11 inches deep. In other words, the two ends of the rope attached to the tow handle should meet in a single line not more than 11 inches from the handle.

This eliminates the possibility of accidental entanglement in the tow line.

Drain Plug Important

Even the most expert boatman has had the experience of launching his craft minus the drain plug. It is not only embarrassing, but sometimes damaging. The Evinrude Boating Foundation suggests that you replace your drain plug before you leave home, rather than at the launching site where you will likely be in a hurry and occupied with other things.

Boatman Should Be Careful He's Well Protected

Like an automobile owner, the boatman should have insurance to protect himself on two counts — property damage or injury he may cause to others and damage or injury he may suffer himself.

Of the two, the first, which is referred to as bodily injury and property damage liability insurance, is most important.

MANY BOATMEN are automatically covered for liability, at least to some extent, under their comprehensive home owner's policies. But since the coverage varies with different insurance companies, types of policies and parts of the country, it's wise to know for sure just how much coverage you have rather than assuming you have enough.

Your insurance agent can quickly explain the coverage and suggest an additional policy if it is needed.

Insurance on your own equipment is also important. Contingencies most often covered are fire, theft, collision, sinking, stranding and loss of motor overboard. These and other perils are covered in all risk and comprehensive policies, the type most often purchased by boat owners.

The annual premium for such coverage is usually about four per cent the declared value of the equipment. Other types of lesser coverage are also available. Some insurance policies carry a deductible clause stating that the owner must pay for damages which do not exceed a certain amount, usually from $25 to $100. As a result, premium costs are reduced.

COMPANIES dealing in boat insurance realize that the equipment is not always used the year round and it is on this premise that premiums are established. If insureds would limit their coverage to only the most active part of the season, premiums would have to be prorated and raised accordingly. This being the case, no significant savings can be made by canceling your policy at the end of the season. For the little extra cost involved, it's far better to keep your rig fully insured at all times to protect it against such perils as fire, theft, and windstorm that can occur at any time.

Significant premium savings can be made, however, by insuring your equipment for only its current book value. Depreciation must be taken into consideration for, obviously, a rig worth $2,000 five years ago will be worth considerably less today. In the event of loss, insurance companies will pay only the actual cost of repairing or replacing the equipment. You'll be money ahead if, when you renew your policy each year, you insure your equipment for only its current value.

SINCE INSURANCE is a detailed and sometimes confusing subject it's best to consult a qualified insurance agent whenever you have a question. Have him explain the different types of coverage available and choose the one best suited to your needs.

Being properly insured will give you peace of mind and make your boating even more fun.

CAR TOP BOATS have a number of advantages. For one thing, they are inexpensive. They are easy to handle, and can be launched almost anywhere. Car-toppers offer an excellent way of getting started in boating.

OUTBOARDS DON'T STEER LIKE CARS

When you are getting away from a pier or float, don't spin your wheel so far in one direction that the stern swings sharply against the obstruction, says Everett B. Morris in the Evinrude Boating Foundation publication, "Outboard Boating Skills."

Morris says to remember that outboard boats do not steer like automobiles or bicycles, which follow their front wheels. In boats, the stern responds to the steering impulse first and in the opposite direction from that which the bow is going to take. So, when you are in close quarters, give your stern room enough to swing when you turn.

Keep Close Check On Trailer Tires

Many a boat trip has been ruined by trailer tire problems caused from underinflation or overloading.

Tire experts strongly recommend that boat trailer tires be checked thoroughly before towing the family boat away on a trip.

Trailer tires need much higher inflation than passenger car tires. Underinflated, tire treads wear excessively; high internal heat and dangerous trailer sway are created.

Boat owner are also cautioned against overloading since boat trailer tires are manufactured in various sizes and ply ratings depending on the specified load a trailer is expected to carry.

Take Plenty Of Line Along

Before leaving on your next cruise, the Evinrude Boating Foundation suggests you make up a spare line or two and take it with you.

A bow, stern or anchor line may either be lost or used for some other purpose . . . so extra line comes in mighty handy.

To prevent unnecessary grief enroute, make a check of all lines before leaving on a cruise. A little extra work before the cruise will save a great deal of time—time that could better be spent enjoying your cruise.

Decorating To Match The Sea

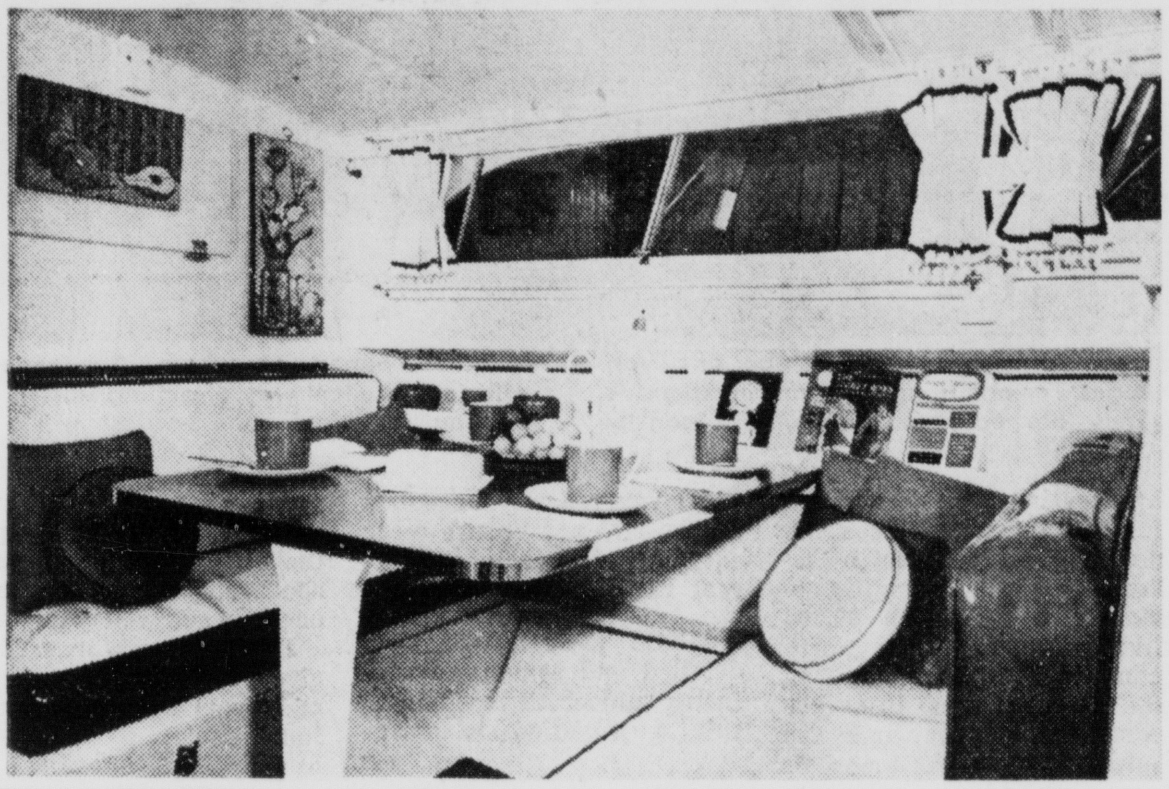
The interior decorator has "invaded" the realm of boating.

The increased influence of women in the boating world has been cited as one reason why horsepower ratings and cruising ranges now share the spotlight with "this year's colors," especially in the luxury class.

Also indicative of the trend toward "co-ordinated living" are the 36-foot Pacemaker cruiser and matching boathouse decorated by Jerome I. Manashaw and shown on this page.

Manashaw relied heavily upon vinyl-coated fabrics by Interchemical Corp. in colors matching the sea and sky—blue, white and olive green.

What he had in mind, Manashaw says, was the desire of more and more of today's "sailors" for charm and warmth of on-board living as against the once popular prospect of "roughing it."



THE DINETTE SET aboard the Pacemaker cruiser can provide any homemaker with clues for clever decorating of small areas. Designer Jerome I. Manashaw used a simple color combination of white and bright blue accented with olive green. The seating, for dining or, with table folded away, for lounging, is covered in a blue and white patent vinyl. Headlining is a durable white vinyl fabric. The dinette table top is blue, and the white drapery boasts blue trimming. Paintings are by Kenneth Cox.

THE MAIN CABIN of the Pacemaker also featured the "colors matched to sea and sky" — blue, white and olive green — that Manashaw used throughout the cruiser and the matching boathouse. A delightful vinyl print, "Dizzy Daisy" by Quaintance, lends fun and charm to boat and boathouse alike with no fear of fading or foul weather. It covers the entire sofa including storage drawers, as well as the lounge chair and pilot seat on the opposite side of the cabin. The print drapery is a matching fabric trimmed with blue fringe. The small forward stateroom, visible through the doorway, is also brightened with this vinyl print. In the cockpit area of the boat, casual seating is afforded by a white captain's chair with a blue striped fabric. The handsome companion piece is a pedestal table from Alladin Plastics. To make the cabins appear more spacious, white is used throughout as headlining while bulkheads and woodwork are painted white. The deck, from stem to stern, is uniformly carpeted in bright olive green.

A Fast Growing Sport—

SCUBA Diving Is Attracting New Thousands

Historical mention of skin diving dates back to several centuries B.C., but it has only been in the last decade or so that the sport has come into its own.

Today it is one of the fastest growng water sports in the world.

MOST beginners start out with basic skin diving equipment which includes the face mask, snorkel and fins. Often a spear gun or underwater camera is added to make the sport more exciting. With this equipment, underwater enthusiasts can have unlimited fun and adventure.

The next step is SCUBA diving. The word SCUBA comes from the first letters of Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus. In this phase of the sport, more elaborate equipment is required. In addition to extra equipment the diver should have thorough training before attempting to SCUBA diving course. Such courses have become quite popular and are now offered in many cities throughout the country.

Basic SCUBA diving equipment consists of one or more air tanks, a regulator assembly, face mask and fins. To this may be added suits of either the wet or dry type, weight belts, spear guns, and underwater camera and numerous other pieces of equipment depending on just how far the diver wants to get into the sport.

SKIN AND SCUBA divers usually operate from a boat which allows them to get into more interesting water and also provides a convenient resting place between dives. Most divers make use of the skin diving flag, a red flag with a white diagonal stripe, and either fly it from a staff on the boat or attach it to a bobber floating in the water. It is designed to warn other boatmen that skin divers are operating in the area and that they should stay at least 100 feet away.

ALL SKIN divers should follow a few simple rules.

First and most important, never dive alone. Have a dependable "buddy" with you. Be familiar with the waters. Know the sea life in the area and the influence of tides and current. Have a boat or other operating base where you can go to rest. Be in good physical condition and know your limitations. Don't try to overdo it. Have a skin diving flag clearly visible to let other boatmen know you are in the water. Do not dive in areas where others are fishing from boats or the shore.

Diving is a sport that attracts thousands of new enthusiasts each year. Although it is not difficult to learn, it does require training and instruction. Before giving it a try, be sure you are qualified.

SKIN DIVING is one of the fastest growing sports in the country. Most divers prefer to operate from a boat, for it allows them to get out into more interesting waters and serves as a convenient rest place between dives. The skin diving flag in front of the boat is designed to warn other boatmen that a diver is in the area. Boatmen should stay at least 100 feet away from the flag.

Disarmament Held Important Way For World Peace

How to achieve world peace—and whether it is worth the cost—drew the attention of a throng of Marinites at an Interfaith Peace Conference yesterday in the Civic Center.

Two principal speakers both held that disarmament is a necessary prerequisite of peace. Both held it is not the sole prerequisite.

Here are reports on afternoon and evening sessions of the conference:

By RICHARD LYTTLE

Two out of every three dollars paid in taxes by Californians goes to the federal government, and of each dollar the federal government receives, 74 cents goes to pay for past wars and new armaments.

State Controller Alan Cranston, the state's chief tax collector, cited these figures to 50 persons attending the opening session of an Interfaith Peace Conference at the Marin County Civic Center yesterday.

"The cost dwarfs all imagination," Cranston said. A new Saturn booster rocket now being designed will cost 770 million dollars to build. And it will cost 20 million dollars each time it is fired.

The conference, sponsored by the Marin Council of Churches, continued last night and this morning. Cranston's topic was "Can California Afford Peace?"

"Of course it can," he said.

He said humanity cannot afford a full-scale war and it is very doubtful that the arms race can continue at the present pace.

"The costs are astronomical, the risks immeasurable, and the outcome is not clear," he said.

Cranston said he is not a pacifist. He does not believe we should put down our arms, leave ourselves unprotected, and hope that the Russians will show good faith and follow our example.

But he believes in striving for peace and he thinks a "real peace" is possible. A real peace would be one with safe-

Hatred . . . retribution . . . fear . . . greed . . . impatience . . .sloth.

These make up the price of peace, said Byron Johnson special assistant to the director of the Agency for International Development, in a Marin Civic Center speech last night. They are "what we would have to give up to buy the things that peace requires."

Johnson spoke to about 100 persons at the after-dinner session of an Inter-faith Peace Conference sponsored by the Marin Council of Churches. The conference concluded this morning with a breakfast discussion, led by Rev. Donald Baldwin, council of churches president, on what Marin congregations can do to promote peace.

"We can be sure the human race will someday accept disarmament; the question is, whether before World War III or after?" said Johnson, former economics professor, gov-

Fire Hoses, Dogs Again Used On Negroes In South

COMBINED AP & UPI

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Firemen today turned high pressure hoses on Negro demonstrators for the second straight day in this racially-tense city.

Police followed close behind with dogs straining at their leashes.

More than 50 demonstrators, including a number of children, were arrested.

There have been more than 1,000 arrests in the past three days.

Twenty-five Negro youths were arrested today when they tried to march on city hall. The action then shifted to a park where hundreds of Negroes were routed yesterday by firehoses.

Negroes tried a diversionary tactic by bringing out small groups from a church one block from the park.

Police and firemen quickly set up the hoses and brought out the dogs.

A woman carrying an infant approximately three months old stood for awhile in the forefront of the group of church demonstrators waiting to come out. But finally, most of that group dispersed.

About 3,000 Negroes gathered in the park to confront the policemen and firemen.

Scores of Negroes, most of them high school age, were sent sprawling by the terrific force of the fire hoses. The dogs were pulled back when the water seemed to be effectively containing the main body of demonstrators within the square block confines of the park.

Officers skirted the surrounding streets and yards, however, to prevent any groups from reforming for a march toward the city hall, which was apparently the main objective.

In Washington, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy canceled a speech to remain in his office today, and dispatched two top aides to Birmingham in an effort to ease racial tensions there.

President John F. Kennedy was reported dismayed at the violence there, a visitor to his office reported.

The attorney general had been scheduled to deliver a Law Day address at the University of Virginia Law School at Charlottesville, Va. Instead, he remained in his Justice Department office to keep in touch with the situation.

C. Burke Marshall, assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Rights Division, and Joseph F. Dolan, assistant deputy attorney general, were dis-

Reporter Tells What It's Like In Alabama

By PAUL PHILLIPS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Five firemen stood less than 50 feet away from here yesterday sweeping methodically with a high pressure hose and sending hundreds of racial demonstrators tumbling in the street.

The force downs a man as fast as a charging tackle on a football field and is no less damaging.

I was in a corner telephone booth dictating a story as a crowd of chanting, singing, Negroes surged time and again into the face of a police blockade. Spray hung across the intersection like fog.

When the first powerful blast hit the frontline of anti-segregation marchers, they toppled and rolled in the streets, clinging to the curb and to each other.

As the hose swung away, they jeered the firemen, taunting with catcalls. But the ones who didn't flee at first soon were routed by the full force of spray.

Then the firemen turned their attention to a small group of Negroes on the corner where I was standing.

"Let's get those people there," an officer shouted.

The firemen swung the hose quickly and the gush of water splattered the seven Negroes on the corner. They fled into a restaurant and firemen followed, playing their hose in the restaurant for two or three minutes.

"They're turning the hose on us," I shouted to another newsman.

Elvin Stanton of radio station WSGN, jumped into the phone booth with me. We braced for the blast of water which hit the glass wall with a roar.

The water was brown, then a boiling white froth which roared through the cracks in

Home Is Destroyed By $75,000 Blaze

Fire destroyed a six-room view home on fashionable Cloud View Road today, with loss estimated by the owner at $75,000.

The entire interior of the Dr. Sigurd von Christierson home at 71 Cloud View Road was ablaze by the time the Sausalito Fire Department responded to a call from a neighbor who saw smoke and flame billowing from the residence.

"We didn't save a thing," said Mrs. von Christierson, who was at work at Miller Realty on Princess Street in Sausalito when the blaze broke out. Her husband, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, was at work at St. Luke's Hospital in San Francisco.

The modern home, overhanging a cliff with a panoramic view of San Francisco Bay, was left only a blackened shell.

Firemen were called at 10:10 a.m. All three fire trucks, with 25 paid firemen and volunteers responded to the alarm. Two trucks from the Alto Fire Department were called to stand by at the Sausalito firehouse.

Mrs. von Christierson said the home was insured, but she was unsure whether all furniture and personal belongings were covered. She and her husband stopped temporarily with Mrs. A. Fraser Gump at 65 Cloud View Road after being called to see firemen pouring water on the ruins of their home.

Firemen could hazard no guess as to what started the blaze. It apparently began in the living room, which looked out through broad windows on the bay, and worked through kitchen and bedrooms.

Great Weather –For The Fish

The fish got all the breaks today as trout season opened with a soggy drizzle in Marin County.

If the rains keep up, the fish may take over. The Weather Bureau repeated the familiar weekend forecast today —occasional rain tonight and tomorrow in the Bay Area.

The storm started slowly this morning with light drizzles in most areas of the county. By mid-morning, Woodacre had .05 of an inch, Ross and Point Reyes Station, .03; Muir Woods, .02, and Larkspur, .01. But the rain was spotty, by noon San Rafael had only a trace.

Late Execution Stays Leave Some Shattered Nerves, Upset Warden

Yesterday's cliff-hanging stay of execution for three inmates of San Quentin Prison's Death Row left some badly shattered nerves and an upset warden.

"We very seldom get a stay this late. I think it's a pretty horrible thing to wait until the very last minute," Warden Fred R. Dickson said in a news conference yesterday. "I think the law should be tightened to prevent it."

U. S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas halted the executions of three men just two hours before the first gas pellets were to be dropped.

Dickson said the last-minute action was "hard on the condemned men, it's hard on us, and it's hard on everyone else."

Meanwhile, former window washer Charles J. Golston, 21, told what it was like to have his fate changed from death in the gas chamber to life imprisonment.

"I just stood there staring and then let out a big yell," Golston said as he recalled learning of his reprieve Thursday night. "I told the other inmates on the Row and they gave me a big cheer."

Golston was sentenced to die for the August, 1961, rape and murder of a 79-year-old Los Angeles woman. Gov. Edmund G. Brown said he spared Golston's life because he was only 19 at the time of the crime and because of recent evidence showing schizophrenic tendencies and sexual abnormalities.

The life sentence carries no possibility of parole.

"I've been on the Row 15 months," Golston said. "I've seen 15 men walk out of there and never come back.

"This is the second time I've had a date downstairs (the gas chamber). I came pretty close each time.

"It's hard on a man's nerves going through that. I was tense, but I never did lose my nerve. I always had that hidden hope.

"If a man loses that hidden hope, I believe he's done for.

"I prayed, I just didn't pray every night. I prayed constantly. I was always looking for some miracle. It happened."

Through a coincidence in setting by two different trail judges, four men were to die

Two Demand Trial In Death Penalty Protest

A University of California student and a New York youth, both arrested in a death penalty protest demonstration outside San Quentin Prison, demanded a jury trial yesterday.

Peter R. Paskin, 18, Berkeley student, and Rober D. Polansky, 20, a New Yorker living with friends in Berkeley, pleaded innocent to charges that they ignored orders to disperse. They were among some 200 persons who gathered Thursday night at the main prison gate to protest a triple execution scheduled yesterday but postponed.

Paskin, Polansky and 10 other young men and women were taken to Marin County Jail for allegedly ignoring repeated warnings from sheriff's deputies to move away from the gate roadway, on which they were sitting.

Municipal Court Judge Harold J. Haley sought a speedy disposition of the misdemeanor charges against four of the demonstrators, who were under 21, for California law requires that a jailed minor must either be represented in court by a lawyer or his parents must be notified.

The judge called San Rafael attorney Hadden W. Roth to

Planes Collide; One Goes Down

MOUNTAIN HOME AIR FORCE BASE, Idaho (AP) — Two Air Force planes collided while refueling in midair near West Yellowstone, Mont., last night. One landed safely, but the other was presumed to have crashed.

A search for the missing plane, a B-47 bomber, began this morning in the snow-covered mountain country near the Idaho-Wyoming border.

The other plane, a KC-135 tanker, landed safely here. All five crewmen aboard were unhurt.

Mill Valley Might Hold Taxes At $2.20

Mill Valley city councilmen juggled fines and service charges today with sufficient success that City Mgr. A. E. Almcrants said next year's property tax rate could be held to $2.20 per $100 assessed valuation.

Almcrants said at opening of the special council study session that he hoped to hold the line at $2.25. The council did better than that.

This was accomplished by agreement to increase licenses and permits by 32 per cent, fines and penalties by 30 per cent, and service charges by a miniscule .003 of one per cent —and by switching such items as checking planning fees and sewer charges from "service" to "permit" category to give them the 32 per cent hike.

The city manager called it unrealistic to try to hold to the current $1.98 tax rate, in view of the fact that last year's budget was financed in part by using up $50,000 of reserve funds. He said that without the reserves it would have required about a $2.25 rate.

Almcrants suggested levying

3 Electrocuted

MARIPOSA (UPI) — A telephone line being installed by a California Youth Authority crew whipped into a 12,000 volt power line yesterday, electrocuting two youths and a foreman. Two other CYA youths were hospitalized.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Reds Admit Kozlov Ailing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party today the virtually unprecedented step of announcing that Frol Kozlov—billed as heir apparent to Premier Nikita Khrushchev—was ill.

The announcement, published in the Soviet press, did not say what ailed the 55-year-old secretary of the Communist party.

Kozlov began his political rise in Moscow during World War II. He became first secretary of the Leningrad party organization in 1950, but played no prominent part on the national stage until after the death of Stalin in 1953.

He was out of sight for about a month in 1961, missing the May Day parade that year too, but soon showed up looking tanned and healthy. He told reporters then that he had suffered "a severe heart attack."

31 Die In Fiery Crash

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Officials counted 31 dead today in the crash of a Brazilian airliner that plowed into a heavily built up area but miraculously hit only an unoccupied apartment building.

At least 20,000 persons rushed to the scene, seriously hampering rescue efforts. Several were reported killed when a fire truck slammed into part of the crowd.

Despite the throng, 17 persons were snatched alive from the blazing wreckage and rushed to local hospitals. One person was missing from the 44 passengers and five crewmen aboard the two-engined Convair.

The plane plunged to earth shortly after takeoff last night.

Speaks For Death Penalty

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The furor over Gov. Edmund G. Brown's limited death penalty moratorium bill is obscuring another measure which "will virtually eliminate capital punishment," an assemblyman declares.

C. George Deukmejian (R-Long Beach) said yesterday that the bill by Assemblyman John Knox (D-Richmond) should be defeated when it comes up for vote on the Assembly floor.

The bill would allow anyone who has a conscientious objection to the death penalty to sit on a jury hearing a capital case.

Hollywood Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jacques Bergerac has filed for divorce from actress Dorothy Malone, a day after she sued him for divorce.

Bergerac charged in his suit yesterday that Miss Malone moved out of their Beverly Hills home Thursday with their children, Mimi, 2, and Diane, 14 months.

Both Bergerac and Miss Malone, each 35, are demanding custody of the children and have charged each other with cruelty. They married four years ago.

Solo Flight Postponed

HONOLULU (AP)—Betty Miller, 37, attempting to become the first woman to fly solo from the United States to Australia, postponed today for 24 hours the second leg of her flight.

She scheduled her new departure time for dawn tomorrow.

Nixon 'Send Off'

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon has been invited to attend a May 22 Los Angeles County Republican "grass roots" dinner as an honored guest.

The dinner also would serve as a "send off" for Nixon, who plans to move to New York.

Rocky Apartments

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has purchased an apartment in a building under construction next to one in which he already maintains two floors of apartments, his press secretary says.

The New York Daily News said today in a copyright story that the two apartments overlooking Central Park are being connected.

"It seems to be shaping up into a gorgeous honeymoon home, complete with kids," the News said.

Thresher Momentoes

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (UPI)—A packet containing a scale model and a photograph of the nuclear submarine Thresher as well as other momentoes of the ill-fated vessel will be given the family of each of the 129 men aboard her on her last voyage.

A spokesman at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, where the Thresher was built and where she underwent overhaul before her final voyage, said yesterday the articles in the package were mostly for the children of the lost crewmen.

Author Is Injured

TEMECULA (UPI) — Author Erle Stanley Gardner, 73, was recuperating at his ranch today from injuries suffered when his three-wheeled desert vehicle overturned in Baja California, Mexico.

The famed mystery writer suffered several cracked ribs in the mishap in the Gonzaga Bay area on the east side of Baja California. He was accompanying an archeological expedition.

Gardner said he planned to return to Gonzaga Bay "as soon as I can."

Six Die In Blaze

ROCKVILLE, Ind. (UPI)—Fire swept through a home for mentally retarded children here last night, killing six children and injuring five others, one critically.

All of the dead were between three and 10 years of age.

Strict Curfew Is Clamped On Haiti

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Neighboring Haiti teetered on the brink of a new explosion today as President Francois Duvalier declared martial law and imposed a strict 8 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew.

No reason was given for the measures announced last night. Haitians feared swift new reprisals from Duvalier, tightening his hold on the impoverished Negro republic to head off a threatened revolt May 15.

MORE KILLING

Reports reaching Santo Domingo through the Duvalier censorship said informed circles in Haiti spoke of more killings and reprisals than was commonly believed.

They coincided with reports from U. S. sources in Washington that Duvalier has mounted a reign of terror, including murder, torture, arrests, and purges of military officers.

Unconfirmed reports from Port au Prince, the Haitian capital, said Duvalier's underground opponents hurled a bomb that failed to explode at a water installation Thursday night. But travelers from Port au Prince said they had no evidence to support rumors of a large-scale clash inside Haiti.

MARTIAL LAW

Duvalier declared martial law soon after the inter-American peace mission seeking to cool off threats of a Haiti-Dominican clash had left Port au Prince Thursday night.

The peace mission from the Organization of American States won assurances from the Duvalier government that Haiti would protect foreign embassies and the rights of Haitians who had taken asylum in them.

USSR Faces Possibility Of War Defeat

WASHINGTON (AP)—For the first time, the Soviet Union is frankly facing up to the possibility it could be defeated in a war, an Air Force analyst concludes after a study of Russian military writings.

Further, he finds that the Soviet high command is not of one mind on nuclear age strategy. Russian military conservatives, he says, "regard the nuclear rocket only as a new and important addition to the armament locker.

"The radicals call it 'decisive' in the sense that it reduces, or eliminates, the need for other weapons . . ."

Lt. Col. Murray Green, the Air Force's associate chief of research and analysis, reached these conclusions in an analysis of the first comprehensive discourse on military doctrine to appear in the Soviet Union since 1926.

The book, entitled "Military Strategy," is a compilation of military writings of 15 high-ranking officials, including Soviet Marshal V. D. Sokolovsky, who also was the study's editor.

It was issued last year in a first edition of 20,000 copies, all of which were sold almost immediately.

In his analysis, Green points out the book is packed with doctrinal contradictions due to the authors' diverse military theories. But, he says, the book must be taken seriously as a reflection of Soviet military thinking "despite its shortcomings."

"Military Strategy" has done more than any other book "to encourage realism in the Soviet Union about nuclear war," writes Green.

It concedes the possibility of civilian casualties "in the tens of millions" and has this to say about battlefield casualties:

"It is possible that entire subdivisions, units and even army groups will be destroyed. However, this should not have any bearing on the speed of operations."

Green figures this means "the Soviets expect to fight to win. They have not succumbed to the defeatism which argues that destruction will be so great as to make pointless a need to prosecute the war in the most vigorous way possible."

Yet apparently, the Russian officials have no blind belief in the invincibility of 'Mother Russia.'"

"For the first time," writes Green, "The Sokolovsky study openly discusses the theoretical possibility of defeat. The Soviet Union is now strong enough militarily, and conscious enough of her strength, to discuss chances of defeat dispassionately."

Green singles out the line "The laws of strategy are objective and apply impartially to both sides."

"There is no more frank or significant statement in the study than this one for it reflects the Soviet Union's return to fallibility," he says.

House GOP Group Claims Credit For $1.2-Billion Cut In U.S. Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Republican Congressional Committee claimed credit today for cuts of nearly 1.2 billion dollars in President John F. Kennedy's budget—and promptly drew a Democratic rebuttal.

"A grandstand play," commented Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee.

The GOP claim for all 1963 budget-cutting to date was made in the committee's weekly newsletter.

"Pressing their battle for economy," the letter read, "House Republicans have already cut nearly 1.2 billion dollars from New Frontier spending requests for fiscal 1964 and came close to lopping off another 1.6 billion."

The Republicans took credit for a cut of 420 million in the foreign aid program, 150 million in the Treasury-Post Office appropriation bill, 92 million from Interior Department funds, 203 million from a supplemental appropriation bill, and 309.5 million dollars from the Welfare Department's 1964 money allowance.

"I can't imagine where they came close to cutting off the additional 1.6 billion," Cannon told a reporter, "and they certainly have no valid claim to the other cuts."

The Missourian pointed out that the annual foreign aid money bill has not even been considered by Congress, but was reduced 420 million dollars by the president himself.

Most of the other reductions for which the Republicans took credit, Cannon said, were made originally by the Democratic-dominated Appropriations Committee and were upheld by the Democratic-controlled House.

Cannon conceded that Republicans on his committee were responsible for a cut of 500 million dollars in funds requested by the president for the accelerated public works program. The House overrode the committee, however, and restored 450 million.

In only one instance, Cannon said, have Republicans been able to cut a bill on the House floor below the figures recommended by the appropriations committee. The exception was a reduction of $7,000 from the $14,000 the committee had approved for the entertainment of delegates to next year's meeting here of the International Social Security Assn.

Unemployed Painter Is Found Dead

Arthur Edward Little, an unemployed painter, was found dead in his attic apartment at 1137 C. Street, San Rafael, yesterday by a friend who had become worried after not seeing him for three days.

According to San Rafael police and Coroner Frank J. Keaton, John Raymond Campbell of 1520 Grand Avenue, San Rafael, found Little lying nude on his bed at 3:36 p.m.

Campbell told police and Keaton that the apartment door was open when he arrived. Keaton said Little had apparently kicked the door open when he forgot his key. Death was attributed to natural causes.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Williams Mortuary in San Rafael.

Little, a native of Ohio, lived in Marin County for about 30 years.

Photographer Is Sued For 'Payola' Charge

A complaint of slander has been filed against Mill Valley photographer Philip Planert by Kee Coleman Studio of San Francisco.

The complaint, which claims plaintiffs suffered $25,000 damages, states that Planert in a radio broadcast Feb. 14 and 17 on station KTIM'S "Marin Sounding Board" accused the Coleman studio of being engaged in "payola."

The San Francisco studio says Planert charged it with giving a "kick-back," that it "has to pay for a contract" to obtain business, and that it is engaged in a "very vicious racket."

The suit against Planert and three John Does was filed in San Francisco Superior Court by Coleman Studio co-partners David Vickery, Theodor Logan and Willard Gibson, represented by Gladstein, Andersen, Leonard and Sibbett, attorneys.

Planert, according to the attorneys, has until May 23 to appear in court for plea.

The Mill Valley photographer on KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board" complained of "kick-back" practices in connection with photography contracts for high school yearbooks.

JOHNSON

ernment economist and Colorado congressman.

If it comes after World War III, he suggested, it may be too late, for even if an enemy did not reply in kind to a nuclear attack, "fallout from its own weapons . . . would lead to substantial deaths in the country that launched the initial assault."

"The only way you can truly destroy an enemy," said Johnson, "is to make him your friend."

Citing U.S. aid to Japan and West Germany, he suggested: "If we could forgive our enemies of yesteryear, we can forgive our adversaries of today."

Peace, he said "requires justice . . . Revenge and retribution led to retaliation." Peace requires "faith that surmounts fear." Peace requires patience: "Peace is not some sunrise that is going to break over the Sierra (but) a massive institution to be built brick-by-brick . . . one we must build before our nuclear knowledge makes of this world a vast incineration."

And "the cost of peace includes work": mere high-sounding resolutions will not prevent war.

Three Marin leaders gave reactions to Johnson's talk: attorneys Julian Mack II, representing the Jewish faith, and Peter Allen Smith, of the Catholic faith, and banker Byron W. Leydecker of the Protestant faiths.

"As a community, we in America have not got in the habit of talking seriously about peace," said Mack. Everyone says he is for peace, but too few are ready to pay the price Johnson outlined.

Smith raised the question, "Who is our neighbor?" and answered it: "Our neighbor is our brother and sister throughout the world . . . Nations cannot continue to proceed on their separate ways; they must band together to achieve peace."

There is no longer, declared Smith, such a thing as a "just war."

Leydecker posed the problem of the economic cost of peace. Ten per cent of the U.S. national product "is being pumped into defense industries," he said, and to disarm would cause huge dislocations.

Johnson responded that dependence on arms for industry has caused vast economic dislocations every five years since World War II, because each new weapon quickly becomes obsolete. In contract, reducing from 50 per cent to 10 per cent the portion of national productivity devoted to arms at the end of World War II caused far less dislocation than expected, he said. And disarmament would free scientific brains and industrial capacity for other, better uses.

"The rest of the world is hungry and eager for disarmament," said Johnson, "but it must wait for the United States."

CRANSTON

guards through an international inspection agency. It would be a peace that nations could rely upon.

As long as the armament race continues, living conditions throughout the world will continue to get worse and worse, he declared.

Cranston said starvation and disease are harsh realities in most of the world today. He asked members of the audience to pretend they were about to be born into the world.

"One in 20 of you would be born in the United States; one in 20 would be born in Russia, and one out of four would be born in what we call Red China," he said.

He said two-thirds would be born colored and would grow up in a society that preached that you could never trust a white man. Many of the colored would be born in Africa and one out of five of these would die before his first birthday.

One out of nine would be born in India and most of these would live in poverty, being hungry just about every day of their short lives. Only half would live beyond 21.

"The situation is getting worse, not better," he said. Instead of the destructive effort of making defensive and offensive weapons, mankind should be doing the constructive job of raising the standard of living.

Cranston said the adjustment from an armament economy to a peaceful economy would be a difficult one. He suggested these steps:

1. The government could subsidize factories until they made the change from weapons to other products.

2. There could be a program for training workers to take on new tasks.

3. There could be an expansion of public projects such as roads, dams, medical institutions, schools.

At the opening of the conference, chairman Rev. Wesley C. Baker of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael read telegrams from Sens. Clair M. Engle and Thomas H. Kuchel. Both gave their blessings to the conference, saying such discussions contribute greatly to the cause of peace.

Cranston was introduced by Fred F. Enemark, president of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

OBITUARIES

John Henry Cozad, 82, Succumbs

John Henry Cozad, 82, of San Rafael, died in a local rest home yesterday after a long illness. A native of Kansas, he had lived in San Rafael 63 years.

His family moved to California when he was six months old. He had worked most of his life as a hotel clerk.

His wife, Ellen J. Cozad, predeceased him.

Survivors are three daughters, Mrs. Estelle Irving of Nicasio, Mrs. Velma Duhem of Atherton, and Mrs. Merey Owen of Napa; a son, John M. Cozad of San Bruno; three sisters, Mrs. Ella Pederson of Fairfax, Mrs. Ethel Longland of Oakland, and Mrs. Edith Metizner of Modesto; 14 grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Harry M. Williams Mortuary, San Rafael. Burial will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

TAXES

a $1 per month sewer charge as another means of raising revenue, eliminating a sewer use tax. But Councilman George Blackwell pointed out this would be "giving a break to people with septic tanks."

Blackwell countered with a proposal to take from the current service category the sewer tap fees and connection fees and put them into the permit category, which would make them subject to the 33 per cent increase.

The council abandoned, at least temporarily, proposals to increase parking meter charges and levy charges on commuter parking. The money would not go into the general fund anyhow, councilmen noted.

Almcrants said there are about 60 sources of revenue other than property taxes which are being used by some cities. The City of Colton, he said, made up a list of these sources. But, said Almcrants, "we're using most of them."

Upon hearing the list, Mayor Sheeks commented, "It seems to me that American ingenuity in space exploration is exceeded only by the ability to find ways to raise money."

The budget proposed by Almcrants calls for expenditure of $875,361 during the next fiscal year.

'Mayor' In San Rafael

Rick Raznikov, a junior, yesterday was elected "mayor of San Rafael" in balloting at San Rafael High School for mayor, police chief, city treasurer and councilmen during "Youth in Government" day, May 13.

Carl Schmidt, student body president, said he was unable to release vote totals because of school policy but that all contests "were won by extremely small margins."

The elected officials will appoint nine other students to "city" positions and all will spend the day with their counterparts learning how a city operates. The day is sponsored by the San Rafael Kiwanis Club.

Elected chief of police was Stuart Drange; treasurer, Carol Britting; and councilmen Bob Magladry, Bob Black, Dave Hellman and Bob McLennon.

Two College Students Heading For Asilomar

represent Paskin, Polansky and Bill M. Cook, 19, and John J. Poland, 20, both of San Francisco. Cook and Poland pleaded guilty and were sentenced to one day in jail, with credit for time served since their arrest. Judge Haley set the jury trial for Paskin and Polansky for Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in municipal court.

Roth urged dismissal of the charges, saying there was no intention to disturb the peace and once the demonstrators were removed from the gate, the problem was solved.

"The case is unusual," he said. "It was a matter of principle for them to use this method to protest the death penalty."

A fifth demonstrator, Anthony Wilson Brown, 27, of San Francisco pleaded guilty, without counsel, and was sentenced to one day in jail.

In answer to a question from Judge Haley, Poland said he was a student at San Francisco State College but "I'd like to be considered a common criminal."

The rest of the demonstrators who were jailed were released yesterday on $262 bail each and ordered to appear in municipal court Tuesday afternoon.

patched to Birmingham.

They were to confer with white and Negro leaders, seeking some possible easing of tensions which have accompanied a series of Negro demonstrations there.

Ten "freedom marchers," carrying on a pilgrimage by a slain Baltimore integrationist, were in jail today at Fort Payne arrested immediately after they crossed the state line into Alabama.

The marchers, five white men and five Negroes, were arrested by Alabama Highway Patrolmen yesterday. The group had been pelted by eggs when they stopped for lunch on the Georgia roadside, about a mile before reaching Alabama.

"There is the grave possibility that blood will flow in the streets of our cities" if America cannot solve the problem of liberty and justice for all, a civil rights leader warned in Washington yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. E. Franklin Jackson, president of the Washington branch of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, expressed fears at a press conference that Birmingham Negroes may resort to other tactics if a strategy of nonviolence fails to end segregation and discrimination. A failure of this strategy, said Jackson, "would prohibit us from containing those forces like the Black Muslims who preach violence and hate.

"Unless America is willing to come to grips with the problem of liberty and justice for all, there is the grave possibility that blood will flow in the streets of our cities like it has not since the Civil War."

yesterday. Golston was saved through the commuted sentence. Death for the three others was stayed by U. S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

John Frank Vlahovich, 31, Donald G. Franklin, 34, and Joseph Rosoto, 39, were scheduled to die for the 1959 slaying of Leslie J. Simpson, an Anaheim tavern owner who was slated to testify against Rosoto in a burglary trial. The man who did the actual killing is still at large.

Justice Douglas halted the executions pending decisions by the high court on two cases that might have a bearing in law on the case of the three men.

Vlahovich was eating what he thought would be his last meal when Dickson told him of the stay yesterday.

"You're not kidding me, are you, warden?" he asked. Vlahovich was scheduled to die at 10 a.m. with Franklin. Rosoto, to die at 2 p.m., was stunned and speechless when he heard the news. Franklin said "Thank God."

Kung Like Luther Is Asking Reform Of Roman Church

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Hans Kung has been called "a modern Martin Luther who stayed in the Catholic Church."

He may not relish this appellation. But there are striking resemblances between the brilliant young Swiss theologian who recently toured the United States, and the 16th Century German monk who sparked the Protestant reformation.

The most obvious similarity is that both of them set out at a comparatively youthful age to achieve sweeping reforms in the church.

Luther was 34 years old, and a professor of theology at a German university (Wittenberg), when he nailed his famous "95 Theses" to a church door.

Kung was 34 years old, and professor of theology at a German university (Tubingen), when he published a bold blueprint for modernizing the Catholic Church.

His book, entitled "The Council, Reform and Reunion" (Sheed & Ward, $3.95), has been widely acclaimed by Catholics and Protestants as a manifesto of liberal hopes for the Second Vatican Council.

It won Kung an influential post as a theological consultant to the council fathers. And it made him, in the words of Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, a Presbyterian observer at the council, "A kind of symbol of what Protestants would like to believe contemporary Roman Catholicism can become."

During the past month, Kung has been visiting the United States, speaking before capacity crowds at leading Catholic institutions from coast to coast. He returned to Europe this week.

At each of his public appearances in America, Kung received a thunderous ovation when he asserted that a new era of freedom is dawning in the Catholic Church.

He said that ever since the Reformation, Protestants have emphasized freedom of the individual conscience at the expense of order and authority in the church; whereas the Catholic Church, in reaction, has stressed order at the expense of freedom.

In the present ecumenical age, he said, both branches of the Christian family are discovering that they have "much to learn from each other."

Catholics are hungering for greater freedom, for an end to "oppressive" types of church discipline which yield "fear-ridden subservience" rather than "willing Christian obedience."

Protestants meanwhile are searching for greater order, for an end to theological anarchy which confuses rather than frees the individual conscience.

Kung hopes and believes that the Second Vatican Council, resuming in September, will creates a new climate of "freedom in order" in the Catholic Church. This new climate, he says, will be "an invitation and a challenge" to the separated brethren, and will open the way for eventual reunion of Christians.

The ordered freedom which Kung envisions in the coming Church Universal will apply not only to individuals, but also to local churches.

"Unity and not uniformity, a center without centralism is called for in the church today," says Kung.

"It is urgently necessary for the church to repudiate all of the methods of totalitarian states, to abandon forever any attempt at coercing conscience or compelling belief, and to restore the royal freedom which Christ brought to the children of God."

Protestants hearing Kung speak are apt to shake their heads in wonder. Can this curly-haired young man, who quotes scripture as freely as Billy Graham, really be a Catholic priest?

He can be. And unlike the 16th Century monk whom he otherwise resembles so strongly, he is determined to remain on the inside of the ancient church which he seeks to reform.

REHEARSING — Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, minister of music at Holy Innocent's Episcopal Church, Corte Madera, plays the new Allen organ with the church choir in preparation for a special organ dedication program at 4 p.m. tomorrow. (Ken Molino photo)

Recital To Pull All Stops For Holy Innocents' Organ

Dedication of a new organ, recently installed in Holy Innocents' Episcopal Church, Corte Madera, will be marked with a recital by choirs and organ at 4 p.m. tomorrow at the church.

Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, minister of music, will play the organ and be assisted by the Holy Innocents' Choir and the Marin Chamber Choir. Included will be selections by Handel, Bach, Mozart and Dr. Wolff's own compositions and arrangements. Music from Vivaldi's "Gloria" will also be presented, with soloists Gloria Giddings and Kathryn Greiner.

Following the concert, a reception will be held in the parish hall honoring the benefactress, Mrs. Mayson W. Torbet of Larkspur. Mrs. Torbet is a long-time resident of Marin County and has been a member of Holy Innocents' Parish for over 15 years. She presented the former organ ten years ago.

Members of St. Edward's Guild, a couples' group, are in charge of refreshments for the reception. The public is invited to both the recital and the reception.

Scientist Calls For Birth Control Truce

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The time has come for Protestants and Catholics to declare a truce in their rancorous quarrel over birth control.

If they'll do so, new methods of fertility regulation can be developed—perhaps "within a remarkably short period of time"—which will be safe, effective and morally acceptable to all religious groups.

So says Dr. John Rock, a man who has unique credentials for speaking on this subject.

Dr. Rock is a Harvard University scientist who is world famous for his pioneering research in human reproduction. He is co-developed of the oral contraceptive pill. He also is a devoted member of the Roman Catholic Church.

He has written a book, entitled "The Time Has Come," (Knopf, $3.95), which ought to be read and pondered by every church leader politician and plain citizen who is concerned about the problem of limiting population growth.

Former secretary of state Christian A. Herter contributed a foreword, in which he warns that it is "not just desirable, but urgently necessary," to terminate the religious controversy which is paralyzing government action in this field.

"The consequences of failure to find effective, acceptable ways of meeting the population crisis are unthinkable," Herter says.

Dr. Rock says that Protestants and Catholics are now in "substantial agreement" about the objectives of family planning, and differ mainly about the methods which may be employed. Most Protestant bodies endorse the use of any medically-approved contraceptive technique, but the Catholic church condones only the so-called rhythm or "safe period" method.

Since this dispute is tied up with differing views of "natural law," Dr. Rock sees little hope of resolving it "within the limits of the family planning methods now available."

"I envisage the eventual resolution of doctrinal differences only after the expansion of the armamentarium of birth control," he says. "This will include not merely refinements of current methods but also entirely new approaches which will fit into normal reproductive physiology."

Given an adequate research program, he says, "it is not unrealistic" to anticipate that science can come up with a variety of entirely new birth control techniques, far better, cheaper and more effective than those which are now mostly widely used (and which date back to the 19th Century or earlier.)

Among these new techniques, he is confident, "will be effective methods which all religious groups can accept."

Although he considers the rhythm method presently rather unreliable, Dr. Rock says it could be perfected if researchers found a simple and accurate home test to predict the day of ovulation, or if they developed an equally simple way to induce ovulation on a selected day of each menstrual cycle.

"I believe that a concerted research effort could yield substantial progress toward this goal within a remarkably short period of time," he says.

The real problem, he thinks, is not scientific but political.

"The federal government is the one conceivable source of research support of sufficient magniture to attract the scientists and to get the job done," he says.

But government leaders are notoriously afraid of the "religious controversy" they might stir up if the National Institutes of Health were given a green-light to undertake a massive program of research in fertility control.

The result is that the institute is dabbling timidly along the fringes of the problem, devoting to it only a tiny fraction of the sums it spends on, for example, preventing tooth decay.

A recent institute report showed that total outlays for fertility research by all agencies—federal, state and private—come to only about six million dollars a year.

Dr. Rock argues that a sharp increase in these research expenditures is the best investment this country could make at this moment in history.

He doubts, however, that such an investment will be made until religious leaders make it very clear to nervous politicians that they are united in favor of more research on human fertility.

Since the Catholic church is "widely thought to bear special responsibility" for the terror which grips politicians' hearts whenever birth control research is mentioned, Dr. Rock believes it would be "most appropriate" for Catholics to take the lead in achieving a religious truce on this subject.

"A public policy of tolerance can be evolved which will respect the deeply held convictions of all Americans and help to eliminate much of the animosity and rancor which this conflict has generated," he says.

"Such a policy, by freeing our medical research establishment for a concerted effort in fertility control, offers the only practical road to a solution of both the doctrinal differences between Catholics and non-Catholics on family planning methods, and the world's population explosion."

After Life Of Beer And Sin, Gambler Deals Out Lord's Word

By HARRY A. HAINES

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—One night in 1953, Paul Kirkindall propped a Bible against the twin beer spigots of his tavern and began preaching the Gospel.

Since that time he has spent $31,000 of his own funds in a new career as pastor of this town's most dispirited citizens.

Once a gambler known over the southern and midwestern states, Paul Kirkindall underwent a sudden transformation.

Today he heads Blytheville's Mississippi County Union Mission which has an annual budget of $31,000. The mission is governed by some of the area's most prominent business and professional men. It serves thousands of poor people in northeast Arkansas and southeast Missouri.

He preaches six or seven sermons a week; visits hospitals; personally screens applicants for food and clothing; calls regularly at jails and the county farm and confers with law enforcement officers.

Kirkindall, 52, has done his job so well that last month he was offered an annual salary of $10,000, plus a home, car and certain expenses to take over a mission in an eastern city.

"I don't think the Lord wanted me to go," Kirkindall said.

He makes $300 a month in his present job.

Kirkindall stands 5-foot-10 and weighs 200 pounds. He has a voice like a carnival barker and he talks just as fast.

"People will listen to me sometimes," Kirkindall said, "people in college towns, people a lot smarter than I am. And do you know why?

"Because once they learn what I was and then get some idea of what I stand for today, they know I've just gotta be sincere."

His about-face took him completely by surprise, says Kirkindall.

"I was making good money as a gambler. I wasn't broke. I was drinking too much though. A good gambler shouldn't drink."

But one night Kirkindall accompanied his wife to church.

"I thought every word that the preacher said was directed toward me and I was burned up. I figured I'd beat this guy up some day."

And then, he said, when the invitation was given to come forward, "I found myself walking down the aisle to the front of the church. I thought, 'This is crazy. Don't go down there.' But I couldn't help it and I went up there and gave myself to Christ."

As soon as he got out of church he locked the doors to his small tavern and suspended gambling in the pool hall which was under his management.

He quit drinking, bought a Bible and began a series of speaking appearances in churches over Arkansas, Texas and Missouri.

Usually he didn't even make expenses.

Kirkindall's mission has long since outgrown his tavern where he once stood behind the bar each evening and preached to a handful of people. Presently the mission is a large structure in Blytheville's business district. The building includes a dormitory where as many as 25 men sometimes sleep.

Kirkindall said his last brush with gambling was only last month.

"A nice lady called and said her group was having a raffle and wanted the proceeds to go to the mission.

"I said, 'Now look lady, if we're going to finance this mission by gambling then I'll put a couple of tables in here and do it right because I can make more money in five hours than you can in two weeks of selling those raffle tickets.'

"But we haven't come to that and we never will," he said with finality.

REGISTRATION FOR CYO CAMP OPENS MONDAY

Registration for the Catholic Youth Organization day camp program at San Rafael's Forest Meadows will open Monday at St. Raphael's Church cafeteria.

There will be another registration Wednesday at St. Rita's Church, Fairfax, and a final registration May 17 at St. Raphael's. Hours for all registrations are from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The camp schedule will begin June 24. There will be three two-week sessions. Activities include hiking, singing, storytelling, games, cookouts, nature lore, crafts and swimming.

A deposit is required with each registration.

Lay Catholic 'Peace Corps' Gains

By RICHARD F. LONG

FORT PORTAL, Uganda (AP)—A "peace corps for laymen" is gaining strength and favor within the Catholic Church, especially in far-off mission lands.

Catholic missionaries have been going to the distant areas of the world since Christ commanded His Apostles to "teach all nations," nearly 2,000 years ago, but usually it was a black-robed or white-robed priest or nun who was the familiar figure in the tepid jungles or arid desert lands.

Since World War II there has been a great increase in the number of laymen and women who are helping the missionaries. This also is true in the Protestant churches.

"The biggest problem in mission lands is the shortage of priests and nuns. The lay person accomplishes tasks that free the clergy so they can concentrate on their more spiritual duties," said the Most Rev. Vincent J. McCauley of Council Bluffs, Iowa, the bishop of Fort Portal.

Fourteen lay people are working in Bishop McCauley's diocese on the Uganda-Congo border. They come from the United States, Canada, England and South America.

They usually do the same jobs with which they are familiar at home. However, their salary usually is much less.

"But the deep satisfaction you receive from helping people in need more than compensates for any loss of pay," Alba Camargo of Colombia, a nurse in the mission hospital, said.

Other lay people in the diocese are engineers, teachers and doctors.

Bill Young, an engineer from Chicago, does maintenance work in the mission hospital sion and directs construction of schools and churches for Africans.

Dr. and Mrs. Francis Goyeau, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Canada, a husband-wife doctor team, have just arrived to work in the mission hisptial run by the order of the Medical Mission Sisters.

Several of the Protestant missions in the Fort Portal area also have lay people teaching at the missions and helping out in other ways.

Lay people come to the missions on various plans. Some make individual contact with a bishop. Others belong to lay missionary organizations like the Women's Volunteer Association of Washington, D.C. and the Lay Mission Helpers of Los Angeles, Calif.

The Women's Volunteer Association concentrates on sending nurses to mission hospitals in Africa. The Lay Mission Helpers have 85 men and women in Africa, Mexico, Columbia and New Guinea. The membership is composed of single men and women and married couples with their

Clifford D. Carrick Claims Bride In Washington Rite

Clifford D. Carrick of Fairfax was married to Dolores Benita Chertude in a nuptial mass at St. Anne's Church in Spokane April 27.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, is the son of Mrs. Ruth Carrick and the brother of Diana, Christine and Steve Carrick.

He is now with the U.S. Air Force stationed at Fairchild Air Force Base in Washington. After his discharge next year he plans to bring the new Mrs. Carrick to Marin where they will make their home.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert of Spokane. She wore a white satin gown for the ceremony and was given in marriage by her father.

The Rev. John Osterman officiated at the rites, performing his first marriage ceremony.

Mrs. Penny Chertude, the bride's sister-in-law, was her attendant and Steve Carrick was his brother's best man.

Beta Sigma Phi Announces 'Girl Of The Year Awards'

The Marin inter-city council of Beta Sigma Phi presented "girl of the year awards" to five members of Marin County Chapters at the 32nd annual Founder's Day Program at Tomahawk Lodge Tuesday night.

Mrs. Bert Roueche of Xi Alpha Xi Chapter officiated at the program and the ritual of jewels when 31 girls became members.

Receiving "girl of the year awards" were Mrs. William Bay, Omicron Alpha; Mrs. El More Alwes, Gamma Omicron; Mrs. William Bayles, Phi Gamma Nu; Mrs. Glen Dunbar, Upsilon Gamma and Mrs. Chester Pec, Xi Alpha Xi.

Another highlight of the evening was presentation of scrapbook awards.

Mrs. Jack Lentz, historian, accepted the first prize for Omicron Alpha and Novato Chapter, Upsilon Gamma, received second prize. Mrs. Norwood Arnold, historian, accepted the prize.

THE DOUGLAS JAMES Stones are shown following their recent wedding in the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley. The bride, the former Ellen Elizabeth Canet, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Canet of Mill Valley.

Marin College AWS Style Show Tuesday

More than 250 students and parents are expected to attend the annual fashion show and luncheon of the Associated Women Students of College of Marin to be held from noon to 2 p.m. on Tuesday, at the Marin Golf and Country Club.

The show and luncheon are open to the public and tickets may be purchased by calling AWS sponsors Mrs. Margaret D. Greene or Beverly Harling at the college.

The show carries a "Seventh Heaven" theme and includes summer sportswear and dress fashions.

Models include Germaine Briggs of Mill Valley; Nikki Hoff of San Rafael; Joan Everson of San Anselmo; LeGlynn Wilkes of Mill Valley; Irene Lunding of San Rafael; Suzanne Scott of Larkspur; Pamela Blum of Kentfield; Kathy Olson of San Rafael; Joanne Thomas of San Anselmo; Marlene Gavello of Kentfield; Rosalind Borba of San Rafael; and Sue Gowan of Novato, and Jane Blodget of Fairfax.

In charge of arrangements are Germaine Briggs, publicity; Nikki Hoff and Marlene Gavello, invitations; and Rosalind Borba, decorations.

BIRTHDAY PARTY ABOARD A BOAT

Louis Woelfl of San Rafael celebrated his eighty-first birthday this week. The actual natal day was the first of May and Mr. Woelfl had chartered a boat to take a group of his friends for a fishing trip beyond the Golden Gate. However when he and his group arrived at the pier early in the morning he was told there was a 35-mile an hour wind blowing and the boat would not be taken out of its berth.

The fishing trip was held instead yesterday (Friday) when all went well and the fishing was good.

San Anselmo Baptist Women Plan Banquet

The annual Mother-Daughter Banquet of the First Baptist Church in San Anselmo will be held Friday at 6:30 p.m. in the church's new social hall.

Mrs. Harold Laster is chairman of the affair and is assisted by Mesdames Lyle Smith, Claude Barnes and Jerald Trager.

The entire dinner will be prepared by Lester Allison and served by eight waiters who will not only serve the mothers and the daughters but will entertain them with barber shop singing between courses. The group is led by Walter Patzlaff and includes Lyle Smith, Ray Nelson, Bob Dill, Lew Champion, Jerald Traeger, Ed Stump and John Stickle.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Traeger.

Marianna Keesmaat Weds Michael Paris

Married Saturday in a morning nuptial mass at St. Sebastian's Church were Marianna Keesmaat of Kentfield and Michael Paris of Novato. Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was the Rev. John O'Connell.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pieter L. Keesmaat of Kentfield, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a short white satin gown with a bridal lace overblouse. Her veil was finger tip length with a Dior bow. Diane Keesmaat, wearing a short white sheath with a blue veil, was her sister's maid of honor and Arlene Olivera, wearing a short blue sheath with a lilly of the valley veil was the other bridal attendant.

Al Stelmach of Woodland was the best man and the bridegroom's brother, Robert Paris, was the usher.

Following a reception at the Kentfield home of the bride's parents, the young couple drove to southern California.

The new Mrs. Paris attended Marin Catholic High School and was later employed in San Rafael. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Pieter Keesmaat of Amsterdam, Netherlands, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Joaquin Brazil of San Rafael. She has a second sister, Mrs. Dale Chase of Fairfax.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Audrey Paris of Novato and besides Robert, has two other brothers, Terry and Richard. He graduated from Analy High School in Sebastapol and attended Santa Rosa Junior College. He is at present employed in San Rafael.

Dinner Dances Are Marking Yachting Season's Opening

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

The official yachting season starts tomorrow and both the Corinthian Yacht Club of Tiburon and the San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere will hold a pre-opening dinner dance tonight, a 50-year tradition. Everyone comes in sailing attire in anticipation of the big day ahead.

The off-shore waters are usually covered opening day with hundreds of boats ready for the Bay parade. The two clubs have issued open house invitations to all other clubs to make use of their docks as well as attend the festivities tonight and tomorrow.

Tomorrow brunch will be served at the Corinthian from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and non-boaters belonging to yachting families will view the parade from the club's deck. The musicians on the parading boats will come back to the Corinthian to play for dancing.

At the San Francisco club, friends and guests will greet boats and crews at a smorgasbord starting at 4:30 p.m.

Monday, when relative calm settles over the Bay, remodeling will start on the Corinthian house.

MRS. A. S. DREIER of Larkspur will be honored on her birthday tomorrow and here for that special day is her son, Alex Dreier, TV newscaster, who flew from Chicago for the family reunion.

MRS. ALBERT H. HARRIS Jr. of the Belvedere Lagoon, recently returned from a two weeks visit with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Carney of Brookline, Mass.

DR. STEPHEN EPLER, president of College of Marin, and his wife will give a reception for the members of the board of trustees and the faculty of the college tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5 in the Art Gallery of the college. In the receiving line with Dr. and Mrs. Epler will be members of the Board and their husbands and wives: Messrs. and Mesdames Dan Deedy, Kent Seymour, Robert Rogers, Robert Oliver and George Washburn. Special guests will be a newly elected board member, Joseph Gargiulo and his wife. Pouring will be Mesdames Paul Clymer, Irwin Diamond, Ellsworth Briggs, Frank Jacobs, Carlton Cherry, Weaver Meadows, Harry Pieper, Edwin Cadogan, Leonard Blomquist and Norman Bird.

THE ERNEST ONGAROS returned from a two weeks vacation in Las Vegas in ample time for her to complete arrangements for the luncheon she gave May Day at the Amicus Club's Designer's Showcase at Dominic's. On the vacation with Ernest and his wife were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ongaro Jr. Co-hostesses at another large luncheon at Dominic's were Mesdames Stanley Campodonico and Al Boyajian, reservations chairmen. Mrs. Les Walsh had as her luncheon guests her mother, Mrs. Harry Straight, and Mesdames Oscar Jahnesen, Steve Toth and Bernice Eggers.

Mrs. Joseph Ratto and Mrs. Nick Ivancovich were co-hostesses at another luncheon table. Mrs. Paul McArdle, just back from a vacation at Palm Springs, entertained as did Mrs. Robert Quinlan. The latter's guests were Mesdames George Schirmer, Thomas Brennana and William Dawson.

Mrs. Ed Leonardi had as her luncheon guests, Mrs. Charles Clivio and L. H. Leonardi. The guests were particularly interested as the new Mexican influence in interior decoration was stressed in the interior decorations show and the Clivios and the Leonardis are making a trip to Mexico soon. Others entertaining at luncheons were Mesdames Quinn Ongaro, W. C. Bomio, Alfred Parsons and Tony Boitano.

The luncheon and show profits went to Marin Aid to Retarded Children.

T-Shirts Are Stripped With Red Leather

Bulky by day, slinky by night, fashionable at any time—that's the story of leather apparel this Spring.

From big, wide-shouldered coats to slim A-line skirts, this season's leathers are fluid, soft and lightweight.

A literally head-to-toe range of leather apparel and accessories is displayed in elegant smooth grained leather, velvety suede leather, gleaming patent leather and glistening lustre leather.

In harmony with the "soft" look of 1963 fashions, leather jackets are wider in the shoulder, waistlines rising in the front and dipping in the back. The Chanel look, mainstay of the fashion-conscious woman's daytime costume, is seen in smooth and suede leathers. The tunic look is fresh in pale off-whites, pastel pinks and sophisticated tropez—a light taupe — that takes an extra fashion dimension in leather.

FOR RESORT or suburban wear, the "Riviera look" catches the eye in leather. Sun-drenched red, white and blue blouses, pants and jackets are found in softly draped grain leather. T-shirts are striped in red and white smooth leather and worn under blue suede leather jackets. The beach or nautical look is also popular in ponchos, pullovers and even bathing suits trimmed in leather.

The leather dress, established as a classic in one year, is newly available in every popular silhouette and fashion color. The sleeveless sheath, chiffon-light in specially tanned suede leathers, is worn in pale colors this Spring. The A-line dress is softly gored for flair or dropped in a simple, widening line. This silhouette and tunic, share fashion honors in both smooth and suede leathers.

LEATHER SKIRTS receive the full dressmaker treatment this Spring. Pleated, shirred and draped, leather skirts swing by day.

Fisher-Trade Looking Better And Better For Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — The Jack Fisher trade is looking far better for the San Francisco Giants today than it did a week ago.

The 23-year-old right-handed slip pitcher won his second straight complete game for the Giants Friday, stopping the New York Mets 5-3 and knocking in the decisive runs himself with a double.

Billy O'Dell took his 2-0 record against the Mets' Roger Craig, 2-2, today as the Giants gunned for their fifth straight victory and ninth in 10 road decisions this year.

Jack Sanford, 4-1, and Billy Pierce, 1-2, are expected to take on the Mets in a doubleheader tomorrow.

Fisher's pitching and hitting made him the star of Willie Mays Night after the Giants center fielder had hauled off a carload of gifts in pre-game ceremonies.

Only Duke Snider bothered Fisher, swatting two bases-empty home runs and knocking in a third run with a double.

Fisher yielded only three other hits, all singles, and walked only one man. He struck out seven.

Monday at Philadelphia he won his first National League game after he had been pounded by Chicago and Milwaukee last week in San Francisco, losing both decisions.

Fisher has walked only three men in 30⅓ innings of work this season and has a sparkling 2.94 earned run average. Last year at Baltimore, his ERA was nearly twice that.

Fisher's bat decided the game in the seventh inning. With the score 2-2, Ed Bailey singled and Joe Amalfitano doubled. Fisher drove both men home with his two-bagger off the left wall of the Polo Grounds.

Singles by Jose Pagan and Harvey Kuenn, Felipe Alou's sacrifice fly, and Mays' double gave the Giants a 2-1 lead in the third inning after Snider homered in the first.

Snider's double tied the score in the sixth but Fisher quickly broke the deadlock. Amalfitano singled home a run in the eighth and Snider homered again leading off the ninth.

Amalfitano, who had not hit in 18 consecutive at-bats to open the season, now has five hits in his last three games as he's substituted at second base for the injured Chuck Hiller.

Mays' double delighted the crowd of 49,431, largest in baseball this season. Earlier, as he received his gifts, Mays told the crowd:

"Although I am so far away in California, every time I come here I feel this is my home . . . This is my second night. Both times they were in the city of New York. I really appreciate the honor and thank everyone."

Mays broke in with the Giants in 1951 when they played at the Polo Grounds.

IT WAS THEIR NIGHT — It was Willie Mays Night at the New York Polo Grounds yesterday, but pitcher Jack Fisher had a night of his own as he pitched the Giants to a 5-3 victory over the Mets. Fisher (left) is congratulated by Mays after the game. (AP Wirephoto)

Terra Linda Ace Pitches No-Hit Game

Lefty Bill Lee Stops Drake Win Streak, 2-0

Bill Lee, 16-year-old junior at Terra Linda High School, etched his name in the Marin Athletic League's baseball record books yesterday with his talented left arm.

Lee pitched a no-hit, no-run masterpiece in a 2-0 victory over previously unbeaten Drake Pirates at Albert Park, San Rafael.

The stylish southpaw, displaying his usual fine assortment of pitches, struck out five Pirates and walked three. Of the four Pirates who reached base—the other on an error—none advanced past second base as Drake's six-game victory streak was broken.

Of the 21 putouts recorded by Lee, eight were on fly balls, eight on grounders and five on whiffs.

Only last Tuesday Lee beat San Rafael on a three-hitter, 12-1. He now has a 4-2 league record; his team is 5-3 in the standings.

STRONG RIVAL

Lee's rival, Steve Miller, pitched well enough to win most games, holding the Trojans to four hits and giving up solo runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

In the fifth Steve Fisher was safe on an error, going to second on the muff, and Marsh Enderby singled him home for a 1-0 lead.

In the sixth Dick Schultze singled, moved to second when Lee walked, advanced to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a wild pitch.

The line score:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Drake | 000 | 000 | 0—0 0 2 |
| Ter. Lin. | 000 | 011 | x—2 4 1 |

Miller and Hannigan; Lee and Congdon.

NOVATO-MARIN GAME FOR FUN; NO UMPIRES

Umpires failed to show up for yesterday's Marin Athletic League baseball game between Marin Catholic and Novato, so the preps had to play the contest on a practice basis with host Novato scoring an 8-3 victory.

The official league game was rescheduled for next Thursday when it is hoped the men in blue from the Officials Assn. remember their assignment.

In yesterday's practice game Novato's Tom Miller cracked a three-run homer, Ron Rowell contributed two hits and Chuck Overmyer and Gary Fritz shared pitching duties by limiting Marin Catholic to three hits.

San Rafael Hands Tam 8th Loss

Tamalpais High School, once the scourge of northern California prep baseball ranks, is in the midst of one of its bleakest seasons.

The Mill Valley school, whose alumni include such former major league stars as Sam Chapman, Joe DeMaestri, Karl Olson and Art Schallock, suffered its eighth straight loss in Marin Athletic League competition yesterday when San Rafael's Bulldogs rallied to a 7-4 victory over the Indians.

For a while it looked as if the winless Indians would break the ice as they led 4-2 going into the sixth inning. But then the roof of the tepee caved in as the Bulldogs exploded for four runs on clutch singles by Skip Rush and Tom Zunino, each driving in two runs.

Bulldog John Franzman was a constant thorn in the Indians' sides as he stole four bases—second and third twice each—after singling and walking.

San Rafael evened its league record to 4-4 while dropping Tam deeper in the basement at 0-8.

Rush, in relief of starter Jim Schmidt, was the winning pitcher.

The line score:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| San Rafael | 000 | 024 | 1—7 7 1 |
| Tamalpais | 020 | 110 | 0—4 4 4 |

340 Yachts In Race To Ensenada

NEWPORT BEACH (UPI)—A fleet of 340 yachts embarked today on the 16th running of the 150-mile Newport-to-Ensenada, Mexico, race.

Three classes of vessels — ocean racing, Pacific handicap and multi-hull—awaited the start of the downwind race set for noon from the Balboa Yacht Club area.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

LOS ANGELES — Don Johnson, 124¾, Los Angeles, outpointed Juan Ramirez, 126, Mexico, 10.

MEMPHIS — Ernie Burford, Memphis, stopped Bill Belchia, Toledo, 10, middleweights.

Gridder Is Critical At Stanford

STANFORD (AP)—Lowell Wilson, 19, a Stanford football guard injured in a spring practice session yesterday, was still in critical condition today, but a hospital spokesman said he had regained consciousness.

Wilson, a sophomore from Honolulu, went into immediate surgery at Stanford-Palo Alto Hospital. He suffered a dislocated neck.

Assistant Coach Rod Rust said Wilson hit a tackling dummy with his head too low and struck it with the top of his head instead of his shoulder.

Assistant trainer Dave Williams administered oxygen to the player after he dropped to the ground and stopped breathing momentarily.

Wilson, 6-feet tall and 218 pounds, was working out with the third string.

Lavorante Flies Home, Still In Coma From Bout

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Boxer Alejandro Lavorante, who has been in a coma since he was knocked out in a bout last Sept. 21, today was scheduled to be flown home to his native Argentina.

Lavorante was given clearance to leave the country yesterday by Internal Revenue Service agents who claimed he owed $4,460 in back taxes.

The decision to permit him to be taken home came after agents conferred with his father, Alejandro Sr., conservator of the 26-year-old boxer's estate.

The senior Alejandro said he had already paid $5,418.82 in income taxes.

Brodie Will Be Okay, Medic Says

PALO ALTO (UPI) — John Brodie's football career should not be impaired by an arm fracture the San Francisco 49er quarterback received in an automobile accident, according to the attending physician at Palo Alto-Stanford Hospital.

"Recovery should be excellent and he should be as good as new by fall," the surgeon said after treating Brodie for a small crack in the radius bone in Brodie's right—and passing—forearm.

The 49er star apparently fell asleep at the wheel early yesterday. His car crashed into a tree.

BCRA Hardtops To Roar Tonight

Bay Cities Racing Assn. hardtop races will be held tonight starting at 8:30 at the Vallejo Speedway. Time trials will get underway at 7:30.

Ten races will be held, with the final one being a 25-lap main event, Leroy Geving of Petaluma, last Saturday's winner in the main event, will be favored to repeat.

The speedway is located three miles north of Vallejo

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Rookie's Bat Paces Bucs

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bonus baby Bob Bailey of Pittsburgh says his ambition is to make the Hall of Fame and although no one has ever discovered a short cut, he sure seems in a hurry to get there.

The Pirates never have divulged how much they actually gave the 20-year-old third baseman to sign with them. Estimates range from $150,000 to $200,000, but last night he looked like a million dollars.

Bailey drove in five runs with a pair of homers and a single in a devastating one-man show that paced the Pirates to a 13-2 romp over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

He clipped Jack Smith for a three-run homer during a four-run sixth inning rally and then connected again with the bases empty for his fourth homer of the season off Ken Rowe in the eighth.

Supported by that kind of an attack, Al McBean breezed to his second victory with a six-hit effort. Larry Sherry was kayoed in the fourth and went down to his second defeat.

The Pirates thus moved within a game of the first-place St. Louis Cardinals, who were blanked, 6-0, by the Cincinnati Reds. The San Francisco Giants beat the New York Mets, 5-3, the Chicago Cubs downed the Milwaukee Braves, 10-7, and the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Colts, 4-3.

Southpaw Joe Nuxhall held the Cardinals to five hits and fanned eight in winning his first game of the season and pitching his first shutout for the Reds since 1959. Leo Cardenas homered off loser Ernie Broglio (3-1) in the third inning and rookie Pete Rose highlighted a four-run fifth inning with his first major league homer.

Lou Brock singled home what proved to be the winning run for the Cubs in the eighth inning of their game with the Braves. Warren Spahn started for Milwaukee but was routed in the third inning after yielding a three-run homer to Ron Santo, Billy Williams and Ernie Banks also homered for the Cubs in the ninth off loser Claude Raymond (3-3) while Hank Aaron belted his ninth homer for the Braves and Len Gabrielson connected for his second. Reliever Jim Brewer (2-0) was the winning pitcher.

Roy Sievers' pinch double with the bases loaded plus an error by second baseman Johnny Temple on the relay from the outfield comprised a three-run sixth inning rally that enabled the Phillies to nip the Colts. Loser Bob Bruce (1-2) was the victim of the rally. Jack Hamilton, third of four Philadelphia pitchers, was the winner.

Bluth Sets World Bowling Record: 1,525 For 6 Games

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Ray Bluth of St. Louis rolled a sensational 1,525 six-game series yesterday to lead 16 qualifiers into today's final competition of the Professional Bowlers Association's New Jersey Open Tournament.

A spokesman for the PBA said Bluth's total was a world record for a six-game series, breaking the mark of 1,508 set by John Bomba of Bayonne, N.J., on Jan. 8, 1950.

Bluth's six games were 245, 238, 228, 268, 268 and 278 for a 254 average.

His over-all total of 5,465 gave him a lead of 114 pins over runner-up Billy Hardwick of San Mateo, Calif., who knocked down 5,351. Hardwick held a 10-pin lead over Ed Bourdase of Fresno, Calif.

HERE'S TROUT THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY

Here's a story of the big one that "didn't get away."

Nat Romanin of Novato and his 12-year-old son, Richard, were out fishing for trout this morning on the first day of the season at Nicasio Lake and hooked a good-sized Rainbow.

But just as they were bringing the fish out of the water, the line broke. Before the fish could get away, Romanin jumped in the cold water and grabbed it, winning the fight for the second time.

It measured 18½ inches and weighed 2½ pounds. The father-son angling team also caught two other Rainbow trout, one that measured 15 inches and another that was 12 inches.

SEMI-PRO TOURNEY

Two More Marin Teams Bite Dust

Marin teams in the San Rafael Invitational baseball tournament continued to find the home grounds of Albert Field not to their liking as two more local entries fell to defeat last night.

The Mill Valley Merchants fell to Acme Carpet 8-1 and the Merchants of San Anselmo were blanked by Flying Goose Sporting Goods 7-0. Both games were called after five innings of play because of a tournament rule that states a game will be called if one of the teams is seven or more runs ahead after five innings.

The two Merchant teams join the Billings-Hutchison Builders, losers of their opening game Thursday, in the losers bracket of the double elimination tourney which is slated to last until May 18.

In tonight's action, the Builders will play the Gino Benedetti nine from San Francisco at 6:30 p.m. and the Mill Valley Merchants will take on the San Anselmo Merchants at 9 p.m. All tourney games are to be played at Albert Field.

Losers of tonight's contests will be eliminated from the tournament.

SUNDAY SCHEDULE

Tomorrow's schedule calls for Gateway Chevrolet to take on Misracks Sporting Goods at 2:30 p.m. and Acme Carpet to play against the Flying Goose baseballers at 6 p.m.

In the opener last night, Mill Valley grabbed a quick lead of 1-0 at the end of the first inning. The lead didn't last too long, however, as the Acme team scored four runs in the second inning and added two more in each the fifth and sixth innings.

Ray Quintana, winning pitcher, allowed only one hit while striking out 10 M.V. batters. Keith Frazer and Ricky Pace worked on the mound for the Merchants.

In the nightcap, the Flying Goose nine scored one run in the third, but came back strong with two runs in the fourth and four in the fifth before the game was halted. Don Lowpensky and Tom McGee collected six hits between them to lead the winners hitting attack.

The San Anselmo nine was limited to one hit.

Twins Sell Lemon To The Phillies

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Minnesota Twin announced the sale of outfielder Jim Lemon last night to the Philadelphia Phillies in a straight cash deal.

The Twins declined to disclose the price. Minnesota has used Lemon mainly as a pinch-hitter lately.

Lemon, 35, has been at bat seven times this season and has two hits, both singles.

Nicklaus Leads By 5 Strokes

LAS VEGAS (UPI)—Jack Nicklaus, crown prince of golf, carried a five-stroke lead into the third round of the $60,000 Tournament of Champions today and even runner-up Arnold Palmer feared that it would be impossible to catch the young tiger.

Nicklaus, who already holds such important titles as the National Open, Masters, Portland, Palm Springs, and Seattle Open, appears headed for another crown in this one.

He has a 36-hole score of 132, which is 12 under par on the Desert Inn Country Club course that measures 7,073 yards long and is dotted with hazards.

Palmer has a 137 total and could lay some of the blame for that on finding water on the desert.

"I would say that I'm going to have to putt a lot better than I have been to catch him," said Palmer. "He's playing pretty well."

That was the understatement of the day. Nicklaus has rounds of 64 and 68 against 66-71 for Arnie.

Further back are Bill Casper at 139 and Jerry Barber at 140 after rounds of 69 yesterday. The 141s are Bob Goalby, Johnny Pott, Jacky Cupit and Tony Lema. The rest of the field couldn't be given much consideration in the race for the $13,000 first place money.

Preps Smash 14 Records In Marin League Track Meet

RECORD FORM—Tamalpais' Ellis Williams demonstrates his record-breaking form in the varsity broad jump during yesterday's trials of the Marin Athletic League track and field meet. Williams set a new record of 22-4 and ¾, breaking his own record of last year. (Independent-Journal photos by Harold Mathias)

A 9.9 SPRINT — Bob Olsen of San Rafael carries the tape across the finish line yesterday as he sets a varsity record of 9.9 in the 100-yard dash during the MCAL track meet trials. Following Olsen is Tam's Ellis Williams who finished the heat in second place, well behind Olsen.

San Rafael's Olsen Shatters Two Marks

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Fourteen records were shattered yesterday in the trials of the 1963 Marin Athletic League track and field meet and more marks threaten to fall next Saturday when the finals are held on the cinder paths of San Rafael High School.

And it was after 8 o'clock at night when the last record was broken — the varsity 880-yard relay — as the lengthy meet lasted four hours and 12 minutes, finally concluding at 8:12 p.m. Counting all the heats, there were 49 running events, including the three relay races, during the day which was marred with stiff winds.

San Rafael's fleet varsity sprinter, Bob Olsen, cracked two barriers in winning both the 100 and 220-yard dashes. He ripped off the century in 9.9 and the 220 in 21.7, clipping off a tenth of a second in the 100 and almost one full second off the old 220 mark of 22.6.

In the three heats of the 220, all three winners eclipsed the league mark set in 1960. Besides Olsen, San Rafael's Mike Shafer won his heat in 22.1 and Tamalpais' Ellis Williams won his heat in 22.3.

REDWOOD STAR

Redwood's Tom Strathairn won both varsity hurdle events and smashed the league mark in the 180-lows, skipping over the hurdles in 20 seconds flat. Old mark was 20.4.

Strathairn came back to anchor the winning 880-yard relay team from Redwood to another MCAL record of 1:32.3. Carrying the baton ahead of Strathairn were Bob Piro, Pete Holter and Dave Auerbach.

The other varsity mark which fell was set last year by Ellis Williams of Tam at 20 feet, 9 and ¾ inches. Williams left his old record far behind with a mighty leap of 22-4 and ¾.

The talented Class B trackmen from Marin's prep schools cracked seven records with Drake's Dean Lazzarini breaking two of them.

Lazzarini knocked two-tenths of a record off the 75-yard dash with a time of 7.7 and came back to crumble the mark in the 150-yard sprint with a time of 14.8. Old mark was 15.3.

In the 660 for the Bees, Redwood's Jack Lindahl set a record of 1:30.2, breaking the old mark of 1:30.9, and Terra Linda's Jack Edwards ran a record breaking 37-flat 330, two seconds under the previous mark.

Edwards' teammate, E. Stenberg, established a new mark in the 1320 with a time of 3:25.1, eclipsing the old mark of 3:28.8. Clem Glynn of San Rafael heaved the discus 118 feet, four and one-half feet farther than the previous MCAL high.

Mike Holloway, Tam's ace broad jumper in the Class B division, broke his own league mark of 19-3 and ⅞ with a leap of 21-1 and ¼ for another record in the B events.

Tom Jones of Novato picked up one of the two records broken in the Class C division as he flew the 75-yard dash in 8.2, snapping the old record of 8.3. In winning the race, he handed San Rafael's top C sprinter Jeff Chan his first defeat of the season. Chan finished the heat in second place.

JUMP RECORDS

Drake's Manuel Saenz broke the C mark in the broad jump with a jump of 18-4 and ¾, as the broad jump mark fell in all three divisions of the meet, varsity, B and C.

Olsen, San Rafael's key man, suffered a "charlie horse" in the anchor of the 880-yard relay but S.R. coach Bill O'Bayley today said Olsen will be all right for the finals next week.

Finals of the league meet will be held next Saturday on the San Rafael track, with the field events starting at noon and running events at 2:30 p.m. The top eight finishers in each event yesterday qualified for the finals.

ST. VINCENT'S YOUTH TOSSES PERFECT GAME

Ronaldo Coulter, pitcher for the sixth grade team at St. Vincent's School for Boys, pitched a perfect game Thursday as he led his team to a 9-0 victory over the Odd Fellows of the Gallinas Valley Little League.

Coulter faced only 21 batters in the seven inning game with not one Odd Fellow reaching first base.

Ronaldo's teammate, Mike Ferraira, led the St. Vincent's hitting attack with a grand slam home run in the third inning.

SEASON OPENER

Yachts On Parade

By ALFRED MATSON

Down through the years, the opening of the yachting season has always been heralded by a day of gay festivities with a colorful parade of both sail boats and power cruisers debouching from the waters beyond the Golden Gate Bridge to signal the start.

In contrast to past procedure, wherein the show hit the waterways at high noon with the sailboats to the fore, tomorrow's grand parade will start at 11:30 a.m. with the cruiser division in the van. The windjammers will form the second section with a scheduled start one hour later.

Whatever the changes, there is one detail that has remained steadfast since the inception of the parade: Again the grand marshall for the whole kit and kaboodle will be one of the pilot boats of the Bar Pilots Assn., in this instance, the "California."

WITH THAT bit of folderol behind them, the sailors will make ready for the long season of racing ahead. The following weekend, the Encinal Yacht Club is sponsoring a two-day regatta for all classes and divisions of Yacht Racing Assn. status. However, other than the hardware distributed to the winners, it will be purely for fun, fun, fun, as it is not a championship event and season points are not involved.

ONE WEEK later, May 18 and 19, a valiant attempt will be made by the officers of the International One Design Class to breathe new life into the remains of an event that had been given the deep six because it was too popular! We refer to the Vallejo Race, the oldest sailing contest in local history. Last year, more than 500 boats entered. It was too big, so YRA delegates voted to eliminate it as a sanctioned event and, therefore, no season's points. The sponsoring Vallejo Y. C. replied, in affect, no points, no race.

And that was the status quo until the One Designers, with Jake Wosser at the helm, embarked on their mission of rescue. Their regatta is not all encompassing, but is limited to class boats, and the more popular ones, at that.

Classes invited are the ICs, Birds, Hurricanes, Tritons, Golden Gates, Knarrs, Bears and Folkboat. More information can be obtained from Frank (Jake) Wosser.

Title Fight Postponed Third Time

NEW YORK (UPI) — The unlucky return Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight title fight at Las Vegas, Nev., was committed today to a third postponement from June 27 to Monday, July 22, because of the removal of a "benign tumor" from ex-champion Patterson's right fist.

Announcing the postponement, Promoter Al Bolan of Championship Sports, Inc., said, "Floyd consented to the postponement only when his surgeon insisted yesterday that he positively refrain from using his right fist in training for about four weeks."

Parade Features Gallinas Valley Little League

A parade will highlight the start of the Gallinas Valley Little League tomorrow, with the procession starting at the Civic Center at 12:45 p.m. and winding up at Castro Park in Santa Venetia.

Leading the parade will be Walter R. Castro, one of the Marin County supervisors. Also in the parade will be seven minor league, six major and four pony league teams and their sponsors.

Opening game ceremonies will begin at 1:15 p.m. with talks by Castro, Morris Hill, president of the little league, and Bill Saleme, president of the pony league.

Castro will throw out the first ball to get the game between Locke's and Odd Fellows underway. That contest will be followed by a tilt between the Beavers and Astronauts.

Hart's 644 Tops Greenbrae Bowlers

Jim Hart of the 860 Scratch League rilled a 644 series which included a 245 game to top the bowlers at Greenbrae Lanes for the week. Other high series were rolled by Dutch Erlenkotter, 636, and Bob Crowhurst, 630.

High game went to Stan Woodworth of the 826 Scratch League, a 246. Close behind were Jay Sharp with 245 and Hart's equally good 245.

Lu Kralka topped the women with a 577 (191-194-192) series in the Woodcutters League. She was followed by Dot Reiman's 572 in the Coffee Cuppers League.

High game for the gals was Chris Griffin's 232 in the Solo Flighters League. Elinor Davis rattled off a 222 game and Lucy Sawitzky rolled a 221. High four-game series for the gals was won by Jackie Neuson of the Women's 476 Scratch Trio, 734.

The week's results:

Splitniks—Elinor Davis 201-531; Marilyn Epidendio 207-527; Nikki Simonian 197-504.

Rapid Transit Decision Good News For Marin Plans Too

The decision of the Contra Costa judge this week that the Bay Area Rapid Transit District is legally going ahead with its transit system was more than welcome. Regardless of how he rules on the two remaining issues, the major questions of legality of the bond election and legality of the contract with an engineering firm have been settled. The district has been cleared of charges of improper procedure.

We in Marin County are interested in this case for more than one reason. For one thing, as a former member of the district, our representatives had a part in laying down the preliminary work leading up to the election.

But the other is even more important. The decision clears the air for us in Marin to take whatever steps we may now desire to take on our own. So long as there was a question about the ability of a transit district to actually produce an operating system, we were handcuffed.

Now we can look at our transportation problem with more confidence; we can attack it with the knowledge that something can be done if we finally decide what that something is.

Incidentally, we offer our congratulations to the directors of the rapid transit district and to its staff for having faced a difficult challenge successfully.

Now how about getting to work on a modern, high-speed, efficient and reasonably priced transit system we can all be proud of!

The Fragrance Of Warm Fudge

We remember that our grandmother made good fudge. In less sophisticated times, before television began to dominate the American evening, our idea of a big time on Sunday night was to play cards, listen to Eddie Cantor on the radio and make some fudge.

People didn't drink as much in those days and they were less calorie conscious. Making fudge was a family activity. Even the children's opinion was solicited about whether it had reached the proper "soft-ball" stage, which meant it was ready to beat.

Times have changed and we would not want to turn the clock back. But the fragrance of warm fudge makes us a bit nostalgic. And we still whip up a small batch now and then.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to those among us who care about our fellow creatures and take time out tomorrow and all next week to observe Humane Sunday and Be Kind To Animals Week.

BRICKBATS to College of Marin students who are so disinterested in their school government that less than 20 per cent of them turned out to vote on a new constitution.

A BOUQUET for Mrs. Dorothy Crozier of San Rafael, who lived up to the letter of the fast-disappearing tradition of telephone operators' helpfulness, by keeping a line open, getting aid and assisting a frantic mother whose baby son was near death.

A BOUQUET to the County Supervisors for going ahead with planning for the next stage of the Civic Center.

BRICKBATS to the Jayne Mansfield-Nelson Sardelli "romance"; it's disgusting.

A BOUQUET to the Arequipa Foundation for presenting a new storage refrigerator to the Marin Blood Center.

A BRICKBAT to Assemblyman Lester A. McMillan (D, Los Angeles) for his proposal that executions be televised. They won't allow televising of legislative sessions, where the laws are made, or of court trials, where justice is dispensed. Let the public see the reasons, before he sees the results.

Single Girls Don't Have Problem Of Bachelors In Baseball Season

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There is a married woman out on the West Coast who has been cleaning up recently by dispensing advice to single women.

The lady, Helen Gurley Brown, wrote a highly successful book called "Sex And The Single Girl" and now she is conducting a syndicated column along similar lines.

Her qualifications include the fact that she used to be a single girl herself. Well, now.

I used to be a single man myself and I have been wondering if there might not be a market for someone to do for bachelors what she has been doing for spinsters.

I figure that bachelors must be just as confused about everything as single girls are and would welcome a chance to pour their troubles into a sympathetic ear.

I know that I was plenty confused when I was a bachelor and as far as I can tell, things haven't changed a great deal since then.

I don't, however, want to be called a copycat, so I thought I would depart from Helen Gurley Brown's format and offer my service under the title "Night Baseball And The Single Boy."

It seems to me that night baseball has become an even bigger problem than sex. At least, the attendance is larger.

Every wholesome, clean-cut, red-blooded, 100 per cent American unmarried male finds himself with divided instincts. He is a victim of what the psychiatrists refer to as the "Romeo/Casey Stengel Complex."

One-half of him would like to ask his girl friend for a date to the movies, or a dance or a grouse hunt. The other half of him would rather go to the ball game.

TORN BETWEEN these basic urges, many single men have sought to escape reality by taking their girl friends to the ball game.

On paper, this would appear to be a logical solution. In practice, however, it has never worked out very well.

The poor fellow is unable to concentrate on either the game or the girl. Hence the evening becomes one of total frustration. He has failed to advance romantically and he has loused up the score card.

THIS IS THE SORT of problem that Helen Gurley Brown, operating from the single girl's standpoint, tends to gloss over, but it is one that I expect to explore in depth.

Bachelors need not be miserable merely because they are single. If anything is bugging you, fellows, drop me a line and I'll straighten you out.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

CAT SPILLS THE WINE

One little cat in Italy did more than upset an apple cart. It caused a truck to turn over and spill 3,000 gallons of wine in the middle of a field.

It all happened this way: the cat decided to cross the road just as the wine truck was passing a passenger car.

The driver of the automobile, meanwhile, saw the cat approaching and swerved to miss it. The truck then had to swerve to miss the car. But the driver lost control of his truck. It ran off the road into a field, where it overturned and spilled all the wine.

This is an exceptional case, to be sure. But if you could analyze the successes or tragedies of life, you would find that the final results for good or evil in more instances than not, could be traced back to some seemingly insignificant details.

Nothing that you do is unimportant from God's point of view. Your slightest thought, word or effort has some influence for better or for worse.

Picture Of Babies Was Propaganda

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

I am sure this is a very touching picture of babies picketing the Texas capitol, however, someone should explain to 11-month-old Blas Villareal III and his sister, Dorcas, that the reason their father must die is that he killed a man by the name of Wallace Connor who, for all I know, may have had children of his own.

Undoubtedly this was a propaganda piece aimed at capital punishment. However, I am surprised that AP carried it and extremely disappointed in your editorial judgment for using it.

More Truths Than Propaganda

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

If there were no difference of opinion, a lot of pari-mutuel clerks would be unemployed, and with this in mind, one can understand Carl Hepp's lack of enthusiasm for the work of Interlandi.

However, it is most difficult to understand Mr. Hepp's use of the words "vilification" and "bigotry" in relation to Interlandi's commentaries on the socio-political vagaries of our culture.

By publishing The Cynic's Corner and Walt Kelly's Pogo, the Independent-Journal exposes its readers to more truth than can be gleaned from the tub-thumpings of all the propagandists of the Right and the Left put together.

TRY AND STOP ME

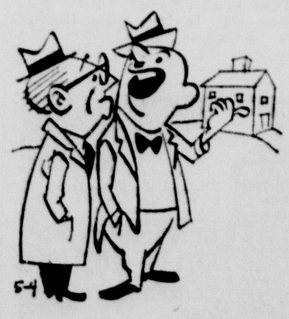
BENNETT CERF

A member of the board of directors of a big baking company staggered out of a meeting and called for the doctor. "It's my heart, I think," he gasped weakly. "Our chairman just proposed a double-your-money-back guarantee on OUR cookies!"

"Minutes," the house organ of a nation-wide insurance company, has discovered a new language: "Realestatese," which embodies the art of making the description of a house bear as little resemblance as possible to the real appearance of same.



A few prime example:

Newly decorated: The owner has repaired the front door.

Needs slight additional decorating: The buyer had better not make any weekend plans for the next three years.

Charming cul-de-sac: Dead-end street behind a busy supermarket parking lot and a boys' schoolyard.

Magnificent view: The nearest bus stop is at least five miles away.

Prestige community: Two of the neighbors have maids.

Only two left: There were three originally.

A wise word of caution from Vince Rivers: "That argument you won from your wife isn't over yet!"

Juveniles Being Protected Too Far If They Can Insult Women On Street

The pendulum has swung just about as far as it should in protecting juveniles who get into trouble with the law.

Their names are withheld, they are tried in closed court so that their sensitive minds are not shocked by the glare of publicity.

A few years ago, the cop on the beat was a feared and respected man. So was the school teacher. If pupils got out of line, the teacher would rap them over the knuckle and bring them in line.

But now, you so much as touch a youngster, and you have a lawsuit on your hands.

LAWS TO PROTECT the juveniles are fine. But some young hoodlums seem to think that leniency shown juveniles is a sign of weakness. And they continue to strut and bully those around them.

The incident that got me started on this topic occurred on San Rafael's main street a few nights ago. A young housewife, doing some shopping, ran into a group of juveniles in front of the store. They jostled her, tossed insults and one of them actually spat on her.

It's a sorry state of affairs if a small group of juveniles can terrorize society so that women and children don't dare go shopping on the main street.

NICK GIAMPOLI, who lost the battle for San Rafael police chief, is making plans to start a private patrol in the Southern Marin waterfront and business area.

Former deputy sheriff Pete Lampros will help Giampoli run the private patrol.

TWO SIGNS POSTED side by side at a local bait shop-bar always amuse me. One sign says "No Minors Allowed," and the other, "Minors Use Other Door."

TERRA LINDA Unit 9 finally made it. They are no longer outcasts.

They are now a part of San Rafael. Congratulations.

THE JIM KEAN family got a new dachshund which they named "Volksy." Why the name Volksy? we asked.

"Well," said Kean, "we felt it should be a people's dog—it should belong to all the people in our household."

FOR A SMALL community, Woodacre is going all out for organized recreation. They're spending $43,000 to build a new pool, two tennis courts, improve the ball field and construct bleachers for spectators.

The whole thing should be ready for use by June 15, says Al Giddings, who is sparkplugging the project.

U.S. Needs To Take Firm Stand About Any Soviet Troops In Cuba

WASHINGTON—What will it take to persuade the Kennedy administration that the removal of Soviet troops from Cuba is the U.S. government's first order of business?

If the Kremlin acquires another satellite in Latin America from which to operate, will this convince the President that the Soviet forces in the Western hemisphere constitute a "clear and present" danger which must be soon removed?

I raise this question because a second Latin American county is evidently just yearning to be embraced. This is the little Batista-type dictatorship of Francois Duvalier in Haiti, which is showing every sign of reaching out to Khrushchev and Castro in the hope that they can save it from the disillusion and discontent of his own people.

TRYING TO perpetuate his regime beyond its constitutional end this month, Duvalier is apparently deperate enough to take the risk of inviting in the Soviet-Castro Communists.

If this should happen, what would be the response of those who view the Soviet presence in Cuba as a secondary concern? No doubt some would argue that the danger is not increased, but divides between two countries, that the more the Soviets take over, the more Castro's image will be impaired elsewhere, and that if we will only keep quiet the Soviet troops would go away.

I SUSPECT that most Americans are not so wishful or so timid.

Furthermore, the prospect that the desperate Duvalier will throw his country into the embrace of Soviet-dominated Cuba is no imaginary nightmare.

The foreign minister of the Dominican Republic, Andres Freites, has informed a peace mission of the Organization of American States that he has information showing that the Haitian President has already offered military bases to Castro.

Such a disclosure is not surprising since there is already evidence that Duvalier has been maintaining secret contacts with the Haitian Communists and simultaneously making public overtures to Czechoslovakian and other Soviet bloc Communists abroad.

No doubt the Haitian dictator, who has tried to rewrite his nation's constitution in order to perpetuate his regime with a semblance of legality, believes that he can "borrow" enough Communist force from Castro to keep him in power, but not enough to allow the Soviet-Castro forces to take over his government.

IT DOESN'T WORK that way. Communists don't help keep non-Communists in office, as the events in Laos grimly prove. This is why the revelation that Duvalier hopes to save himself by offering a base for the Khrushchev-Castro forces can hardly fail to send a chill down the spine of every official in Washington.

It seems to me the premise of the administration is that because of other cold war issues (such as Berlin and Laos) we dare not make the removal of Soviet troops a top priority or to accept the risks of action. I believe the opposite is nearer the truth, that if we don't deal decisively with the Soviet presence in Cuba, we will thereby be set back everywhere else in the cold war.

HOW OFTEN and how rightly it has been said that unless the U. S. stands resolutely against the encroachment of the Soviet Union on West Berlin, the whole Atlantic Alliance will decay and crumble.

I believe it is equally true that unless we soon turn back the Soviet military encroachment in the Western hemisphere, we will be undermining the Western position elsewhere as well as in Latin America.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

A letter from the Public Housing Authority said that defense needs require continued operation of Marin City, Hilarita and the Marin dormitories hence such housing "cannot be relinquished at this time."

Blumenfeld Theaters announced that San Rafael's El Camino theater would be closed and remodeled into a new department store for J. C. Penney Co. which said it would triple its current space and double its staff.

20 YEARS AGO

Three Marin County outdoor display signs were to be taken down following orders from Dist. Atty. A. L. Bagshaw to the county planning commission and after criticism of Marin inaction by the California Roadside Council.

Gypsy fortune-tellers visited San Rafael without consulting their crystal balls to learn that Police Chief Fran Kelley was going to bounce them promptly.

Ross ordered all vacant lots opened for Victory Garden purposes.

There's Lots Of Talk, No Action On Red Summit

May Be Long Time Before Nikita, Mao Get Together

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's beginning to look as if it will be a long time before Mao Tze-tung and Premier Nikita Khrushchev, the two giants of the Communist bloc, have a face-to-face meeting—if they ever do.

High level talks to clear the air have been sought by China since last summer to shore up the several leaks in the Communist world's dike. But the appropriate time does not seem to be at hand now.

Neither Mao nor Khrushchev shows an sign of yielding ground from his position on the sources of conflict producing the deep rift in relations between Moscow and Peking: differences in interpretation of ideology, conflicts of national interest and, last but surely NOT least, Titoism and the place of Yugoslavia.

In early April Mao invited Khrushchev to drop in on him in Peking en route to a visit in Cambodia. But Khrushchev declined the invitation, explaining that he never intended going to Cambodia. (Making the trip instead will be Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.)

Then Khrushchev lobbed the ball back to Peking by suggesting that Mao trek to Moscow to see him, or send Chinese Communist representatives to Moscow for preliminary talks around May 15. (It was rumored in Moscow that the Soviet premier prefers the latter plan.) But since then, no reply from Mao has been announced.

Two events which followed on the heels of the invitation exchange seem to dim any prospects that the two are in the mood to mend their differences speedily.

First, Yugoslavia offered to send India large quantities of weapons especially useful in mountain warfare. This could only serve to further alienate the Red Chinese. Next, the Communist daily, Pravda, altered wording of its May Day greetings to Yugoslavia to bring it in line with annual messages sent to countries within the Communist bloc. This special mark of favor is also deeply offensive to the anti-Tito Red Chinese.

From China come reports of a renewal of the anti-Khrushchev propaganda campaign that had been halted about the time Mao sent his invitation to Moscow.

To add further to the confusion, there has been talk that Khrushchev may be on his way out of power.

But despite the now-slim chances of a Red summit meeting, there is no expectation of a formal diplomatic split between the two countries.

Here, in brief, are the major points of conflict facing the Red Chinese and the Soviets:

A basic conflict is a difference in interpretation of Marxist-Leninist doctrine. The Chinese condemn Khrushchev as a "modern revisionist"; i.e., he rejects the tenet that there must inevitably be a major clash between Communism and capitalism.

Khrushchev claims a big war with "imperialism" can now be avoided because the Red camp is so strong the imperialists would not dare start one. He accuses the Chinese of dogmatism—too strict following of Marxist-Leninist scriptures.

The next trouble spot concerns the development of revolutions and involves Yugoslavia. China says revolutions develop according to specific conditions in nations involved, citing he own revolution based on the peasantry instead of the classical reliance on urban proletariat.

The Russians also proclaim that specific conditions affect how revolutions develop, and cite Yugoslavia as their example. Khrushchev feels Yugoslavia has not restored capitalism, and that Tito should be returned to the fold to advance world Communist unity.

But Mao completely rejects Tito's "revisionism" as a betrayal of Marxism-Leninism. Any accommodation to the U.S. means a slip back toward capitalism to him.

Because of Khrushchev's policy of "peaceful coexistence" and the continuation of disarmament talks, the Chinese say Khrushchev is slowing down the process of world revolution. The claim he is selling Communist parties down the river in backward areas by not seizing revolutionary opportunities, and that any talk of disarmament is betrayal.

What the Chinese really fear is that Khrushchev will agree to some nuclear limitations before they get into the nuclear club.

The two also disagree over Communist strategy and tactics. Mao's tactic is to strike the enemy wherever and whenever possible, without regard for the risk of starting a war. Khrushchev says strategy and tactics are inextricably bound together. He uses tactics to push the strategic aim, the ultimate goal of Communist world domination. So if tactics require it, for example, he is willing to make temporary accommodations if he feels it serves long-range strategy.

While Mao's dictum is attack, always attack, Khrushchev relies on a flexible foreign policy considering both attack and retreat.

Mao claims there have been no peaceful transitions to socialism in history. In his eyes, there must be no relaxation of the struggle because capitalists will never surrender voluntarily. Khrushchev says peaceful transition has occurred and feels parliamentary tactics can be used successfully. He is wary of pushing the Soviet Union down the road to nuclear war.

Peking and Moscow also have clashed over incidents affecting their national interests. For example, the Chinese are angry over Khrushchev's statement deploring their attack on Indian frontiers, which he made in 1959 and repeated strongly this year. They also resent Russia's selling advanced MIG jet fighters to India.

Over Cuba, Mao criticizes Khrushchev for "blundering adventurism," in trying to install nuclear missiles in Cuba without advance assurance of by withdrawing the missiles under U.S. pressure. He claims Cuba was a "second Munich," and that once there, the missiles should have been kept there.

Soviet action in the Cuban crisis, Khrushchev claims, saved the world from nuclear war and actually preserved Communism and Castro.

At stake also is Communist leadership. Mao views Khrushchev as an upstart with no theoretical background for leadership. While Mao has the backing of Asian Communists (except for the Indians), Khrushchev wields the power of the European bloc, and the backward nations remained divided. However, Chinese influence is growing.

Another thorn in China's side is the amount of support given them by the Soviets. She feels the USSR was niggardly in its help to China, while generous to such nations as India and Egypt, whose governments actually are anti-Communist. This policy, China feels is more evidence of retarding world revolution.

The Soviets have no desire to see the Chinese a mighty world power on their borders. But another consideration is that Soviet economic aid is also administered with national, more than world Communist, ends in mind with Soviet domination as the main goal. The USSR wants no Communist rivals for preeminence.

So, if the Communist giants ever do get together at the conference table, there will be plenty to discuss.

MAJOR CONFLICTING POINTS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND CHINA

MAO'S VIEWS

IDEOLOGICAL

1. REVISIONISM VS. DOGMATISM—Is major clash between communism and capitalism necessary? Chinese claim K. is "modern revisionist,"—betrays Leninism.

2. NATIONAL LIBERATION—Chinese accuse K. of not seizing revolutionary opportunities; say K. slows down world revolution by dickering over disarmament.

3. STRATEGY AND TACTICS—respect enemy tactically, despise him strategically. Always attack, regardless of war risk.

4. TRANSITION TO SOCIALISM—no possibility for peaceful transition; capitalists will never give up voluntarily. Never relax struggle.

TITOISM

Tito's brand of communism (revisionism) slips back toward capitalism, betrays party principles.

NATIONAL INTEREST CONFLICT

1. Chinese mad at K. for deploring attack on Indian frontiers.

2. K. is upstart with no theoretical background for leadership. Mao has backing of Asian communists; K. has European bloc; backward communist nations split, but Chinese influence grows.

3. Cuba—K. blundered twice, first in installing nuclear missiles, then in withdrawing them under U. S. pressure.

4. Economy—Amount of Soviet help unsatisfactory when generous aid is going to non-communist nations.

K's VIEWS

IDEOLOGICAL

1. War not inevitable; war can be avoided because Red bloc strong enough to discourage attack. Accuses Chinese of too narrow a view of teachings.

2. What Chinese really are afraid of is K. will agree to nuclear limitations before they get nuclear weapons.

3. Strategy and tactics bound together. Use tactics (make accommodations) if it furthers goal of world communist domination.

4. Peaceful transition has occurred in many cases. Don't start something you can't finish.

TITOISM

Tito should be brought back into bloc to advance world communist unity.

NATIONAL INTEREST CONFLICT

1. Chinese are throwing weight around; just showing off power.

2. K. not going to surrender nuclear leadership; regards Chinese ambitions as dangerous; hasn't given China help in perfecting nuclear weapons.

3. Soviet action saved world from war and preserved both communism and Castro.

4. Soviets have reason to fear a strong China on her borders. They want no rival for top spot in communist world.

How Downfall Of Konrad Adenauer Was Accomplished

By WELLINGTON LONG

BONN (UPI)—Alone as always, proudly erect as ever, the old man walked stiffly from the caucus room.

But the usual barbed wisecracks for the press were missing, and even the brashest reporters fell back from the stern countenance.

Iti s embarrassing to look too closely at a champion just defeated, and this man was West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, finally and forever whipped—at age 87 — in his fight of many years to name his own successor.

KONRAD ADENAUER
Defeated champion

Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard, the architect of West Germany's post-war prosperity, the man whose name Adenauer personally painted on his party's banners, would no longer be denied his political inheritance.

The day was April 23, 1963. The time of defeat 5:20 in the afternoon.

The two had come a long way since the afternoon of Feb. 21, 1949. When Adenauer rammed Erhard's new-fangled economic theories down his party's throat.

Adenauer introduced Erhard to a meeting of the top leaders of the Christian Democratic Union.

Erhard, then adviser to the economic council for the British and American zones of occupation, was preaching "social market economy," and saying that if controls were ended, production would rise and prices find a reasonable level.

The state, Erhard argued, could prevent inflation through proper tariff, finance and tax policies. His policies, followed in part by the economics council, were successful.

Erhard was a little-known Bavarian teacher of economics when Adenauer set out to get him into national politics. By silencing discussion, he overruled those who complained that Erhard's ideas ran counter to the party's official platform, and he said if the party adopted Erhard's ideas, it was bound to reap millions of votes.

Most Christian Democratic Party workers approved with enthusiasm. Adenauer won the day—and won Erhard.

Together, Adenauer and Erhard won three more elections.

Neither man could have achieved the success he did without the other.

But even before they reached that high-water mark, relations between the two men were showing strain.

Erhard, 20 years Adenauer's junior, was not willing always to remain in the shadows. He made it plain that as long as Adenauer wanted to be chancellor, he would make no effort to unseat him. But he also made it clear he intended to succeed Adenauer.

But Adenauer felt that Erhard was a specialist, a fine economist but lacking in the toughness and finesse needed to lead the government.

In February, 1959, Adenauer moved to eliminate Erhard from the succession by having him nominated for the figurehead office of federal president. Erhard saw through the move, and declined.

Friends urged Adenauer to accept the presidency and let Erhard move up to the chancellory.

Surprisingly, the chancellor agreed and in April, 1959, accepted the nomination for president. He intended to use the situation to bring Finance Minister Franz Etzel into the chancellory. Etzel would do just what Adenauer told him.

In June 5 that year, while Erhard was in Washington and so unable to mobilize his forces rapidly, Adenauer withdrew from the presidential race, and announced he intended to remain chancellor.

Erhard was furious. But, whether for reasons of loyalty or caution, he refused to make a fight.

The feud simmered, and came to a head again after the 1961 election. The Christian Democrats, skidding at the polls, won just less than a majority.

Several young ministers attempted to use this situation to get Adenauer out. But at the critical moment Erhard again refused to help.

Adenauer was now the oldest chief of government in the world. His annual bouts with grippe were lasting longer. His leadership was under question. His firm hold on national affairs loosening.

In late 1962, Adenauer's gradual yielding of power was given a shove when Defense Minister Franz Josef Strauss sparked a government charge of treason against the magazine Spiegel for an attack it made on the country's military leadership. As the weeks went by, the case appeared flimsier and flimsier. The Free Democrats walked out of the government until Strauss himself was forced to quit.

All this past winter the pressure grew. Adenauer gave ground only slowly. He told a foreign press association dinner he would definitely step down this autumn, but gave no date.

To all visitors, Adenauer gave the same assurance — his successor would be named in the fall, and under no circumstances would it be Erhard.

On April 22 last, the fight was joined for the final time.

The Christian Democratic party executives met. Adenauer proposed it discuss the French-German friendship treaty that he regards as one of his crowning achievements. The executive decided instead to consider the succession. Adenauer proposed the designation of a successor be formally postponed till the fall. The executive insisted on immediate consideration.

Interior Minister Hermann Hoecherl suggested Adenauer ought to personally put Erhard's name in nomination. But the old man stuck to his guns. Finally the next day, Adenauer's party deserted him. The 14-year "Adenauer era" in Germany was for all intents and purposes over.

But in Bonn, now, there is a well-used political joke for sale or—as some wits have wryly suggested — for lend-lease to the France of Gen. Charles de Gaulle:

Adenauer, dangling a great-grandson on his knee, asks the little boy, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" "Chancellor, great-grandpa, just like you," the youngster replies. "Well, that's impossible, my boy," is Adenauer's response, "because I'M chancellor! What else do you want to be?"

Voice Of People Heard Loud, Mean

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The voice of the people is sometimes surly.

If you don't believe it, reach into the legislature's mailbag.

"You dirty Democrats are so low there is no bottom to your degradation," wrote a constituent of Assembly Majority Leader Jerome R. Waldie (D-Antioch).

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh (D-Los Angeles) got a letter recently from someone who threatened to hang him. The unsigned letter was turned over to the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

Someone else complained to Unruh that he had named as a committee chairman a man who was a Communist sympathizer.

Unruh wrote back that the appointee was an able legislator, a patriotic American and added, "you sound like some kind of a nut."

That's just a sample of the bizarre letters received in Sacramento each day by California's 40 senators and 80 assemblymen.

Others aren't threatening. But they indicate the writer hasn't a full grasp of the issues. Like this one from a person who invoked the name of an old age pension lobbyist to indicate what he wanted:

"Dear Sir: Please support the bills that George McLain is lobbying for."

Then, there are the well-organized campaigns.

Recently for example, Assemblyman James Holmes (R-Santa Barbara) said he received some 5,000 letters in support of resolutions asking Congress to initiate a constitutional amendment to repeal the federal income tax and forbid the federal government from competing with private enterprise.

Assemblyman Robert T. Monagan (R-Tracy) said he usually ignores such broadside attacks, preferring "personal notes telling how the bill would affect them."

If you want your letter to count, agrees Assembly Speaker Pro tempore Carlos Bee (D-Hayward) "write a personal letter, for form letters or mimeograph messages hold little or no weight."

Winston Churchill Steps Down

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

When Mrs. Doris Moss opened the letter she did not know it was a historic document.

Mrs. Moss is chairman of the British Conservative Party Assn. of the Woodford Constituency. The letter was an advance notice that the member of Parliament representing the constituency would not stand for re-election.

It was signed: "Winston S. Churchill."

Thus ended the 63-year parliamentary career of the man considered by many to be the greatest statesman in British history, a person so beloved in the United States that he was made an honorary citizen this year.

Sir Winston is deaf. He no longer can walk because of a broken leg. And Churchill is nearing 90. He felt that he could no longer be useful in Parliament because of his infirmities so he retired.

But at week's end, Churchill let it be known that he would still speak up when he found it necessary.

In a letter to the Primrose League, a conservative organization of which he is grand master, Churchill said Britain must keep its nuclear deterrent because "these deadly weapons are safer in our hands than in any other."

Churchill's retirement from the political scene was only one of many major news developments of an eventful week. Perhaps historians a few years hence will regard Sir Winston's action as the most significant.

During this week a threat of war between Haiti and the Dominican Republic grew stronger, the racial issue in the United States boiled when Negroes staged mass demonstrations against segregation in Birmingham, Ala. and New Hampshire became the first state in this century to set up a lottery.

It was learned in Moscow that Frol Kozlov, the man tapped by Premier Nikita Khrushchev to be his successor, was ailing. This news started speculation as to who would succeed Khrushchev. Most observers regarded Mikhail Suslov, the party theoretician and a hard-line Communist, as the logical successor. But they did not rule out the possibility that Anastas Mikoyan, who is aging, would serve briefly as Russia's leader.

Around The World Around The Clock

Katmandu — The U. S. Himalayan expedition reported that an American and a Nepalese guide reached the summit of Mount Everest. The names of the two men were withheld temporarily.

Washington — The Senate appropriations committee restored 50 million of the 69.8 million dollars which the house had cut out of the Post Office Department's request for operating funds during the next fiscal year. If this restoration gets through Congress, mail deliveries will be continued on Saturdays. Otherwise no mail will be delivered during weekends.

Vatican City — Sources in the Vatican said Jozsef Cardinal Mindszenty may end his six-year asylum in the U. S. legation in Budapest and go to Rome. The cardinal had refused previous Hungarian offers of amnesty because he did not want to leave his country.

Sao Paula — A Brazilian airliner crashed in a Sao Paulo suburb and set several homes afire. Estimates of the death toll among those aboard the plane ranged from 41 to 49. None of the residents of the burned homes was reported injured.

Sulphur Springs, Ala. — Five white men and five Negroes retracing the steps of William Moore, a white postman who was shot to death on a civil rights march to Jackson, Miss., were arrested when they crossed the state line in Alabama after a walk through northwest Georgia.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Pretty Silly To Put Brains On Ice When You're Defending

Most bridge players think one-quarter of the time, as declarer.

Now, there's some excuse for taking a rest when you're dummy, but it's pretty silly to put your brains on ice when you're defending.

Opening lead — ◇ J

When this hand was played South won the first trick with the king of diamonds and then let the 10 of hearts ride around to the queen.

WEAKNESS

East looked at dummy and you could practically hear him saying to himself: "Lead up to weakness."

Dummy's weakness was spades, so East returned the six of spades. Understandable, but brainless.

South won with the ace of spades and knocked out the ace of trumps. South had an easy time regaining the lead to draw the last trump.

SIMPLE

He lost only two trumps and one club, making his contract.

Simple card reading would have defeated the contract. That play of the 10 of hearts made it easy for East to see that his partner had the ace of trumps.

South needed all the other missing high cards for his bidding. East could not hope to find another high card in his partner's hand. Still, the ace of trumps was enough.

CASH ACE

East should cash the ace of clubs and lead his other club at once.

West gets in with the ace of hearts and leads another club, whereupon East's ruff defeats the contract.

East didn't have to be a genius to defeat the game.

He just had to be willing to use his head.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 4, the 124th day of 1963 with 241 to follow.

The moon is approaching full phase. The morning stars are Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1942, the Battle of the Coral Sea began, resulting in a major defeat for the Japanese fleet by the U.S. Navy.

In 1855, Woman's Hospital, the first hospital in the world to be operated exclusively for the use of women opened its doors in New York City.

A thought for the day—Daniel Webster said: "Where tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers therefore are the founders of human civilization."

Mill Valley, Alto, Strawberry From Way Up

For a start, look just over the highest ridge even beyond Tamalpais and what can be seen? The Pacific Ocean, with the shadowy length of the Point Reyes Peninsula and even (in the original Aero Photographer's print) those white cliffs which reminded Sir Francis Drake of his homeland nearly four centuries ago and caused him to christen this new place "Nova Albion," a first New England dating from 1579.

Midway along the ridge of Mount Tamalpais note two tiny white globes, heart of a radar installation. Many trails and some bits of the righ roads can be seen—Ridgecrest Boulevard, the Panoramic Highway. The mass of houses nestling into the mountain is Mill Valley, with the east-west length of Camino Alto reaching toward the curves at right of the Corte Madera grade. Enchanted Knolls causes the right-angling of East Blithedale Avenue leading to the Alto interchange where it becomes Tiburon Boulevard.

Below and to the left are the grounds and large buildings of the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary on land reaching out toward Strawberry Point, with the many single-family residences of Strawberry area to the right.

Preparations plainly are being made on the island, below, for one-family construction authorized by county planners months ago. The controversial causeway leading to the island is plainly in evidence.

JUNK YARD ART

San Francisco artist-illustrator Eugene Hoffman puts the final touches to a railroad steam engine collage which he created from metal pieces gleaned from a junk yard and attached to burlap backing with brass bands. The entire work was constructed from corroded, rusty metals such as lids, watch springs and cans. Hoffman said he was trying to show "beer cans can be functional and satisfying without being full."

Rusk Is Heading For Yugoslavia To Bolster U.S.-Tito Relations

By ALLAN JACKS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk goes to Belgrade today to bolster relations between the United States and this Communist country. President Tito will welcome him and his mission.

For nearly two years U.S.-Yugoslav relations have been sagging. They are at perhaps the lowest point since 1948 when Tito broke with Stalin's Soviet Union. Recently Yugoslav leaders have been trying to do something about it. They view Rusk's acceptance of their invitation as evidence of some success.

Yugoslav moves to improve relations have included two private talks between Tito and U.S. Ambassador George F. Kennan. A message from Tito was taken to President Kennedy by Yugoslav Ambassador Veljko Micunovic after consultations here.

Its contents have not been disclosed but it is understood Tito assured Kennedy that Yugoslavia intends to show independence of both Moscow and the West. tI also doubtlessly reiterated the Yugoslav position that closer Yugoslav-Soviet relations should not spoil relations with the West, especially the United States.

One factor in deteriorating U.S.-Yugoslav relations has been a series of visits exchanged between Yugoslav and Soviet leaders. Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev last September used Yugoslavia as a platform for anti-American statements. Tito went to Moscow in December and repeatedly emphasized close friendship with the Soviet Union. Premier Nikita Khrushchev is scheduled to come here this summer.

Rusk's visit is the first by a U.S. secretary of state since John Foster Dulles came here in 1955. He is expected to assure Tito that Kennedy will press Congress to reinstate Yugoslavia's status as a most favored trading nation. Cancellation of this special trading status will raise tariffs against some Yugoslav goods and cut into exports to the United States.

U.S. economic aid to Yugoslavia has virtually ceased. In the 15 years since Tito broke with Moscow such aid totaled more than two billion dollars.

The need for trade with the United States, and the dollars it brings, was enough in itself to prompt the Yugoslav initiative for better relations with Washington. But diplomats here believe that the initiative also results from a genuine desire for them.

Youth Is Booked On Molest Charge

Donald Harry Brown, 20, of 1345 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, was booked in Marin County Jail Thursday on suspicion of molesting a 3-year-old child.

A Sonoma mother brought her son and daughter with her to visit a friend in San Rafael on April 13, according to San Rafael police. The woman said she and the friend went shopping, leaving the girl with Brown, police said. The mother later took her daughter to a Sonoma doctor for a checkup suspecting she had been molested, according to the police, who said they have not completed an investigation of the case. The doctor's report has not yet been received, reported Sgt. Paul Selby.

2 Youths Hurt As Cycle, Car Collide

David Miller and Frank Hovanec, both 17, were thrown from a motorcycle about 8:48 a.m. Thursday as it collided with a car driven by Sherry Marie Wilson, 18, of 1045 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo at Nova Albion Way and Montecillo Road, according to San Rafael police.

Miller, of 2785 Heatherstone Drive, Marinwood, who was driving the motorcycle, was treated at San Rafael General Hospital for cuts and bruises. Hovanec, 310 Blackstone Drive, Marinwood, was treated at Marin General Hospital for scratches on his left leg. Miss Wilson was not injured.

Stinson Opposed To Dredging Plan

Stinson Beach Progressive Club directors Wednesday night voted to oppose a Senate bill which would permit dredging of the "Potato Patch" of the Golden Gate to obtain fill for developments in San Francisco Bay.

Main reason for opposition, said Harriet M. Green, secretary-treasurer, is fear of the possible effect of the dredging on beaches in Stinson Beach area.

Directors also voted to support in principle two anti-billboard measures, Senate bill 1132 and Assembly bill 2245.

They stated they favor a cancellation clause in the Steep Ravine Park lease which expires September, 1964, so future development of the area would not be held up. The park, south of Stinson Beach and a part of Tamalpais State Park, could be developed as a public camp and trailer site, the board believes.

The club voted approval of a Fourth of July carnival to raise funds for maintenance of the Stinson Beach Community Center.

Park Borrowing Measure Gains

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A bill to let local recreation and park districts borrow money for 10 years instead of five has the approval of a Senate committee despite a Hayward man's bitter objections.

The Natural Resources Committee backed the measure Thursday, sending it to the floor on an overwhelming favorable vote.

Samuel R. Basum of Hayward opposed the bill. He said it would allow "90 to 100 'little' recreation bureaucracies to each go its own merry way, jollily borrowing money for grandiose schemes."

Mission To India Told

Rev. Burton Weidman will speak Tuesday at the Bethel Baptist Church, 1929 Novato Boulevard, Novato, on his work of more than five years as a missionary in Bengal, India. The talk, to be illustrated with colored slides, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Seven Accepted By Stanford

Seven of 13 San Rafael High School seniors who applied for admission to Stanford University next fall have been accepted, Dean of Students Florence Abraham of San Rafael High reported today.

"Stanford informs us that they admit to their freshman class approximately one of every five applicants. We are pleased, therefore, that we have seven out of 13 applicants who have been accepted," said Miss Abraham.

The potential Stanford Indians are Dirck Brinckerhoff, Erica Gordon, Stephen Graham, Bruce Howard, Sharon Johnson, Eric Rogers, and Carl Schmidt.

Howard has also been granted admission to Harvard University; Graham, to Yale, and Brinckerhoff, to Dartmouth, Miss Abraham reported.

Aircraft Tires To Be Sold At Hamilton

Aircraft tires will be sold as surplus at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The tires may be inspected at Bldg. 729 at Hamilton from 8 to 11 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday until May 22. Bids will be opened at the Oakland Defense Surplus Sales Office, Bldg. 502, Naval Supply Center, Oakland, at 1 p.m. on May 22.

Churchill Backs A-Arms For England

LONDON (UPI)—Sir Winston Churchill, in a surprise public comment, said yesterday that Britain must keep its nuclear deterrent because "these deadly weapons are safer in our hands than in any other."

Churchill, who had announced Tuesday he was retiring from the House of Commons, warned against "the folly of throwing away our arms" in a letter to the Primrose League, a conservative organization of which he is grand master.

The 87-year-old statesman's letter was considered a frank appeal for Conservative Party votes in the next general election in view of the fact that both the opposition Labor Party and the smaller Liberal Party have renounced the bomb."

Sewer Connection Rates Increased

The San Rafael Sanitation Commission Thursday increased the sewer connection rates for apartments.

The new rate, to go into effect June 1, calls for a $125 fee for each unit. Presently a $125 rate is charged for the first unit and $30 for each succeeding unit.

Rates on single family homes will remain the same at $125. The increase was made, according to secretary Norris Rawles, to bring the district into line with rates charged by other sanitation districts in the county.

Winery Trip Changes

The Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club, at a general meeting Thursday night, postponed its tour of the Asti Winery in Sonoma County from June 22 to June 29. Persons interested in going on the tour may get details at the June 6 club meeting or from Mrs. Herbert Owen, 704 Cabin Drive.

PROGRAM EXPANDS FOR ROSE BOWL

An expended program of entertainment for the 54th season of the Larkspur Volunteer Firemen's Saturday night dances at the Rose Bowl was described to Larkspur Chamber members Thursday.

The Musical Madcaps, a harmonica comedy team, and singer Sylvia Gaylord will entertain at the opening dance June 1, said fire prevention officer Arthur E. Wedemeyer Jr.

Jimmy Diamond's orchestra will play for dancing the first night, followed by Del Courtney's orchestra on June 8 and 15.

Wedemeyer said a portion of the dance floor will be occupied by 50 new tables and benches. A back bar will be installed and entertainers will appear on a raised platform to be wheeled onto the floor.

The dances will run through Sept. 14.

San Rafael Fire Station Site Is Recommended

The San Rafael Fire Commission Thursday night decided to recommend to the city council purchase of one fire station sit just north of the sanitation plant and close to Bellam Boulevard.

Cost of the site and fill required to improve the property was estimated at $19,000.

The commission took no action on setting a firm budget figure. Another budget session was set for May 15 at 7:30 p.m. The commission had considered asking for inclusion of two fire station sites in this year's budget.

The commission approved construction of a wall and ramp for fire station No. 2 on Third Street and will recommend to the council a call for bids on paving the drill yard at that station at its next meeting.

Sleepy Hollow Assn. Director Resigns

Resignation of Hutton Theller from the board of directors of the Sleepy Hollow Homes Assn. was accepted with regret by the board Thursday night. President Vernon F. Smith said he will appoint at the next meeting a successor to Theller, who is being transferred from the area.

A May 30 barbecue at the Sleepy Hollow Clubhouse is the next event planned by the association.

Students Awarded Six Scholarships

Six scholarships worth $250 each have been awarded to students at San Rafael, Terra Linda and Tamalpais High Schools by the Marin County Parent-Teacher Assn. scholarship committee.

The six, who competed with more than 50 applicants for the scholarships, are Donna Frost of San Rafael High School, Richard Levarro and Jeffry Moss of Terra Linda High School, and Sandra R. Burdette, Jan McCready and Laurette Smith of Tamalpais High School.

The scholarships were awarded to students planning to attend college and enter the fields of education, welfare or social science, according to Mrs. Sidney H. Diehl, committee chairman.

Marine Departs

Marinite Robert B. Kimmell, private in the Marine Air Reserve, has been assigned six months active duty. He will get recruit training at the Marine Recruit Depot, San Diego, and then be transferred to the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Station. He is the son of Mrs. Dumont Kimmell, 50 Sonoma Street, San Rafael.

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania

New products are our way of progress. The loudspeaker field seems to be moving in two directions at present. Some units are becoming smaller and thinner, and other units are getting larger. At one time, the only speakers that had full range depth on the bass end were the large 4 to 6 cubic foot type cabinets and speakers. With stereo, two such large type enclosures were difficult to fit into most rooms. This led to the shelf type high compliance type speaker systems.

The trend in recent months has been to make these shelf-type units thinner and thinner. We have just tested two of University's new speaker systems in our Sound Room. One of the units tested in the MINI. The MINI is only two inches thick, and boasts the largest woofer for its size — 188 square inches. How did University achieve this? Based on an exclusive design, University utilized a thin, "piston action" sheet of veneered wood, and coupled it to a newly designed, custom-matched voice coil and magnetic assembly. This entire frontal area of the cabinet functions as the woofer and the mid-range speakers. A tweeter in miniature provides the high tones. The overall dimensions are 18" wide, 13⅜" high, and 2" deep.

Although we really didn't expect to hear much bass, we found that the bass was quite clear. A pair of these units would make an excellent speaker system for that extra room. The price is $44.50.

The other new University speaker system tested was the SYL-O-ETTE. This is a radically new design. The speaker system looks like a picture frame, and the grill cloth comes with a Neo-Classic art design, or a Petit Point design, or if you wish, a cane grill. The unit doesn't look like a speaker system, but more like a decorator piece. It can stand on the floor on its own attractive base, or without the base can be hung on the wall as a picture. The dimensions are 23" wide, 29" high, and 4" deep. The SYL-O-ETTE incorporates a three-speaker system with a manufacturers speaker response rating of 40 to 20,000 cps. It can handle 30 watts of program material.

To put it mildly, we were pleasantly surprised at the overall life-like quality of this attractive speaker system. The bass is definitely present together with the mid and high tonal ranges." It has a close-up type of sound that will be very good in most homes. The price, only $99.95. If you want pleasant sound without the look of two speaker systems in the room, try the SYL-O-ETTE.

A Marin Profile—

Mario Lamperti, A Man With An Inventive Mind

By RICHARD CARBONEAU

An inventive mind like that of Mario Joseph Lamperti isn't bound to any one field of endeavor. Problem plus mind equals invention.

Lamperti, born and raised in San Rafael, has been applying his inventiveness to things as diverse as food-freezing and repairing cracked ship engines. His talents also encompass cooking, photography and water-witching.

AS A BOY, living on Bayview Street, Lamperti developed early an interest in electricity. It was about the time the Northwestern Pacific electrified its former steam-operated trains to San Francisco.

"I was attracted by the flashes of electricity from the third rail," he said. "One day I took my dog and went down to the B Street station. I got on with my dog. The conductor asked me who I was. He thought I must be related to somebody on the railroad. But he figured he'd better put me off in Sausalito."

There was no electricity in the Lamperti house at that time.

Young Mario obtained a source of power for his boyhood experiments from discarded dry cells from automobiles. He and his friends salvaged the cells from trash cans and hooked up a neighborhood telegraph system with four or five boys on the line.

The 62-year-old owner of North Bay Electric Works Inc. went to elementary school at the Short School and then attended high school for two years at what is now the E Street School. He dropped out to go to work, however, and finished his education in night school.

IN LATER years he obtained both mechanical and electrical engineering licenses.

Young Mario started working in a large San Francisco electric motor shop, where he was employed from 1917 to 1926. He gained varied experience in motors, controls and other electrical equipment.

MARIO LAMPERTI shows you the size of some of the larger motors with which his North Bay Electric Works Inc. sometimes works. He has been interested in electricity since boyhood. And even his side interest of "water-witching" he attributes to electrical factors. "It's based on electricity somehow," he explains.

In 1926 he started his own business, which he built into a complete electric service organization, including wiring, motor repairs, controls, plumbing, heating, refrigeration and air conditioning.

LAMPERTI HAS designed and built numerous refrigeration systems in the area for dairies and other uses.

He designed a plant at Novato for processing pressed duck. In 1943 he built an experimental deep freeze locker plant, which he operated for several years before leasing it out. He experimented with freezing cooked foods, fruits, mushrooms and foods that were thought at the time to be unfreezable.

During World War II Lamperti developed a "key link process" for repairing large marine engines that were cracked. He and four men operated an organization. The process involved "stitching" the cracked cylinders of either steam or diesel engines with many precision-fitted key links.

"IT SAVED quite a few million dollars and kept a lot of ships going," said Lamperti.

He once repaired a cracked cylinder weighing 10 tons from a Russian ship, which made a number of voyages afterward before eventual replacement of the part.

His company installs steam, hot water and electric heating systems, including radiant floors and ceiling panels. Lamperti also manufactures coils for radiant heating of wood floors.

Lamperti's knowledge of plumbing extends to the installation of water systems in rural areas, and this is where his water-witching comes in.

"I don't know exactly how it works; my father taught it to me," Lamperti said.

"It's based on electricity, somehow," he said. "You can't have wet feet, I know."

HE SAID almost any forked green branch can be used.

"You can feel it; it will turn your hands," he asserted.

But even if he doesn't know how it works, Lamperti knows it works. He says he located springs last fall, he found and developed a well near Healdsburg.

There's never enough time to do all the things Lamperti would like to do. Besides his hobby of color photography, he has been active in the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, various school committees and as a director

The Many Talents Of Mario J. Lamperti

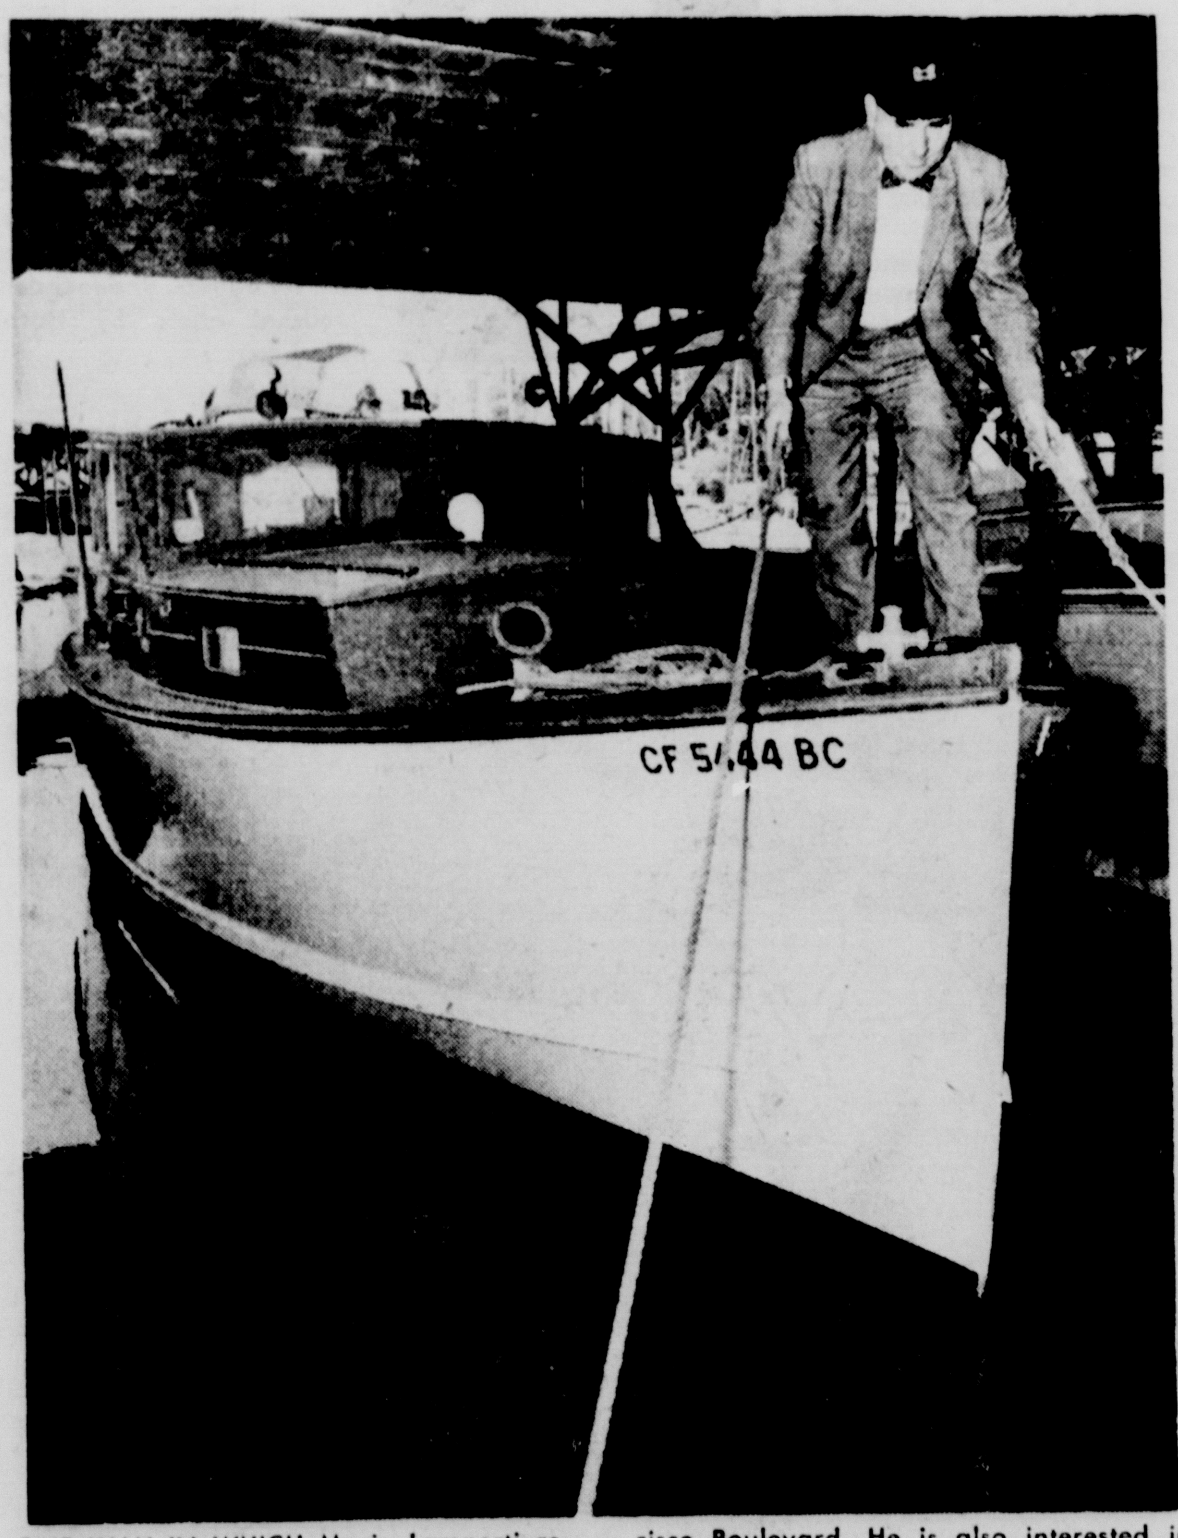
AT HIS NORTH BAY Electric Works Inc. shop in San Rafael, Mario Lamperti supervises and assists employee Dwight Koyl, who is engaged in rewinding the field coil of an electric motor. Compare the size of this small motor with the king-sized one which Lamperti is displaying in the photo on the facing page. Lamperti now employs 20 people.



ONE WAY IN WHICH Mario Lamperti relaxes from his busy life is aboard his 36-foot power cruiser Waltz Time, which he keeps anchored near his shop on Francisco Boulevard. He is also interested in dancing—ballroom, folk and square, color photography and cooking. (Independent-Journal photos)

of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District.

LAMPERTI, a widower with no children, likes people. He likes to dance—ballroom, folk dancing and square dancing—and was the first president of the Marin Dance Council. He likes to cook Italian dinners for the Mill Valley Folk Dancers—"I always did like to eat," he said.

Anchored right next door to Lamperti's shop at 535 Francisco Boulevard is his boat, Waltz Time, a twin-screw 36-footer. He applied his inventive mind to this, too.

The exhaust fumes from conventional ports at the stern tended to swirl up and make passengers ill, so Lamperti devised an underwater exhaust system using venturi tubes to prevent back pressure on the engine.

AT ONE TIME Lamperti operated San Rafael Marine, in which he designed equipment and tools to service boats. He also developed a thick liquid for removing paint from boat bottoms.

Lamperti would like to move to a smaller place and have more free time. His business, in which he employs 20 people, has ranged throughout design, installation, servicing and even appliances. He would like to confine it to electro-mechanical work.

Tiburon's Little Leaguers

Peninsula Goes All-Out For Its Youngsters

For lo, the winter is past.
The rain is over and gone.
Managers appear on the earth.
The time of cheering has come.
And the voices of the Little League umpire is heard in the land.

And who cares?

Out Tiburon way, 260 boys between the ages of 8 and 14 and all their mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, grandparents (not to mention friends of the family) care a lot.

BUT THEIR interest is nothing compared to the dedication of a small group of men who have built the Tiburon Peninsula Little League to its present complement of two pony league, five major and nine minor league teams. Last month at sign-up time, 65 per cent of the eligible boys enrolled. So many were judged ready for major league ball that another team was formed and today, a week later than most Marin communities, weather permitting, with the Reed School band playing and Boy Scout Troop 9 raising the Flag, the Tiburon season was to officially open at Del Mar field.

And thereby hangs a tale.

Little League baseball is not simply a matter of handing nine boys a ball and a bat and telling them to get out and "play ball." Uniforms, safety equipment, insurance, umpires and fields all require time and money not too easily come by.

REALIZING THE rapid growth of the league and the need for additional playing fields, the Tiburon Little League last year entered into a unique arrangement with the Reed Union School District and, through joint efforts, have readied two new fields. These will supplement Judge Field which serves both the semi-pro Pelicans and the Little League, and which must continue as the principal playing field for years to come.

Judge Field is owned by the Tiburon Peninsula Club, subject to the condition that it be used for recreational purposes.

Normally the league holds its opening day festivities at Judge Field—but late and abundant rains have flooded the playing area.

The new fields at Del Mar and Bel Aire Schools were the brainchildren of William A. Carroll, past president of the league and still one of its devoted workers. Construction of the fields began two years ago with Carroll at the helm, and the new diamonds will be brought into almost a fully finished playing condition this season by the league committee now headed by Harold F. Green as president.

Assistance and cooperation have been given by Reed District Supt. Edward C. Pino and school Principals John Fitch, Jack Usilton and Robert Gaw.

COMMUNITY service funds and undistributed reserves of the Reed School District have provided $1,500 for the Del Mar and $4,000 for the Bel Aire fields. The district committed itself to purchasing topsoil and materials for a sprinkler system, and promised to maintain and water the turf.

The Little League committee members contributed the "sweat of their brows" and $6,500 for professionally-drawn plans, architectural supervision, expert engineering and the equipment and labor needed to grade the sites and install the sprinklers, turf, backstops and bleachers.

And where did the $6,500 come from? Tired of ekeing out $100 here and $200 there from dances, brunches and Christmas tree sales, the committee turned to the community and raised $1,000 with a mail campaign.

Impressed by diligence and dedication of the men, the Arequipa Foundation made a Back row: David Airola and Bill Bigelow.

ONE OF THE TWO NEW baseball diamonds which the Tiburon Peninsula has provided for its Little Leaguers is this field at the Del Mar School. It and the Bel Aire School field were developed jointly by the Reed Union School District and Little League supporters headed by a group of "dedicated fathers." Judge Field, previously used, will provide the program with still a third diamond. Weather permitting, the 1963 Tiburon Peninsula Little League season was to open today.

New Fields For The Little Leaguers

substantial contribution. The remainder came from family donations and sponsorships.

ALSO IMPRESSED were the San Francisco Giants, who read the story of the big baseball project on the sports pages of the Independent Journal. Over came promotions man Walter Mails, bringing head groundskeeper Matty Schwab who gave the men the benefit of his expert advice on laying out the Bel Aire field.

And back again, three weeks ago, came Schwab with two sets of bases and concrete anchors to present to the league as a gift from the Giants.

This year, in order to raise additional funds for new uniforms and equipment, Little League vice-president Vernon Girtler has organized a finance committee which has launched a determined campaign to obtain additional sponsorships.

NEW SPONSORS have responded by joining the business concerns and organizations of past seasons in lending their vital financial and moral support to the teams.

If there is any single item which distinguishes the Tiburon Little League from the many other successful Little League programs in Marin, it may be the "Parent Conduct Rules."

Each year the league issues a "decorum memorandum" to all fathers and mothers. In brief, it states as the objective of the league the teaching of good sportsmanship, loyalty, courage and respect. Winning is recognized as important—but secondary.

The memorandum is really a "code of ethics" and calls upon parents, managers, coaches, umpires, league officials and players to maintain a standard of conduct above reproach in all league activity.

THE DEDICATED men, all with boys in the league, include Joe Murphy, Elmer Rieger, Fred Mantegani, Bob Beyries, Ed Ryall, Lowell Airola, David Kamp, Lee Larimer, Rolph Murk, Bill Roby, Paul Hantzsche, Charles Estudillo, Bob MacCarthy, Don Mitchell, James Morgan, Girtler, Carroll and Green.

In years to come, no one should be too surprised to see some of these same last names appearing on the professional baseball rosters. For, in addition to providing the best in equipment and fields, the men are also teaching their sons the right way to play baseball.

• This is the age of automation, of new methods and products. There is usually more than one reason for an industry adapting so-called automation—and there is more than one reason for the dry cleaning industry adapting "self-service" methods and equipment. One of the principal reasons, however, was to enable dry cleaners to render a more personalized service to customers.

• Personalized dry cleaning, the NORGE way, differs radically from past practices in the industry—of cleaning miscellaneous garments, etc., in "mixed" batches in large vats or tumblers. NORGE cleans your clothing, drapes, blankets and slip covers unmixed with others in 150 gallons of top quality, freshly-filtered solvent. The load is dried slowly at 145° temperature and aired for five minutes to remove all solvent odors. At the end of the overall 45-minute cleaning cycle most garments may be worn without pressing since this processing sets no wrinkles nor causes any shrinkage. This is new! This is different! Others may imitate, but NORGE equipment actually "does the job" for you.

• The price is right. Only $2.00 for a full 8-lb. load. Expert pressing services are available at low cost, if desired. And a licensed dry cleaner is always on duty to assist you.

A Dream Takes Shape At Civic Center

By PEGGY GANNON

The dream of an amphitheater and pools at the new Marin County Civic Center may well become a reality in the not-too-distant future.

And playing a major role toward the realization of this dream has been Mrs. Ralston Hodgson of Ross. For it was Mrs. Hodgson who was contacted by the late architect Frank Lloyd Wright for assistance in the drawing of plans for this portion of the Civic Center development.

ONE DAY IN 1957, Mrs. Hodgson remembers, she received a telephone call from Aaron C. Green, Wright's assistant, asking her to meet with the architects to discuss plans for the civic center pools. Her roles as originator, choreographer and production manager of Marin's annual Ballet Aquacade, a traditional event now in its 18th year, made Mrs. Hodgson a natural and well qualified choice as such a consultant.

The first meeting was held at the Roger Kent home in Kentfield where the earliest aquacades had been presented. Green took pictures and asked Mrs. Hodgson's advice as to the needs of future larger and more expensive aquacades and similar events.

After Wright had drawn the plan, it was again discussed with Mrs. Hodgson. She then emphasized the need for more area around the pool and a better accessibility for the entrances. The first plans were discarded and Wright then presented his second plan.

THE POOLS would be part of the amphitheater. There would be two pools—one of them Olympic size which is 360-feet-long so that it could be used if the World Olympics ever came to this Bay Area, and the other pie-shaped stage pool. Each section would be controlled by a hydraulic lift which could be raised or lowered and the pool instantly filled with water.

In explaining the pie-shaped stage pool, Mrs. Hodgson notes: "The pool, the way it is planned, would make a very spectacular setting not only for Ballet Aquacade, but many other outdoor productions."

To seat 3,000 persons, the amphitheater is intended not only as a key facility for the Marin County fairs, but also for year-round service to the community. Its design provides for a flexible, multi-purpose use to accommodate a wide variety of entertainment events such as symphony concerts, boxing and wrestling matches, historical pageants, waterworks and fireworks displays, ballet, ballet aquacades and diving exhibitions, folk dance festivals and theatrical performances.

AS ALAN BRUCE, county administrator, explains: "The smaller pool only, closest to the audience seating, is included in the actual architectural plans for the amphitheater. The larger swimming pool is in the master plan only as an eventual private concession.

"If current planning is followed, no tax dollars will be used for the amphitheater itself. The state government is now accumulating in parimutuel funds $105,000 per year for the account of the Marin County fairgrounds. Unless plans change, as they often do, the amphitheater could be constructed, on this basis, in 1965-66."

If and when that time arrives, the Ballet Aquacade will find itself with an ideal location, Mrs. Hodgson believes, and will be ready to encourage even greater participation by the youth of the county.

She thinks Frank Lloyd Wright expressed the philosophy behind the amphitheater and pools perfectly when, in an address to the people of Marin County in 1957, he said:

"BEAUTY IS the moving cause of nearly every issue worth the civilization we have, and civilization without a culture is like a man without a soul. Culture consists of the expression by the human spirit of the love of beauty."

Through the Ballet Aquacade, Mrs. Hodgson feels, some 350 young people of Marin County have found one way of expressing their love of beauty and creativity.

This year's production will be held at the Ann Curtis School of Swimming on June 8 and 9 at 2:30 p.m. As a Marin General Hospital Auxiliary branch program, proceeds from the event will go to the hospital for the purchase of a much-needed cycle bed.

LOOKING AT DRAWINGS of the proposed amphitheater and pools at the new Marin County Civic Center is Mrs. Ralston Hodgson of Ross, who helped plan the facilities. When completed, the outdoor theater and stage pool will be the new home of the Ballet Aquacade, which Mrs. Hodgson founded and choreographs, along with other cultural and community events. YOUNG JANET OLIVER arrives at Terra Linda High School to begin her school day 50 minutes earlier than most students. She and the other participants in the school's pilot program in team teaching begin their instruction at 8 a.m.

School Starts Early

For Terra Linda High School Students Enrolled In Team Teaching Program

Some students at Terra Linda High School are voluntarily taking examinations these days to assess the value of a new approach to education.

The approach is "staff utilzation through team teaching" which is much on the national education scene these days, and which has been applied locally for nearly a year in a pilot block program for approximately 340 students in Marin's newest high school.

THE SAN RAFAEL High School District is now evaluating this program through a series of tests for block program students in fields ranging from mathematics, foreign languages, English comprehension and U.S. history to college aptitude, study habits and attitudes, plus the California inventory series designed to indicate responsibility, flexibility, achievement by conformity, achievement by independence, and intellectual efficiency.

One of the students in this block program is Janet Oliver, 15, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs Robert E. Oliver of 56 Circle Road in Los Ranchitos.

Janet is a sophomore who volunteered, with her parents' consent, to participate in the beginning of the block last fall.

Entrance in the program means that Janet starts her school day at 8 a.m., 50 minutes earlier than other students, and pursues a flexible program of studies in periods ranging from 20 to 100 minutes in length, within classes of eight to 100 students, on a schedule that varies from day to day as well as week to week.

AFTER LUNCH, at 1:30 p.m., Janet and the other block program students join traditional courses for the last two periods of the day.

School authorities assured all parents, including Janet's, at the beginning of the school year that block students would have at least all the work included in the regular program and possibly more.

The program consists of English, social studies, mathematics, foreign languages and physical education. In addition to these, Janet has been able to include advanced band work which she feels she would not have been able to fit into her college preparatory program in the conventional course arrangement.

AS A BLOCK PROGRAM student, Janet Oliver can use the Terra Linda High language laboratory during any free time to "bone up" on her French.

THE SCHOOL DAY over, Janet does a bit of studying in the sunshine in the high school's amphitheater while awaiting transportation home.

One purpose of the block program is staff utilization planned to enable teachers to work as a team presenting integrated materials.

FOR EXAMPLE, if a planned lecture is applicable to 100 students, it is given once and for the length of time required for the material. While one teacher is engaged with this large number of students, several other teachers are released to provide individual attention for small groups dealing with subject matter that cannot be easily encompassed in a lecture.

Janet described one day's schedule as beginning at 8 a.m. with a lecture on English literature in a class of 90. The period was followed by a social studies discussion group of 18 students at 9 a.m. and individual study in an English lab from 9:40 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Physical education was scheduled from 10 a.m. to 10:40 a.m. and after a brief brunch break, Janet joined a class of 18 students for 40 minutes of geometry instruction. The next class, a French lecture to 60 students, lasted 40 minutes.

That particular day, Janet also had 40 minutes to study geometry before luncheon. At 1:30 p.m., she joined the traditional program for a study period and advanced band work.

"FLEXIBLE scheduling," according to Lauriston Tardy, block program director, "breaks away from the customary pattern which assumes that all phases of all courses should have exactly the same amount of time each day."

Tardy also points out that "the block program permits teachers to better utilize their particular abilities as well as give more time to individual students."

Block students are encouraged to employ free time in independent work in foreign language, English and mathematics laboratories as well as the library and other available facilities.

The program includes students from all four years of high school who may cross levels during the day's course.

JANET SHARES the program with her "adopted" sister, Mona Wicknertz, a senior exchange student from Sweden who transferred to Terra Linda this year and lives with Janet and her family. The two girls meet in second year French courses, but otherwise seldom see each other during the day.

Despite the intensified program, Janet finds time to play the flute in the school band, take a leading role in last month's musical comedy as well as practice for the upcoming Aquafair.

She's busy, Janet admits. But there is also the compensation of "feeling that we are getting somewhere."

"I think the program is a good idea," she adds.

A College Invites Community To See Students In Action

Kentfield Campus To Be Scene Of Lively Open House Events

College of Marin administrators, teachers and students have been discussing the school's special role as "a community college."

Now, in addition to "telling," they plan to do some "showing."

THE PUBLIC has been invited to an open house to be held next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon on the college campus in Kentfield.

It is planned as a "students in action" exhibition of the college's varied educational and cultural offerings.

Says Thomas Rigby, chairman of the event and a sophomore student: "It will be our attempt to give the people of Marin a picture of the work and interests of students at Marin's community college. We have been telling them about our programs. Now we want them to see for themselves."

For the past eight weeks now the campus has been the scene of hammer-and-nail and pastepot-preparations for the event. Activity has centered around an arrangement of 20 student-manned exhibit booths to be arranged semi-circle fashion on the lawn between the science building and the library.

IT THEN fans out to include demonstration and discussion of college programs by students and instructors in classrooms and laboratories.

If you come to the campus next Friday evening anytime between 7 and 11 p.m., you will be in time to see art students at work in any of 10 classes including painting, craft, weaving, design, advertising art, photography, lapidary, printmaking, sculpture, and ceramics.

Don't worry about asking the students questions while they work. They will be happy to stop and discuss any phase of their projects with you.

You, your son or daughter might be in their places a year from now, because these students are members of both day and evening adult classes.

AFTER YOU have toured the classrooms, stop in at the art gallery and see the more than 100 pieces of finished art work on display. If you miss any part you can come back the next day, for the students will be at it again all of Saturday afternoon.

The open house will move into full gear on Saturday afternoon with lawn exhibits, open classrooms, entertainment and an end-of-the-day "street dance" for the students on the program.

Events of the day will be capped by an evening band concert at 8 p.m. in Olney Hall.

If you arrive at noon or a little before on Saturday, you can get a snack, pick up a program and browse through the student exhibits before entertainment by some of the 32 foreign students on the campus begins.

THE STUDENT booths you will see are the work of 18 campus clubs and other organizations, each of which has put together an exhibit in line with its major interest.

First there is a general information booth where you can find out about courses and programs—what is available on campus and where. Here you will see a photographic exhibit of students at work in classrooms and laboratories through the campus.

Want to know what the campus will look like in 1970? The Engineering Club has prepared a special master plan exhibit.

The SECS Club, a girls' service organization, will show Marin's cultural opportunities and activities. Another girls' club, Semantor Gelanes, will profile the role of campus and Marin County women, past and present. The SG's, as they are called, annually sponsor a drive to provide Christmas food baskets for needy families, and are responsible for the campus Christmas decorations.

THE MARINER Discussion Committee, a group of politically-interested campus intellectuals, will give you an idea of what they are doing to stimulate critical thinking

Gherman, an army veteran, witnessed the famous London Hyde Park speeches while in service and helped to introduce the idea at the college last month. It is typical of a new wave of critical thought and discussion at the college that is certain to be noted by visitors to the campus during next weekend's big open house. (Photo by Ken Nunes) among students. Champions of a movement to speak out on campus and general topics, the club revived the Wednesday noon "Hyde Park" speakers' hour this semester.

You will see a fencing match by members of the newly established Fencing Club, and the Radio Club will talk by shortwave with other ham operators on the other side of the world.

A history of the college including original documents and artifacts, has been put together by the co-educational Atheneum Club. This group sponsored a campus drive to raise funds for Marin retarded children last semester.

The International Relations Club will have a three-way booth including the club's work in behalf of the World University Service, handicraft by the college's foreign students, and the general activities of the club on campus. IRC, largest organization on campus with 75 members, annually sponsors a banquet, proceeds from which go to the World University Service.

THE ASSOCIATED Women Students will give you an idea of the kind of events and activities scheduled for women through the school year, and the Block M, varsity athletic club, will show films of college games played during the year. Block M handles the sale of programs and all concessions for basketball and football games.

You Can See For Yourself School's Community Role

The Naturalists, oldest student organization on campus, will show a record of field trip activities in line with their interest in the study of animal and plant life. Last year the Naturalists sponsored a county-wide books for Asian students drive, collecting more books and periodicals than any college or university in the United States in the effort.

The Art Club, sponsor of the college's spring film series, has pulled together examples of the art work of high school as well as college students. The Associated Students College of Marin, official student body governing unit, will review local and state-wide student government activities including the November 1962 state meeting sponsored by College of Marin.

EXHIBITS BY the Ski Club, Intramural Club and Christian Club are also planned.

Following demonstrations of Japanese and Panamanian dances and flamenco guitar by foreign students, each of the college's six divisions — fine arts, science and engineering, business, liberal arts, technical-vocational, and physical education—will hold demonstrations and tours of their facilities.

Since each of the divisions will make two complete hour-long presentations, you will be able to see at least two of the areas which interest you most.

Interested in seeing a modern language laboratory in which each student controls taped reading and translating assignments to suit his own rate of speed?

PERHAPS YOU would like to see the 15-amplifier electronic analog computer located in the engineering laboratory, business electronic data processing equipment, the simulated dental office-laboratory used in the dental assisting program, the home economics kitchen or the auto shop used in the industrial arts program, or the bones of a prehistoric elephant unearthed in Tomales Bay and located in the geology lab?

If so, just ask one of the student guides to direct you.

Plans for the open house were proposed by the student executive council before a group of student clubs, faculty, board and administration at a luncheon meeting held in March. College authorities welcomed the idea but were not surprised that the students proposed it.

"It's typical of a new wave of student interest and purpose we have noticed for the past several years," said Dean of Students Irwin P. Diamond. "There hasn't been anything like it since the end of World War II when we had all the veterans back."

DIAMOND SAID interest during the past school year has been particularly high but "in general, we've been dealing with a more serious student, one who is more ready to take leadership and accept responsibility.

"Scholastically we have had a 100 per cent jump in the number of students eligible for our honor society this year," Diamond said. "At the same time, there has been a significant decline in the percentage of students disqualified and on probation for academic reasons.

"Our standards haven't changed," he said. "You only have to look at the record of our students at the University of California and other institutions to see that."

The college's new counseling system and its broader program offerings have had a lot to do with the higher achievement, Diamond believes.

"STUDENTS NOW sit on the college's regular faculty committees," said Diamond.

"We now have a student-operated film series, a student-run speakers' hour, and the increase in the number of interest clubs has been gratifying. The students asked for and planned changes in the present cafeteria, and have revamped their constitution."

"A lot has happened this year," said Diamond. "The open house is one of the more dramatic, of course, but we haven't been surprised by the students taking matters into their own hands."

College of Marin officials may not be surprised at this new student leadership, but you might. Visit the open house and see for yourself.

A TOUR OF College of Marin's electronic engineering technology laboratory will be part to the science and engineering division presentation at College of Marin's open house next weekend.

THE VISITORS WILL also see action like this by the college's art students. The hands in the photo are busy polishing a bracelet in a jewelry-making class. The instrument being used is called a "polishing drill." Other arts taught at the college will also be demonstrated by both regular day and evening adult students. (Photo by Michele Meyer)

Lifting Veil From India's Religions

By DON KEOWN

THE SPIRITUAL HERITAGE OF INDIA by Swami Prabhavananda, Doubleday and Co., 374 pages, $4.95.

I OWE RUSSIA $1,200 by Bob Hope, Doubleday and Co., 272 pages, $3.95.

Most contemporary books about India's religions have been written by sympathetic westerners. None can speak with the authority and knowledge of Swami Prabhavananda, who is not only a believer but a revered holy seer.

In his "The Spiritual Heritage of India" he tells us that "Indian philosophy is not a mere way of thinking, but a way of life, a way of truth. To become a philosopher is to become transformed in life, renewed in mind and baptized in spirit."

And that, in India, philosophy is indistinguishable from religion.

In his latest book, written with the assistance of Frederick Manchester, the Swami describes the roots of the great religions of his country and how they flourished. What to many westerners seems mysterious, contradictory and even weird is shown, under his guidance, to be simple, pure and basic—and beautifully expressed.

You can read excerpts and interpretations of the Vedas, India's earliest and most important Scriptures, and of other great sacred writings.

You can read about true Yoga, very different from the meaning that word has come to have in the West.

You can read of the lives, sacrifices and teachings of the great holy men down to Sri Ramakrasna who studied and practiced many sects of Hinduism, Mohammedism, Buddhism and Christianity, and who taught:

"Do not depend on doctrines, do not depend on dogmas, or sects, or churches, or temples. They count for very little compared with the essence of existence in man, which is divine . . ." Pursue diligently and sincerely any spiritual path, he said, and you will ultimately achieve "realization."

Swami Prabhavananda's latest book is certain to do much to clear away the misunderstandings and misinterpretations which have grown up about India's spiritual beliefs and practices. It is a most valuable and most stimulating exposition on a subject most worthy of such treatment.

BEFORE WE comment upon "I Owe Russia $1,200," let us frankly admit that we are one of those for whom Bob Hope can do no wrong.

He can tell the most ancient and corniest of jokes (and he frequently does), he can mess up the punch lines (which he does, although not frequently), and still, as long as it is Bob Hope, delivering one of his rapid-fire monologues or mugging his way through some outrageous skit, we are convulsed with laughter.

"I Owe Russia $1,200" is a Bob Hope monologue in writing, atypical otherwise only in its length.

With a gag ratio of a good half dozen per page, Hope quips his way through an account of his adventures and misadventures as one of America's busiest traveling entertainers. It is the story of his trips abroad to perform for American servicemen and/or to make movies and TV film—including, of course, the visit to Moscow, from which the Kremlin may never recover.

It is pretty much standard Hope fare with the usual large measures of jokes about Crosby, pretty girls, income tax, golf, political figures, the military brass and the relative "hardships" Americans at home are enduring while servicemen "live it up" at their remote outposts.

If you are not a Bob Hope fan, there is no reason to read this. But you will hardly be missed. For many, many of us—and for even more overseas—Hope is "the" American comedian.

WORLD Publishing Co. has issued in paperback form ($1.55) "A Practical Manual of Screen Playwriting" by Lewis Herman.

Herman has covered both television and movie scripts, aiming his text primarily, but not exclusively, at the beginner. He has covered the elements of dramaturgy, the filmic components and the technicalities of writing in a most complete and practical manner.

The manual is part of World's Forum Books series planned for limited special audiences. But for those who have always wanted to attempt a TV script, and have never known just how to start, this seems to be the answer.

COMEDIAN BOB HOPE retreats from Moscow after firing a barrage of quips and jokes. In his new book, "I owe Russia $1,200," Hope tells of his travels to Russia and elsewhere around the world to make TV films and movies and to entertain servicemen. It is typical Hope comedy fare. # An Inside Story Of The OSS

OF SPIES AND STRATAGEMS by Stanley Lovell, Prentice-Hall, 191 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Of Spies and Stratagems" is a "now it can be told" account of the work of industrialist Stanley Lovell in the OSS (Office of Strategic Services—although Of Spies and Stratagems would suit it better) during World War II.

Lovell obviously relished the problems, which ranged from how to communicate with undercover agents in enemy-occupied territory to a scheme (never carried out) to infect the entire civilian population of Spanish Morocco with "an assortment of bacteria from tularemia and psittacosis to all the pests known to the Fourth Horseman of the Apocalypse."

Bacteriological warfare was not practiced in in World War II, but at least one man highly placed in the OSS advocated it: Stanley Lovell, industrialist and author of "Of Spies and Stratagems." Perhaps it may make its appearance, alongside such atrocities as the hydrogen or cobalt bomb, in World War III.

Author Lovell (who, incidentally, is board chairman of Raytheon Corp., manufacturers of major components for missiles and rockets) is confident World War III will come. His timetable, drawn from the late Oswald Spengler, calls for its arrival in 1964.

"Of Spies and Stratagems" is an interesting account of a side of war but little known. It is interesting also in its disclosures of the depravity within the human mind, for which war provides release.

Books For The Young Reader

Some new books for the young, younger and youngest readers:

"Bones and the Black Panther" by Jean Caryl (Funk and Wagnalls, $2.95) is about an 11-year-old who has his heart set on a very special English bicycle. And of the many ways he goes about raising the necessary funds. It reads like an especially entertaining book for the boy 10 to 12. And Jessica Zemsky has added some simple but effective illustrations. Her jacket are is particularly delightful.

"See A White Horse" by Miska Miles (Little, Brown, $2.75) can be substituted if your youngster is more interested in things four-footed than those on wheels. The white horse of the title shares top billing with young Henry and a dog. It's a kind of a story which small boys relish. Wesley Dennis is the illustrator.

"The Mystery of Hidden Harbor" by John Stephen Doherty (Doubleday, $2.50) is a mystery-adventure novel for young boys about how Pete Dana risks danger to foil a threat to the peaceful seaside town where he resides. There is lots of action. And in addition to the mystery angle, boys will especially enjoy the space which is devoted to skin-diving.

"The Forests of Adventure" by Werner F. Schmidt (Little, Brown, $3.75) is a bit of derring-do for children 10 to 13 with a junior hero named Eric. Schmidt, a Millbrae doctor, has authored a book for the first time, and it is a return to the traditional with princes, barons, outlaws, huntsmen, the beautiful maiden and plenty of high adventure. There's a bit of bloodshed in this one, which, again, is in keeping with the tales of old.

"Horsemen of the World" by Jack Coggins (Doubleday and Co., $2.75) covers a bevy of colorful riders from the American cowboy and Indian to the Russian Cossack. The horseracing jockey, the Canadian Mountie, the Hungarian herder, the fox hunter, the Mongol, the polo player, the gaucho, the Arabian desert rider and many others are also present in its pages. The subjects lend themselves well to Coggins' dramatic style of drawing. And much information on riding gear and styles, mounts, etc., is included Most boys from about 11 to 14 will revel in this.

"August Explains" by Phil Ressner with pictures by Crosby Bonsall (Harper & Row, $2.50) is for the younger readers and read-tos about 4 to 8. It's about a young bear who wants to become a boy, and who is "tutored" for his new role by an older and wiser bear. Both text and pictures deal heavily with such day-to-day tasks as lacing shoes and eating with a fork —something which we adults take for granted, but which can represent major challenges and accomplishments for the little ones.

A Summer Guide For Teen-Agers

BARRON'S TEEN-AGE SUMMER GUIDE by Meyer Reinhold, Barron's Educational Series Inc., 188 pages, softcover, $2.25. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

With vacation months near, Barron has issued an updated and expanded 1963 version of its summer guide for teenagers.

Covered are travel opportunities and camps, both abroad and in the U.S.; summer educational programs; work camps and community service projects; summer job suggestions, and recommended reading. Special features include a pollen index for hay fever sufferers and a temperature and rainfall chart of the U.S.

While necessarily limited in its audience, the publication should be of concrete benefit to families where teen-agers are faced with "time on their hands" this summer.

Photos From A New Railroading Album

Marin photographers are well represented in the new Lucius Beebe book, "The Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroads." Shown on this page are three photos by Richard Steinheimer, former Independent-Journal staff photographer. Upper right, S.P.'s cycle of steam locomotion came to an end in the 1950s with such scenes as this 2-10-2 type freight engine resting on the storage track in the Roseville yard, awaiting a call that never came. Diesels had taken over. Below, the S.P. Oakland-San Francisco ferries were still running in the early 1950s when this Northwestern Pacific steam engine came out of the train shed at Oakland Pier en route to the roundhouse after pulling a special train. Bottom left, cab-in-front locomotives were an essential part of the S.P. scene for nearly half a century. Here in 1954 Steinheimer found No. 4165 humming to herself by the water plug at Colton. She was waiting to help an eastbound passenger train over Beaumont Hill. Also included in the Beebe book are photographs by Marin railroad buffs Robert Hale and Warren Marcus and Marin Historical Society Museum curator Roy Graves.

MARIN POETS' CORNER

ECSTACY

I am dumb when I see
Green clad mountains,
Breath-taking sunsets,
Lakes that are a bit
Of heaven's blue, dropped
From the dome above,
Wild rhododendrons
Massing their gorgeous beauty
Or dogwood in the rain,
Old ocean's blue-white sparkle
Of countless shore-swept waves.

I cannot say the things
I think: The joy and pain
That beauty brings
Silences articulation.
I stand and gaze
And suffer ecstacies
Of rapture.
My heart expands
My throat contracts
My ready tongue is stilled
And I am dumb.

INVERNESS — RUTH McUMBER

HAIR PEACE

Gram hid a switch with her hair
And pulled down waves in "dips."
She thought herself extremely fair
With pomade on her lips.
Yet these were secrets in her past;
It known, she'd have been judged fast!

The girl today does not lose face
When in her search for charm,
She flaunts a well stocked make-up case
That weights her good right arm.
And only those not in the know
Would fail to have a wig to show!

THE STEREO SCENE

Classical, Folk And Jazz Discs

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

Some records — classical, jazz and folk:

BACH: The Magnificat in D Major, N. Y. Philharmonic, Leonard Bernstein and soloists with the Schola Cantorum —Columbia Stereo MS 6375.

A sort of pocket-size version of the "B Minor Mass," the "Magnificat" features brief arias and choruses of great beauty. Among the excellent solo voices are soprano Lee Venora and the striking timbre of counter-tenor Russell Oberlin.

LOVE, LILT, LAUGHTER, Jean Redpath—Elektra EKL-224.

A beautiful voice in a concert of Scottish folk songs. But wae's me for I can nae understand the lass . . . Have to use the enclosed lyrics and translation booklet, but guess that's what it's for anyway.

THE UNFORGETTABLE GUITAR OF HANK GARLAND—Columbia Stereo CS 8713.

His first Columbia lp. "Jazz Winds," was fascinating and called for another effort from guitarist Garland. However, the monotony of sound on this second release (despite talented vibist Gary Burton) causes Garland's guitar to be extremely forgettable.

SONNY STITT & THE TOP BRASS — Arranged and conducted by Todd Dameron and Jimmy Mundy—Atlantic Stereo 1295.

The distinctive Stitt alto sound is here pitted against a nonet containing trombones, trumpets and French horn for a new view of his persuasive work. The hard-riding blues are here, as are the introspective ballads. A swinging session.

SCHUBERT Moments Musicaux Opus 94; Three Pieces Opus Posthumous, Alfred Brendel, piano — Vox PL 12.140.

The six short lyrical piano pieces of Opus 94 show the composer's melodic and harmonic imagination at fullest bloom and set the stage for the deluge of similar compositions later in the Romantic Period. The three pieces on the second half of this lp have been referred to as "posthumous Impromptus," a clue to their content.

SHOSTAKOVICH: Quartet No. 4 and Quartet No. 8; Borodin String Quartet—Mercury Stereo SR 90309.

Another of the "First Time Ever" Mercury lp's recorded in the Soviet Union by their own staff and equipment. A rare entry from this label in the chamber music field, and amazingly exciting and almost mesmerizing works. This is the second stereo version of the Quartet No. 4, with better sound; the first recording of the No. 8.

'How Can I Get Mustard Out of My Husband's Suit?'

Hot dogs and mustard have become a year-around habit at sports events and at home, and there is nothing that squirts quite so deliciously as a generous supply of mustard from a squeezed roll. Husbands are especially adept at this.

The best way to get the mustard stain out is to get the suit to your drycleaner at once. This is what he is up against. First, mustard is one of the most difficult stains to remove. It is a combination of salt, spices, oil, vinegar, tannin, tumeric and possibly oxidized oil. The National Institute of Drycleaning's stain specialists say it requires fourteen different spot-removal steps to remove that little mustard stain.

You can see that proper cleaning of this type is beyond the skill and equipment of the average housewife. You may be above average in skill, but there is always the risk of using some spotting agent that may set the stain. Then even an expert cannot remove it. Tell him what it is and let him go to work. It's the safest and least expensive method.

The Boardwalk Now Serves Suburbanites

Old Western Standby Goes Sophisticated

Many modern suburbanites are faced with some mighty old-fashioned problems, such as — "Look, Ma, no sidewalks."

Granted, sidewalks aren't an essential of life. But they are rather nice to have, particularly on wet days when company's coming.

THERE ARE various ways to compensate for the loss of sidewalk:

You can pave the front yard.

You can widen the driveway to accommodate guests' cars and hook it up to an entrance walk.

Or you can do what some smart suburbanites have done and build a sophisticated boardwalk to double as sidewalk and exterior entrance area. This works especially well if the front yard is shallow and the house is built on a down slope from the street.

The boardwalk is actually a wood deck adjacent and parallel to the street and at the same level. It could extend only part of the yard's length, or stretch entirely across it, from property line to property line. The effect can be highly intriguing and serviceability is tops.

THE DECK boardwalk can be built of stout Douglas fir two-by-fours laid flat and with an eighth-inch spacing between boards to permit proper rain water runoff. This also allows a speedy cleaning job with the garden hose.

For absolute minimum upkeep, install the fir two-by-four decking without finish and let it weather naturally. In about a year's time, the boardwalk will acquire the soft patina and color of fine pewter. From there on, it becomes more beautiful with passing time.

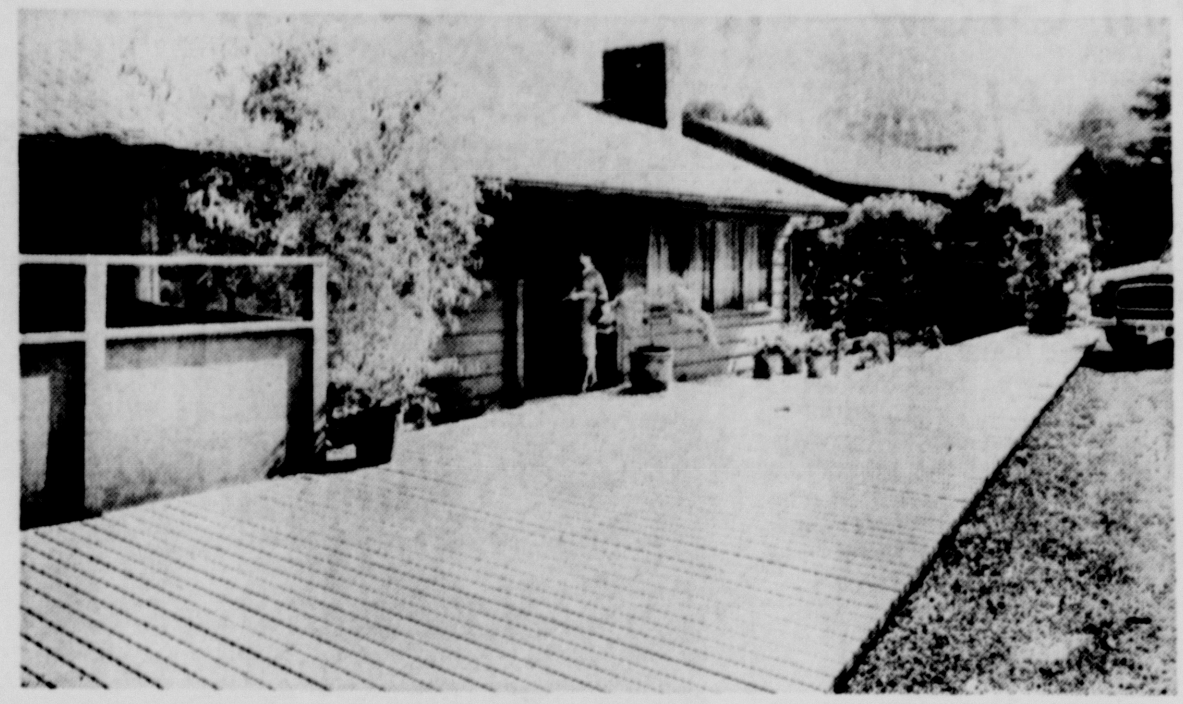
For the most interesting effect, choose something other than an ordinary rectangular shape for the boardwalk. It could be a triangle, broad at one end and narrowing to a stiletto tip at the other. For the triangle, lay deck boards at right angles to the street.

Other possible shapes are the trapezium, rhomboid and circle—or several circles connected with narrow walks.

CHOICE OF shape will depend on the depth of the yard. If shallow, the triangle works best. Other geometric figures work well for deeper front yards.

If the house is built much above or below street grade, the boardwalk can then be connected to a system of steps and platforms also built of two-by-four fir. This could culminate in one broad platform acting as the front porch.

One word of caution: The street-level boardwalk will rest, at least in part, close to the ground, and Douglas fir framing members and decking should be pressure treated with preservative for long, trouble-free life. Paint-on or dip preservative treatments are generally not considered adequate, and pressure-treated fir is readily available.



SOPHISTICATED cousin of the boardwalk of the Wild West town is this Douglas fir deck which provides a practical sidewalk and a fascinating entrance for the suburban home The house set below grade profits from the interesting lines of the deck. Fir two-by-fours have weathered to a silver grey. (West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. photo)

A SHADE-LOVER

Coleus Will Grow Outside The House

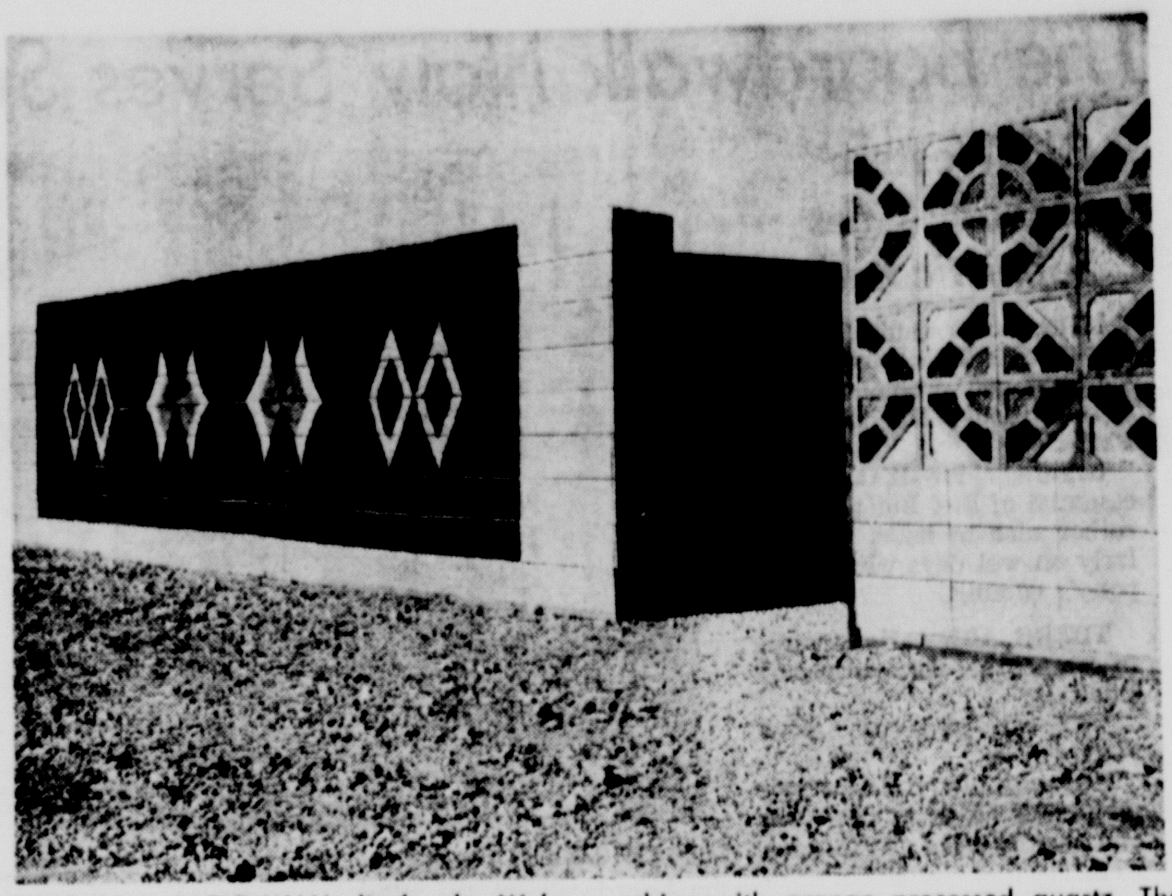
Gardeners are forever seeking flowers that will bloom in partial shade, and there are all too few that will perform well under such conditions.

There is an alternative, however, that gives bright and varied foliage which is every bit as attractive as most flower blooms, and that is the easily grown coleus.

You may have considered coleus only as a house plant, but it also does wonderfully well outdoors in the summer if it is in a partially shaded location. The best kind of shade is that dappled sort that trees give, not the dense shade of a building during part of the day, alternating with full sun the other part.

Coleus may be started from cuttings of your house plants, or very readily from seed.



PART OF A PATIO WALL display by Web-A-Stone Inc. on the grounds of its McNear's Point factory, these designs show the colorful creative effects which can be attained with mosaic blocks. In wall at left, the two end pieces are of imported Travertine marble three-eighth-inch venier which has been bonded to the face of standard-size concrete blocks. Center background blocks are faced with Lake County dark brown volcanic rock. Two of the designs are done in gold marble chips, two in white marble chips with orange processed quartz. The wall at right consists of screen wall blocks in matching decor. Colors are gold, orange and brown. Because of heavy truck traffic during week days, the company recommends that the public visit the display, which also includes other products for patios, drives, home dividers and swimming pool walls, on Sundays. The plant is located at the Baysalt Quarry on McNear's Point, San Rafael. (Independent-Journal photo)

Marin Gardening In May

May is not too late to plant Chrysanthemums. Nurserymen still have young, rooted cuttings in plant bands or pots and these can be started on their way toward fall bloom. One of the easiest and most satisfactory ways to grow new chrysanthemums, however, is to buy blooming plants from your nursery and enjoy their bloom until it fades. When this happens, simply set the plants out in the garden, cut them back to about six inches and they will form new tops which can be grown for a second bloom in fall.

One of the most effective ways to conserve water in California is to mulch. Steer manure and peat moss are both satisfactory mulches and should be spread in good heavy layers around such drought-susceptible shrubs as camellias, fuchsias, azaleas and rhododendrons. Two inches is a minimum mulch and three inches is none too much. Be sure the mulching material is moist when you spread it around a shrub and be sure to keep it moist as the need arises. You can tell readily enough when the time comes to water.

When you shop for bedding plants for summer bloom, don't overlook the new All-America zinnia Thumbelina. This little charmer is a true miniature, growing only six inches high. The flowers come in mixed colors only and are up to one and one half inches across. Thumbelina starts to bloom early, when the plants are only three inches high, and they keep blooming until frost cuts them short in fall.

Young citrus trees benefit more from adequate water than from any other single factor. There is a right and wrong way to water them, however, and gardeners should follow advice of the California Assn. of Nurserymen. Make a basin for irrigation around the trees, but leave a ridge of soil right around the trunk and out a few inches from it. This will prevent over saturation at the crown, a condition which can cause trouble if allowed. Occasional feeding with a high nitrogen fertilizer will also push young citrus trees to their maximum performance.

"REALTY VIEWS"

As I was walking past Paul Suppley's shop, Paul waved me in. "I'm out of a job," he said, "can you find a new one for me?"

"What do you mean?" I asked, knowing that he owned his own small business.

"Do you remember the house you sold me a couple of years ago?" he asked. "It was under construction. I bought it because I enjoy completing a home. Well now, the cabinets are finished, the painting is done and the lawn is in. I've added a covered patio, metal window awnings, and an ornamental fence. There's nothing left to do."

William A. Lewis

Paul continued. "Someone would enjoy having a nice home like that—one that's all fixed up with nothing to add. So I'd like to sell our home and buy another smaller one under construction. Completing a home is a hobby with me. Besides, I can make a little extra money that way."

A few weeks later, a traveling salesman dropped by our office. "I'm gone a lot," he said. "And when I am home, I like to spend my time enjoying my family rather than working around the house. Is it asking too much to try to find a house where everything that might need attention has been done?"

You know the answer! And two more families were satisfied with our real estate service.

If you want to sell your home for any reason—including finding another "job"—call on us.

GARDENER'S PAGES

For Summer Color, Try These Shrubs

Gardeners the world over have certain shrubs they rely on more than others.

Not that they are any more spectacular in bloom, but simply because they have proved themselves time and again, these shrubs have become standbys for garden display.

IN MARIN, we have many standbys, but even here, there are a few which warrant special attention. Right now let's consider some that help to carry the summer garden:

Abelia is one of these—not a shrub which you'll see at garden shows, but one which you see a great deal of in our gardens.

The commonest form is Glossy Abelia, a shiny-leaved shrub of medium height which bears masses of fragrant white, tubular flowers through summer. It seems indifferent to summer drought, and always looks fresh and green no matter what care you give it.

Another variety found in Marin is the Pink Abelia, more compact in growth, but with the same shiny character to its foliage.

GARDENERS have a tendency to shear abelias and they lend themselves well to such handling—especially as flowering hedges. We suggest using them less formally, however, pruning by selection of branches rather than shearing. Such practice will convert the abelia into a more open and graceful shrub, resulting in more bloom at the same time because the older spent wood is removed, leaving the fresh new blooming branches.

A second standby for summer display is the hydrangea, a shrub of truly spectacular bloom.

The large leaves are not in the least unattractive and actually make their own contribution to the garden during spring and summer. But the great beauty of this deciduous shrub lies in the huge terminal blossoms which crown each woody stem.

Flower color ranges from white through shades of rose and pink to a rich blue. The latter requires iron in the soil to maintain its blue color, but this is easily supplied by several compounds available through nurseries.

HYDRANGEAS make wonderful table displays when cut and the flowers can be hung upside down in a garage or basement to dry, after which they can be used for months in dry arrangements.

Give the shrubs a good rich soil and mulch around them with steer manure or peat at the beginning of summer. Water them well and this rapid grower will give an all summer colorful display.

The escallonias are a third family of shrubs which can be heavily relied on for summer color. They range in size from the semi-compact Red Escallonia up to the tall-growing Pink Escallonia.

In between are numerous named varieties such as the red C.F. Ball and pink Apple Blossom, which give the gardener a wide variety of choice including the paper-white ones.

EVEN THE smallest escallonias make good size shrubs, and the larger ones can be easily trained into small trees. They bear their flowers in terminal clusters and should be given an annual pruning in winter so that plenty of new wood will develop to carry more bloom the following year.

Escallonias have considerable appeal for lazy gardeners since they are practically indestructible and withstand not only drought, but the onslaught of wind. The foliage is always green and glossy and the flower clusters come each year whether you prune the shrubs or not. An all-around good shrub, escallonia makes a fine informal hedge or screen.

The fourth most useful shrub for our summer gardens is the Oleander. Here along the coast it may fail to produce the bloom it is capable of. Inland, when weather warms up, it breaks out in a coat of delicate blooms, ranging in color from white to red, with rose and pink and chamois colors in between.

THE OLEANDER is a true sun lover and should be given its full quota of it. There's nothing to match the robust display it produces when weather conditions are right, and many an incoming tourist is stopped in his tracks by the sight of a shrub 10 feet high and 10 feet wide simply smothered with color.

FOR A DAZZLING DISPLAY of summer color, it is hard to beat hydrangea. Generally, they will be kept pruned more closely than this to prevent legginess. But they have been purposely permitted to grow tall so as to serve as a screen between the house and the nearby sidewalk and street. (Independent-Journal photo)

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ Among the bedding plants you can set out for quick color are dwarf dahlias, marigolds, zinnias, asters, petunias, stocks, snapdragons and ageratum.

✔ Roses are now coming into bloom, or soon will be. There's no better time to select the varieties you want. They are available in cans at your nursery.

✔ Mulch around camellias with two or three inches of leaf mold or peat moss. In warm areas it will keep the ground cool and moist.

✔ Pinch back new chrysanthemum plants when you set them out and continue pinching the new growth until July. This makes bushy, sturdy plants. Fertilize regularly.

A MYSTERY TO its owner and grower, Mrs. Russell Bjorn, is this giant Iris growing in the front yard of the Bjorn home at 47 Curtis Avenue, San Rafael. Mrs. Bjorn says she received the seed from Japan along with her regular order of Chrysanthemum seed. To her surprise, the Iris has grown to a good five feet tall with blooms three times the size of the normal Iris flower. At first a deep black, the flowers have turned to purple and then to a pale pink with lavender veins. Leaves have a leathery texture. Mrs. Bjorn says she has been unable to find a gardening authority who could furnish her with additional information on her mystery plant. (Independent-Journal photo)

Marin County BOATING SECTION

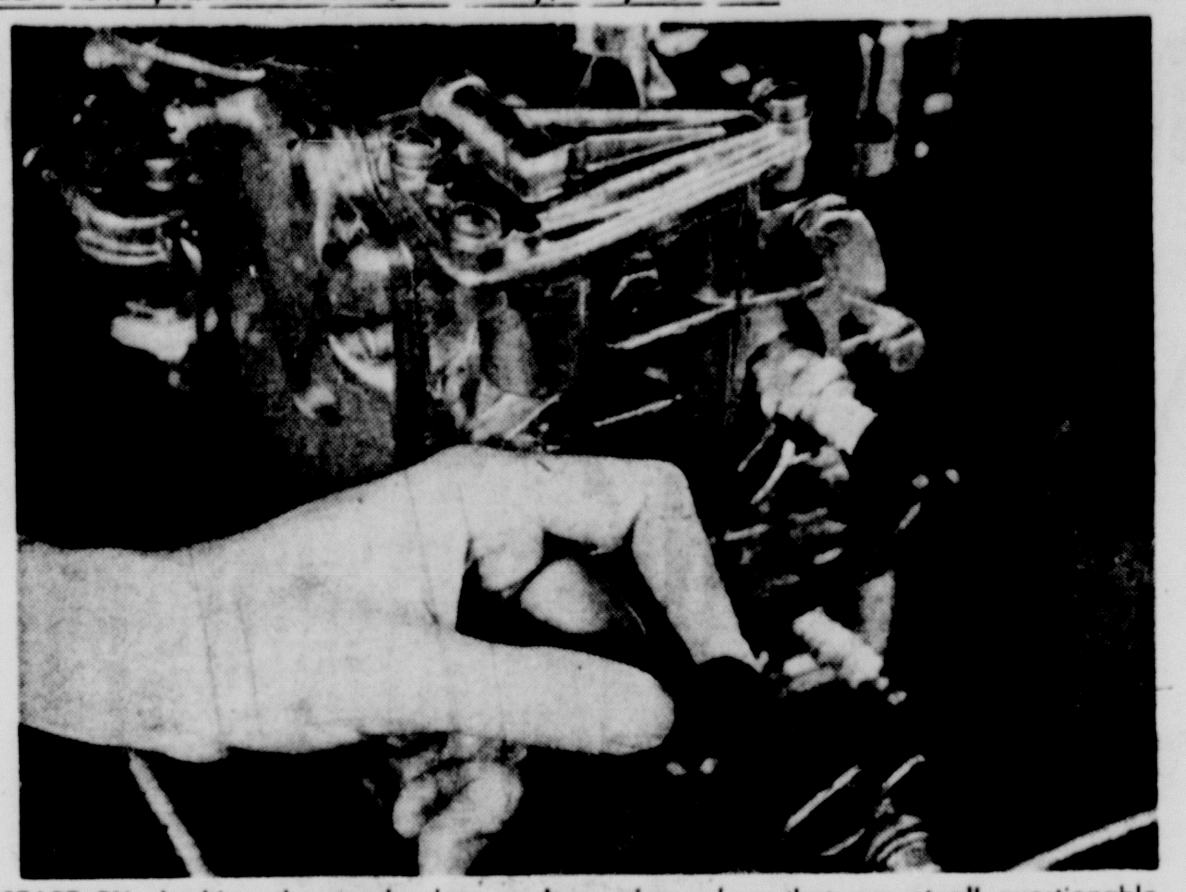
Marin Magazine

Independent Journal • San Rafael, California



START BY checking the spark plugs and the rubber insulated caps. It is best to replace plugs that are at all questionable. Rubber caps should be inspected for deterioration.

Spring Is Boating Time—And Also Time To Tune The Motor

It doesn't require an awful lot of mechanical aptitude to get your outboard motor in tiptop shape for the boating season.

With a few basic tools, an average knowledge of what makes the motor work and an hour or so of spare time, just about anyone can do it.

To help you here's a simple step-by-step procedure.

Start by removing the spark plugs. Spark plugs may seem to be rather insignificant parts of the engine, yet they are vitally important. Rough idling, hard starting and excessive fuel consumption can all result from defective plugs.

INSPECT THE plugs carefully for burning, fouling or cracking. If they appear to be in good shape they can be cleaned, gapped and reused. If they show signs of deterioration, don't take chances, replace them with the type recommended by the manufacturer. Also check the rubber spark plug caps for deterioration.

The ignition system—breaker points, condenser, coil and wiring—can be quickly tested with a spark checker. Spark checkers are inexpensive to buy or, if you prefer, easy to make.

Next check step is the fuel system. If you ran the carburetor dry last fall, you shouldn't have any problems. It's a good idea, however, to remove and clean the fuel filter bowl. Wash the bowl and the filter with neutral spirits or clean gasoline. If the filter is badly clogged with varnish or other deposits, it should be replaced. Check all fuel lines for leaks or cracks.

See that all parts are properly lubricated. Using a grease gun fill the fittings with the proper lubricant. Your owner's manual will list other points that require attention. Lubrication is important. Don't overlook it.

THE LOWER unit housing the propeller shaft and gears should be drained and refilled with the lubricant recommended by the manufacturer. If water or metal chips are detected in the drain oil, have a qualified marine dealer check the motor. If you changed the lubricant last fall before the motor was put into storage, there is no need to do it again now. It should be checked, however, to be sure it is full.

Don't make the mistake of using fuel left in the tank over the winter months. It has probably lost its ability to ignite properly and using it can cause hard starting, rough running and poor performance. Throw it out.

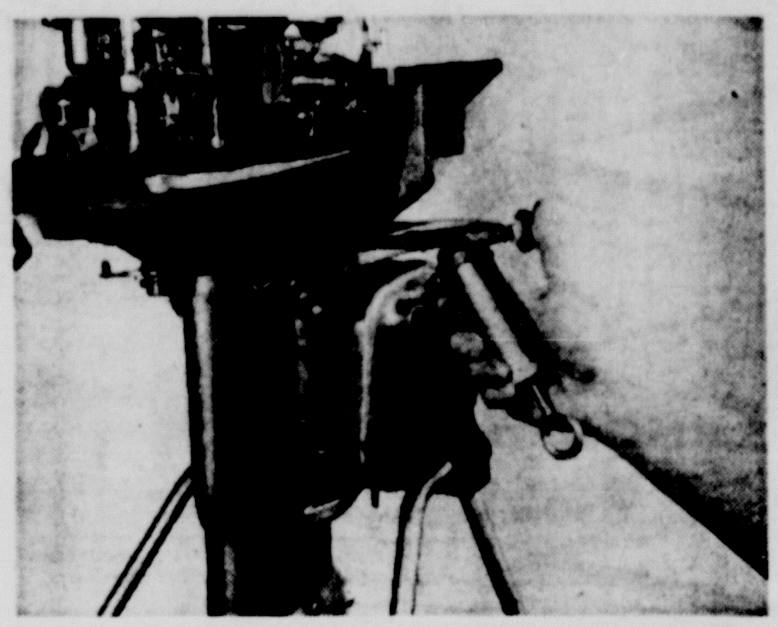
Especially on high horsepower motors, propellers are extremely important in getting top performance. Mismatched or damaged propellers are the most common cause of problems related to speed and power losses, short spark plug life, excessive fuel consumption and vibration.

A propeller that is nicked or bent should be repaired, repitched or replaced. If your motor does not deliver the kind of performance that can reasonably be expected, have a marine dealer check the propeller. It may not be suited to your boat and the load you normally carry. While you're checking the propeller, lubricate its shaft and inspect the drive pin for wear.

WHEN YOU have completed these steps, experts recommend giving the motor a thorough visual inspection. Look for loose screws and trim and damaged parts. When everything is shipshape, connect the spark plug wires and put on the engine cover. Wipe down exterior metal parts with a lightly oiled cloth.

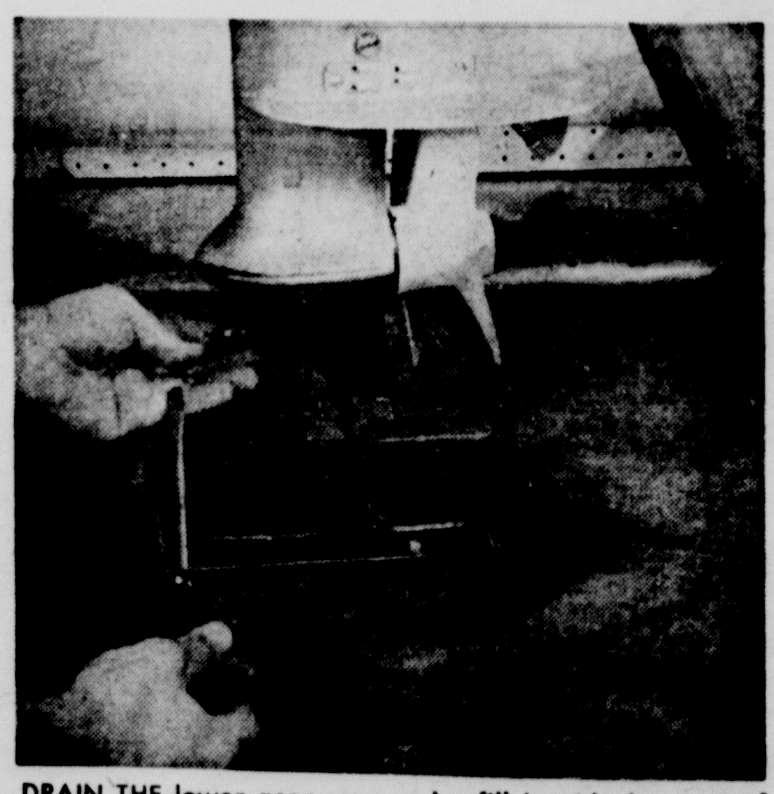
Apply a coat of protective wax to fiberglass engine covers.

REMOVE THE fuel filter bowl. Wash bowl and filter thoroughly with neutral spirits or clean gasoline. Check all fuel lines for leaks or cracks.



PROPER lubrication is extremely important. Use a grease gun to fill the fittings. Check your owner's manual for other points that need lubricating.

THE EXTERIOR of your outboard motor should also get some attention. Wipe down the metal parts with a lightly oiled cloth and apply wax to fiber glass covers.



DRAIN THE lower gear case and refill it with the type of lubricant recommended by the manufacturer. Even if you did this last fall, check it now to be sure it is still full. Remember, if a major repair job is involved, or if you haven't the time, skilled men stand ready to do the work for you at Marin's many fine boatyards.

A Variety Of Craft To Sail

Ranging From Ocean Racers To Dinghies

From sailing surfboards to ocean racers, the 1963 fleet of windjammers offers sailing fans a broad and varied selection of sailing craft.

All this should please the sailing fans, who have spurred a quickening interest in power-less boating in recent years.

Though they still consider themselves a breed apart, sailing buffs will find that the line between sail and power isn't drawn quite so finely as it was in 1827, when the Royal Yacht Squadron tossed out one of its members for appying steam power to his craft.

The bigger boats, for the most part, are sailing auxiliaries which offer the customer the choice of inboard power or a well or side-bracket for outboard power. Even many small catboats and sailing dinghies in the 1963 fleet have strengthened transoms for a small-power outboard.

Many of the craft are one-design racers, built to exacting specifications to insure that races are a match of sailing skill. Although major changes are forbidden in these boats, enthusiasts will note many minor innovations aimed at improving creature comfort for the crew, improvements such as increased storage space, better cabin and deck arrangements and more live-aboard features.

Boating Is On Upswing

It's $2.5 Billion Dollar Industry In The U.S. Now

Last year about one out of every five Americans went boating.

That's a pretty sizable percentage when you stop to think about it.

The swing to recreational boating didn't really start until after World War II and it's now a better than 2½ billion dollars per year industry. What's behind it all?

The Evinrude Motors people set out to find the answers and came up with some interesting facts.

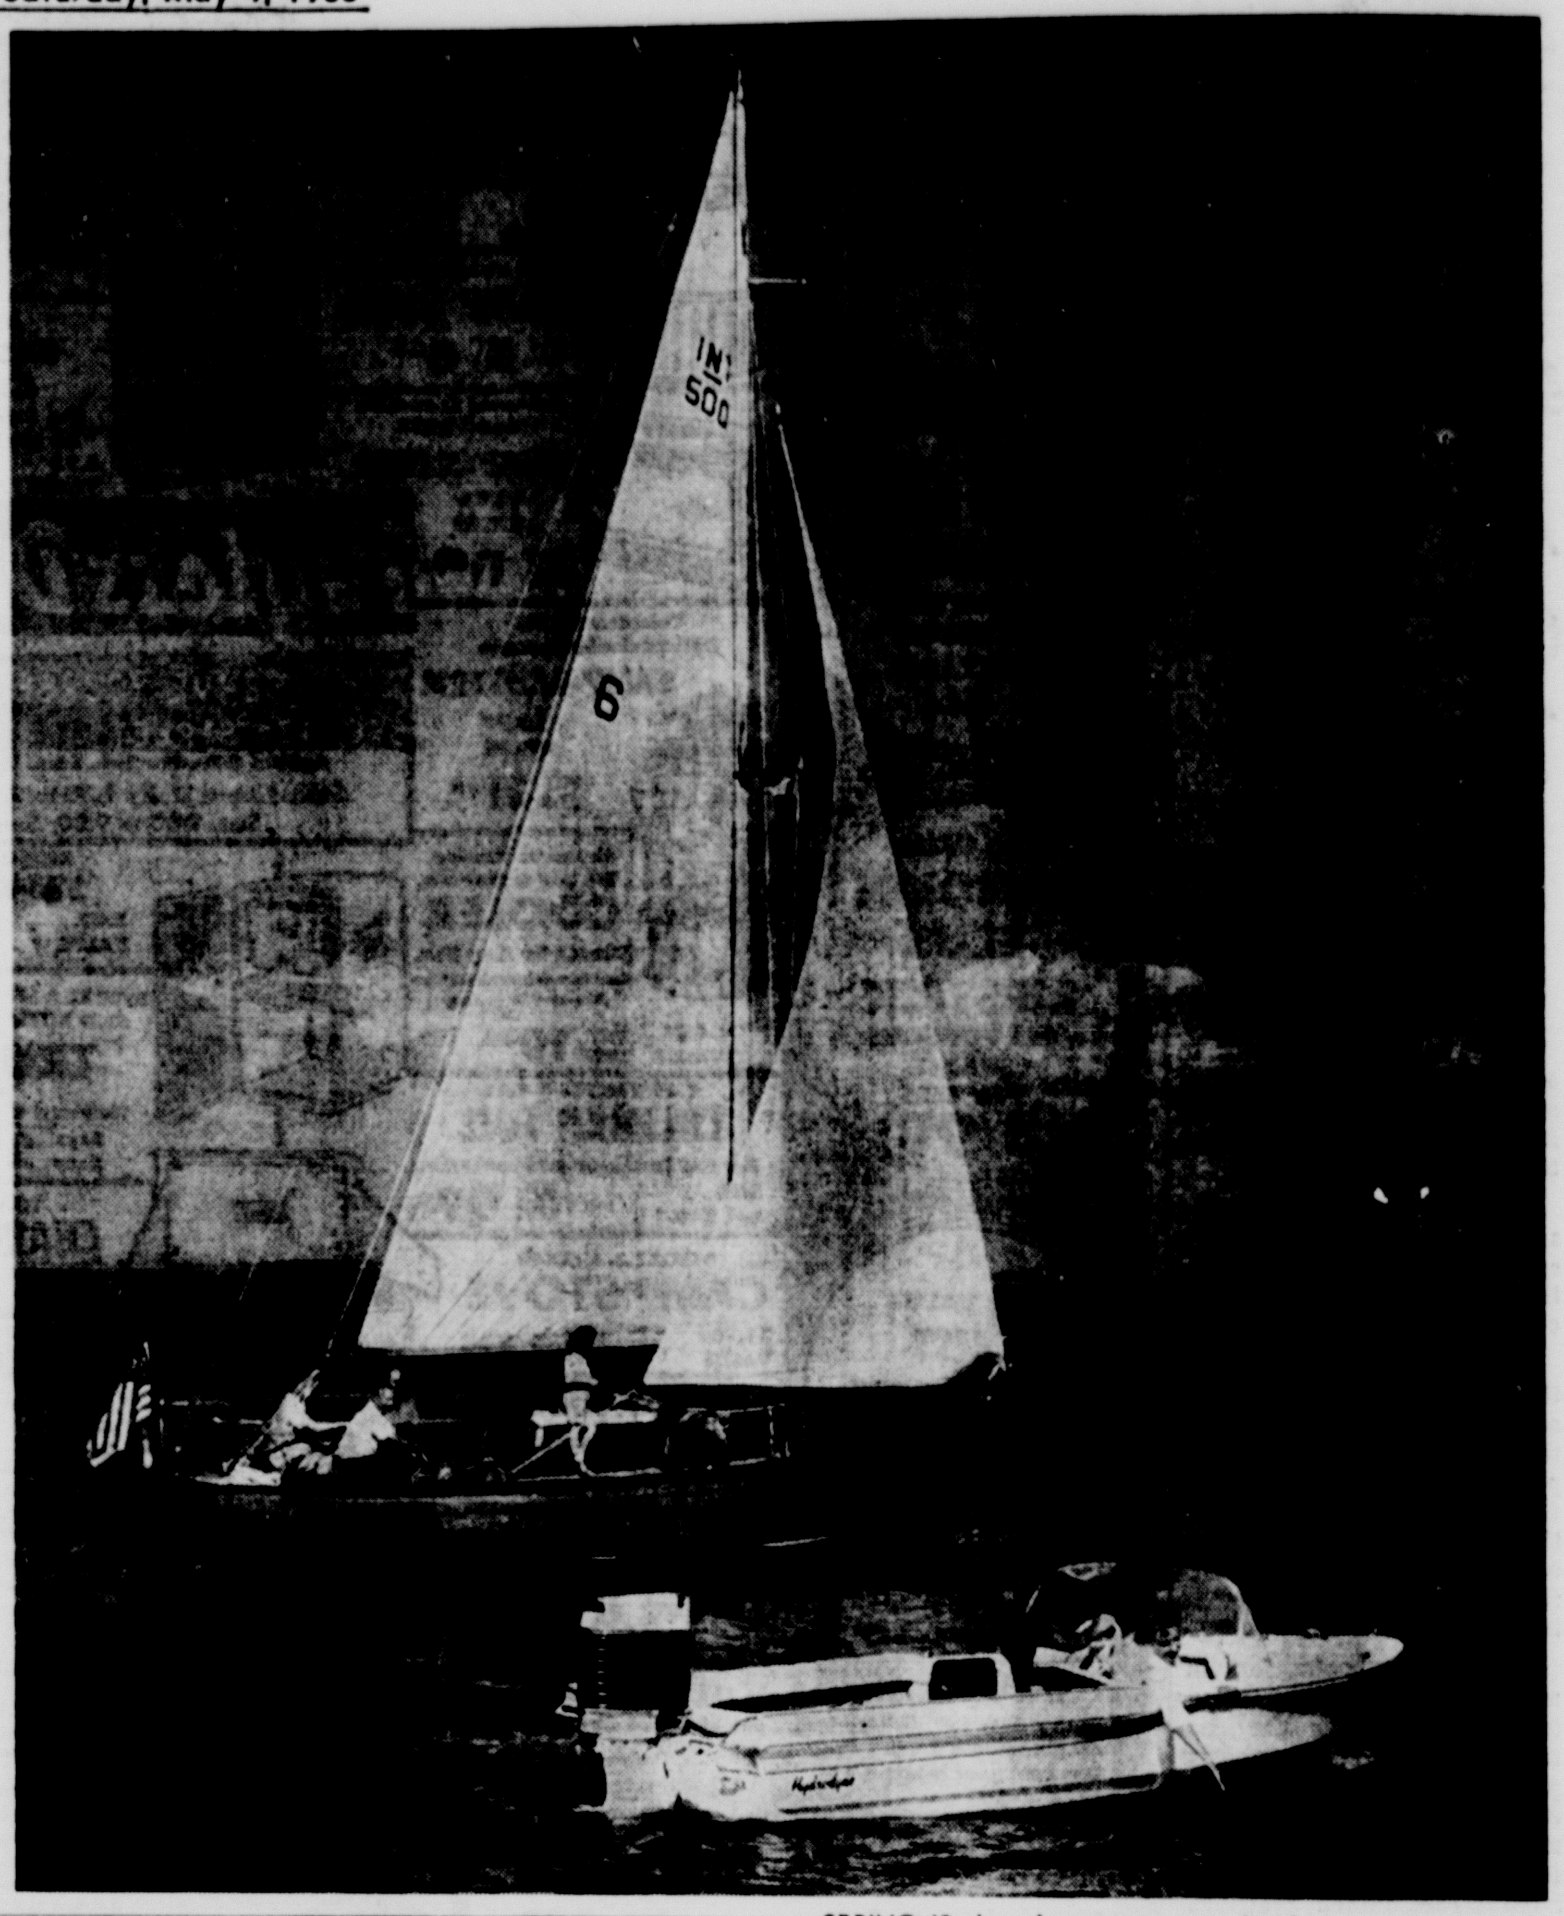
They were interested, of course, in why people buy outboard motors. Here's what the study revealed.

It's almost a toss-up when the two most mentioned reasons—fishing and all-purpose boating—are compared. Next came water skiing. Over 20 per cent of the motors sold are bought specifically for skiing use.

What type of boat do beginning boatmen usually buy?

Most popular is a runabout in the 14-15 foot category. It's usually powered with an outboard of from 18 to 40 hp. Such a combination makes an ideal all-purpose rig. It can be used for fishing, water skiing, skin diving, cruising in sheltered waters or for any number of other water activities. Prices for a rig of this type will vary considerably but start at les sthan $1,000.

If you've been toying with the idea of getting into boating, go ahead, give it a try.



SPRING IS the pleasure season for boatsmen — whether they prefer craft powered by engines or sail. And their favorite recreation of cruising in the sun will continue through the summer—and, in climatically-favored Marin—right on through the fall and into the winter.

Choose Rig With Care

If you've ever attended a boat show, you might have felt somewhat like a youngster in a candy store. Everything looks so good that it's hard to decide just what is best. Actually, choosing the right boating rig is not as big a problem as you may think but it does require some serious thought.

Before trying to decide on a particular rig, we suggest that you ask yourself two questions: For what use is the rig intended and on what type of water will it be used?

Once you've decided on these two points, your pleasant task of selecting the boat that will best suit your needs will become quite simple.

OUTBOARD boats are made in many styles. There are runabouts, utility models, cruisers, prams and pontoon boats, to name a few. You'll have to decide which is most suitable for your particular need. Another of your questions will probably concern the various materials used in building boats. Fiberglass, wood and aluminum are the most common and all have certain advantages. Which is best? It's all a matter of personal preference and, as long as you buy a reputable brand, you won't go wrong.

One of the most important steps in buying a rig is to make sure the boat and outboard motor are properly matched. In other words, the motor is the right size for the boat. Most boat manufacturers make recommendations as to maximum horsepower but the best way to be sure you are getting a properly matched rig is to consult a qualified marine dealer.

CHOOSE AN outboard motor as carefully as you do a boat. Features that make the engine easier to operate as well as those built in to keep it running longer are important.

Most of the larger outboards sold today are equipped with electric starters. With the exception of fishing boats, most outboard powered boats are fitted with remote steering, shifting and throttle controls. Two lever remote controls are the most common; however, single lever controls are also available this year, one manufacturer has introduced a new fingertouch push-button method of shifting gears.

A trailer will increase your boating fun for it will enable you to go more places and at the same time see and do more things.

OUTBOARD trailers are available in a variety of styles and sizes and are rated according to their carrying capacity. The combined weight of the boat, motor, fuel and gear should be considered when shopping for a trailer.

Maybe a certain rig caught your eye at a boat show. If so, that's the one you should look at first. If you do not have any particular model in mind, catalogs and boating magazines, or better yet a visit to your local marine dealer's showroom, will give you many ideas.

FIBERGLASS or wood? Outboard or inboard? These are only two of many questions the prospective boat buyer must answer. Design, materials, etc., are largely matter of personal preference. Important, though, is that motor and boat be properly matched.

THE WIFE IS NO LONGER ONLY BOAT ACCESSORY

When Noah was fitting out for one of history's first recorded boating trips, he took along—among other items—his wife.

He didn't realize it at the time, but he had introduced one of boating's most enduring accessories. A lot of other accessories have come and gone since then, but the wife remains.

Nowadays it not only takes a lot of accessories to satisfy the skipper, it also takes accessories to keep the first accessory happy. The manufacturers of boating accessories would be the last people to lose sight of these facts, and each year they vie for attention with an amazing variety of products to tempt the skipper and his first mate.

The ideal boating accessory, of course, is one which appeals to the instincts of both the gadget-prone male and his economy and convenience-loving wife.

ACCESSORIES for 1963 are definitely headed toward that ideal. The many gadgets provide the man with enjoyment in their operation and the woman with enjoyment in the results they produce. The do-it-yourself projects offered will give the skipper his fun while abuilding, and the first mate hers when in use.

Electronic equipment is just one of the areas in which this dual appeal is becoming apparent. Thanks largely to transistors and other technical advances, electronic equipment is becoming less expensive and more compact. By their nature these devices will intrigue the men; and the lower prices, space-saving qualities and the added safety features will certainly appeal to the ladies.

And there is more good news to come. One manufacturer predicts that a new device combining all navigational and communications equipment into a single, compact unit is only a few years off.

HERE ARE some examples of the new 1963 accessories:

An automatic anchor hoist from City Engineering Co., Inc., Indianapolis, Ind., lies flat on the deck when not in use. Once the switch is turned on, the anchor arm raises over the bow, the anchor is lowered, and the cable continues to play out until the desired length is reached. In another switch position, the cable reels in until the boat is pulled to the anchor; the anchor is reeled in and returned to its horizontal position on the deck.

Vinyl boat carpeting from U.S. Rubber Co., Chicago, Ill., is wear-resistant, easy to install and affords sure footing inside the boat cabin. Product was tested for three years before being put on the market, the manufacturer says.

The Navigator 410 radio direction finder from Bendix Marine, North Hollywood, is smaller than a cigar box, weighs 2½ pounds and costs less than $100. With power supplied by four flashlight batteries, the 410 features consolan-beacon and marine bands and can double as a standard radio broadcast receiver.

CHOOSING THE PROPER equipment for both fun and safety will make your boating more enjoyable. The equipment shown here includes Coast Guard-approved life jackets and cushions, anchor with plenty of line, fire extinguisher, first aid kit, horn, extra propeller, fenders and extra line. On the paddle are extra cotter pins, drive pins and propeller nut. At the bottom is a bilge pump, basic tools and an outboard owner's manual.

Tips On Buying Used Motors

With more veteran boatmen moving up to larger boats and motors, plenty of good used boating equipment is now available.

Buying your pre-owned equipment from a reputable dealer is best, however, since you'll know it's been carefully checked over to give you many hours of carefree enjoyment on the water.

Here are a few tips to keep in mind when selecting a used outboard motor to measure its relative worth:

Compression — Grasp the starter rope and pull the motor over, checking the "pull" and "bounce" as the motor turns over.

Crankcase bushing—Check for excessive dirty oil accumulations on the armature plate; an indication of faulty upper bearing asembly.

Cylinder condition — Remove sparkplugs and by using a pencil flashlight peer into the cylinder head, checking for excessive carbon accumulation which will ultimately affect the performance of the motor.

Propeller bushing — Exert up-and-down pressure on the propeller shaft and look for sepage around the propeller shaft seal . . . excessive up-and-down play or seepage indicates a worn bushing.

While the motor is idling, check wiring for cracks in insulation, abrasions and breaks; fuel connections and gasoline line for leaks; and the smooth running of the engine.

If you have the opportunity, take the motor out for a run before you buy it to check acceleration, idling and general performance.

Trailorboat Of San Rafael Takes Pride In Its New Jet

Trailorboat Engineering Co. of San Rafael has special reason to be proud of its new jet boat.

The Trailorboat, with jet by Jacuzzi, is being hailed as a "first" in the industry—the first such boat to be designed with complete compatibility for jet propulsion.

The hull has a unique bottom with an ingenious planing section so that the craft will not drift or "fishtail."

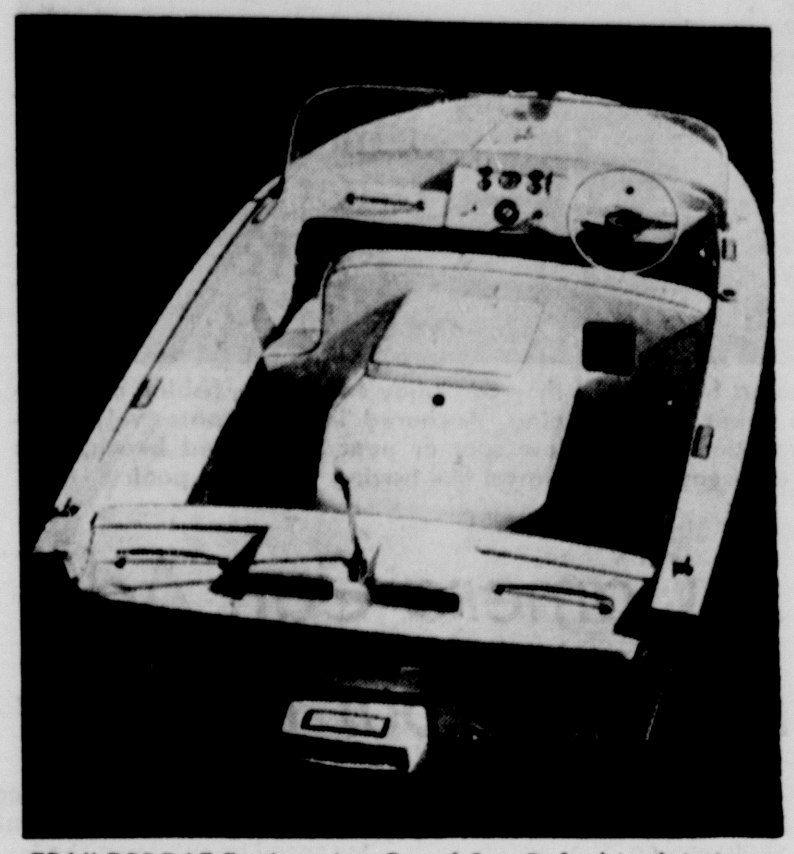
A safety-action rudder coupled wth steering vane provides lateral stability and control at all speeds.

"Lively action and fun," says Trailorboat of the jet. "Instant thrust for ski take-offs; safe in tight turns: maintains speed in ankle deep water."

Trailorboat also boosts the jet as one of the safest boats afloat, especially since it has no propeller or stationary rudder to pose a hazard to swimmers or skiers.

The boat has seating for six.

The Jacuzzi Marine Jet engine offers a number of advantages including a double row ball thrust bearing that is removable while the unit is in the boat, twin seals easily accessible for replacement, easy lubrication, stainless steel impeller shaft, streamlined aluminum turbine bowl, fast actuating shifting mechanism, foul-free reversing gate, one piece grill with square flange, etc.



TRAILORBOAT Engineering Co. of San Rafael is claiming a first with this fine craft—"the first in the industry to design a boat completely compatible with jet propulsion." Driven by a Jacuzzi Marine Jet unit, it is hailed as more maneuverable, safer, more economical and offering extra power. It seats six, has instant thrust for water skiing take-offs, maintains speed in ankle deep water and is designed for lateral stability and control at all speeds.

Even Houseboats Now Stress Speed

There's no place like home—unless, of course, it's one of the new convenience-packed houseboats.

The main appeal of these floating pleasure domes continues to be spaciousness, but several firms this year are putting emphasis on another factor—speed.

Houseboats were once associated with slow and easy living, but the modern mania for going faster and faster has now spread to houseboating. For example, one firm says its prize-winning design houseboats can skim along at water-skiing speed—35 miles per hour.

Shop For Your Boat The Same As A Car

Buying a boat is as simple as buying a car and should be approached in the same manner.

As in buying a car, ask yourself two questions; for what use is it intended and how many people must it safely carry?

With these questions in mind, shop several marine dealers in your area to see what each has to offer. Price is certainly important, but don't sacrifice quality and features to save a few dollars.

Boating rigs are usually purchased through time payment plans and most dealers will help you by making the arrangements for financing.

A Camera Can Add Fun To Your Boating

Boatmen can get added enjoyment by reliving their adventures on the water with still and motion pictures.

Johnson Motors photographer Dick Matt offers these tips to boatmen who plan to become camera bugs this season.

Cut down on exposures to compensate for the water which acts as a giant reflector. Either increase the shutter speed or cut down the lens openings one or two stops. Use a lens shade, too.

Protect film, cameras and other photo equipment from spray and heat. Keep them in a shaded spot in a waterproof bag or wrapped in oil skin.

Don't aim the camera into a stiff breeze. The spray is likely to coat the camera and hit the lens. To protect the lens, and at the same time dramatize the scene, use a filter over the lens.

You might not find photo counters at stores near the water. Carry all the film you need for your trip with you.

If you must shoot from the boat when it is moving, take a solid stance before taking pictures.

Everyone Can Afford A Boat

That venerable old cliche, "If you have to ask how much it costs, you can't afford it," attributed to one of the robber barons in palmier days early in the century, has to be rewritten it it's to have any meaning for today's boating market.

It should read:

"ASK HOW much it costs. You can afford it."

The truth is that boating has been growing in popularity faster than ice cream in the Sahara desert.

A quick look at the facts will prove that one of the major reasons for the continuing increase in boating's popularity is the success of the industry in marketing products that don't scare off the potential customers.

Consider that in 1951 there were only 3,710,000 recreational boats in use on the nation's waterways. By 1962, barely more than a decade later, the number had more than doubled, reaching a whopping 7,468,000, according to estimates based on the number of boats registered in 42 states and industry sales figures.

FOR LESS than the cost of a second car, the prospective boat owner will find that he can purchase a runabout, outboard motor and boat trailer, even if the prospect is thinking about a new compact. During 1962, for example, the average length of the outboard boat purchase was 14.9 feet. It was powered by a motor of 30.3 horsepower.

Complete with trailer, a rig of this type can be had for less than $1,700. But this is just the average.

The beginning boater will find he can spend just as much more or as much less than this amount as he chooses and still get on the water. Boats on display at the show range from light sailcraft selling for less than $200 to luxury inboard cruisers costing more than $1,000 a linear foot.

For any prospective buyer there are lots of choices, including fishing boats in the $200 to $400 range; outboard runabout from approximately $700; inboard speed boats for $2,000 and up, and outboard cruisers with live-aboard accommodations for under $3,000.

As an indication of outboard motor prices, here's a rundown on a few of the popular horsepower sizes: (FOB factory) 7½ horsepower, $249 to $260; 12 horsepower, $345 to $355; 25 horsepower, $445 to $557; 40 horsepower, $500 to $683; and, in the 60 horsepower and up range, prices start at around $835 and climb to well over $1,000.

BOAT TRAILERS range in price from around $150 to $2,000, depending on load capacity and design features.

What should the beginning boatman buy? That, of course, depends on how the buyer intends to use his rig and what he feels he can afford. The truth is that almost any craft can provide unlimited hours of fun as fishing boat, a base for skin diving or swimming, or just playing lazy on the water.

A new world of excitement and fun await you, once you take the plunge and get your feet wet.

FIRM FOOTING is assured by a new non-skid plywood decking on the boat dock above. Skin Guard, a Simpson Timber Co. product, can also be used on boat deck and floors.

Basically, Safety Is Common Sense

Concern for the safety of companions should be uppermost in the mind of any boatman at all times. Carelessness has no place in recreational boating.

Common sense will override carelessness in any experienced boatman, and the novice will do well by being overly cautious until he gains the knowledge that comes only with experience.

ONLY CARELESSNESS or lack of knowledge allows a boatman to operate his craft without life preservers for his companions and himself; without proper safety devices according to the size of the boat.

The first safety precaution to observe is to take stock of your boat. If it has metal trim strips, make sure the trim has not lifted, leaving sharp edges on which the unwary might suffer a nasty gash.

Even the most careful of builders might inadvertently leave a sharp, unfinished edge protruding somewhere.

Make sure your mooring hardware is mounted so that it does not interfere with persons boarding or leaving the boat. If the cockpit floor is unusually slick, it may be a booby trap for the unwary.

YOUR STEERING hardware, pulleys and cables should be periodically checked so that you run no risk of suddenly losing steering control when underway.

Small outboards often have no special place for stowage of the anchor. Be certain it is stowed in a spot where rough water will not cause it to become dislodged and injure some passenger. Stow your gear neatly so there is no possibility of boat passengers becoming entangled in it either while boarding or when underway.

If the boat is shipshape, there are common safety precautions to observe in and around it. Board sensibly by stepping as nearly as possible amidships in a small boat, keeping the body low and the hands and arms free. Stow equipment after you have boarded. Give a helping hand to others boarding your boat.

It's strictly common sense, and the law in most cases, that you have a life preserver aboard for each person in your boat. Check to see that your other safety equipment, such as fire extinguisher, emergency paddle and lights are in operable condition.

KEEP YOUR load within the safe carrying capacity of the boat, whether the load is passengers or cargo. Balance the boat load properly for safety and efficient operation. Keep passengers seated on the seats, not on the gunwale or deck.

One of the major tendencies is to overpower a small boat. Too big a motor can make your boat dangerous to operate.

Whenever you are out in a boat, watch the weather and respect it. If caught in a storm, keep the passengers low and, if possible, head into the waves at low speed to reach shore. If your boat should ever capsize, stay with it and depend upon its built-in buoyancy.

YOU INVITE trouble if you launch in swift waters or near a dam or waterfall.

If you leave a pier with a current running, always have your motor started before casting off. Proceed at low speed in harbors or anchorages or when passing close to swimmers, fishermen or other boats.

Follow the marine "rules of the road" when underway. Stay alert for obstructions, especially when in unfamiliar waters. Watch your wake; you are legally responsible for any damage it might cause.

Safety afloat is basically courtesy and common sense. The combination of the two seldom fails.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE that invites an accident — and possible tragedy — is to change seats in a small boat, once it is in the water and especially if it is in motion. This party may soon find one or more of their number in the drink, and their gaiety marred by a dunking or worse.

What's New In Motors

Speak of live bait and you immediately think of minnows, crayfish, night crawlers, grasshoppers the size of a finger and perhaps a small, freckle-cheeked boy coming home with his first string of bass, his chest sticking out like a mountain.

But there are other kinds of bait and they are equally related to fishing, water-skiing, SCUBA diving and other kinds of boating fun.

The nation's outboard motor manufacturers have found a new lure in two short English nouns—choice and refinements. These two words represent the bait being dangled before the 1963 boating public.

MORE CHOICES of horsepower, added accessory options, a selection of color combinations and engineering refinements by the score have been introduced by the industry's major manufacturers.

Naturally, the female of the species is getting a lion's share of the attention. She's being enticed with striking colors, improved sound baffling to further quiet the outboard engine and increased emphasis on features that contribute to ease of operation such as electric starting.

For the skipper of the family, manufacturers are promising almost complete freedom from maintenance and two leading producers are offering a two-year warranty on the entire 1963 line; another is marketing a modified version of a racing engine.

Here's a rundown on just some of the important innovations boating enthusiasts are finding in the new outboard motors:

THE WEST BEND Co. has added four new models to its 1963 line of motors. The new models include two 45-horsepower Golden Shark 450s; the 30-horsepower Golden Shark 300 and the 20-horsepower Silver Shark 200. The 45-horsepower motors are available in electric starting models, one of which has a 25-amp alternator generator.

West Bend is one of the firms claiming a dramatic improvement in silencing its outboard motors for 1963.

Owners of the new Evinrude 75- and 40-horsepower models have a choice of four propellers, each designed for a specific operating purpose. Evinrude is also offering a remote-controlled electric tilt that will lift or lower the 75-horsepower models and radio noise suppression kits as optional accessories. The power tilt consists of a tilt-actuating cylinder, an electric-driven hydraulic pump, necessary wiring and a dash-mounted control switch. The hydraulic pump is powered by a 12-volt electric motor that operates off the battery.

EVINRUDE IS attracting the lady customers with a color option on its two deluxe push-button, electric-shift models. Customers may select the light seal gray motor with white side panels and decorative trim on the shroud or Evinrude blue and decorative trim.

One development attracting a lot of attention is the announcement by Johnson and Evinrude that they will provide a full two-year warranty, the first of its kind in the outboard industry, on all of its 1963 outboard engines.

In addition to the new warranty, Johnson has announced more than 100 engineering refinements for its 1963 line. Company officials say definite progress has been made towards a completely maintenance-free outboard motor.

Top of the Johnson line remains the 75-horsepower engine with the Electramatic drive, an automatic-clutch system that uses electricity to shift gears by means of a single lever control. Current is controlled by the same lever that operates the throttle. The gear lever feeds fuel in both the forward and reverse operation.

JOHNSON IS also tempting its customers with a wide range of accessories for its 1963 models, including a unit that tilts the 75-horsepower engines out of the water for beaching and shallow water operation.

Economy is the watchword at Gale Products for 1963 as the land-of-Lincoln manufacturer continues a policy established last year.

According to Gale officials, prices on Gale's eight models, ranging in horsepower from three to 60, average from $5 to $60 lower than other major brands. Top of the Gale line is the 60-horsepower V-Sovereign with a gear ratio of 2:23. Reserve power is said to be assured by a 70.7 cubic inch displacement. More than 300 stainless steel engine parts provide corrosion resistance against all weather and water conditions.

THE ELECTRIC outboard motor has been a gleam in the eyes of fishermen everywhere since Thomas Edison discovered you could put a stream of moving electrons to work by means of a magnetic field and produce kinetic energy. Described as whisper quiet and weighing only 32 pounds, an electric outboard has been produced by City Engineering Co. Inc. that may be just the thing to start an angler's hands itching for the touch of a rod and reel.

Operating on either six- or 12-volt batteries, the My-te Electric is designed for use in fishing, game observations and photography where the noise of gasoline-powered engines might be a handicap.

Choice And Refinement Are Key Words For 1963 Motors

the 1963 line of Mercury outboard motors produced by the Kiekhaefer Corp.

Ranging from 6 to 100 horsepower, the 1963 model line includes eight motors, all of which are available with single-lever remote controls.

THE NEW Mercury engines include the Merc 200, a 22 cubic inch, two-cylinder motor that develops 20 horsepower and is said to be light enough for a small fishing boat but powerful enough for water-skiing; the Merc 350, a 35-horsepower engine with 30 cubic inches of displacement and electric starting as an option; Merc 650, a 60-horsepower engine of 60 cubic inches that features a new balanced manifold system for superior idle and minimum air intake sound.

The 650 is claimed to be the lightest, most compact engine available in its horsepower class.

The largest of the new Mercury models is the Merc 850, which has 90 cubic inches of displacement and a six-in-line powerhead producing 85 horsepower. According to company officials, this engine was engineered specifically to develop high thrust at low and moderate speeds for water-skiing and for large, heavy boats. It is also said to make light- and medium-weight hulls into high-performance boats.

SEARS, ROEBUCK and Co. is appealing to a wide range of tastes with its new 1963 Elgin outboard motors. Sears is offering seven models this year in a horsepower range from two to 75.

If you've ever wondered what it feels like to sit behind the wheel of a hot racing rig and smell the alcohol, you have your chance in 1963. The McCulloch Corp.'s Scott Division has introduced a new high-performance outboard engine that can be used in racing competition. The new engine has selective gear ratios, an external rotary valve, individually tuned carburetors, a selection of six propellers and two lower unit lengths.

The new motor is said to be a production version of the engine that holds the American Powerboat Assn. sanctioned quarter-mile drag course outboard record.

MANY BOATING buffs have always preferred the four-cycle engine to the two-cycle outboard but have admired the outboard's hydrodynamic efficiency, light weight and compact power plant. Now Homelite, a division of Textron, Inc., has combined the two in the new Homelite four-cycle, 55-horsepower outboard.

The new four-cycle Homelite 55 is said to cut gas and oil consumption in half when compared to two-cycle outboards of similar power. The Homelite product burns straight gasoline instead of a mixture of gas and oil as in conventional outboards. The engine is said to be so quiet that the boat operator often needs a tachometer to tell if engine is running at idle.

Inboards—Lighter, Safer And More Powerful In '63

Boating enthusiasts come in all sizes, shapes, dimensions and colors of both sexes, but if he or she's inboard size in 1963, there are some nice surprises waiting.

The truth is that a lot of older salts would hardly recognize the new 1963 inboard engines because they've become smaller, lighter, easier to maintain, safer to operate and are still adding horsepower while retaining these advantages.

Not only that, but the nation's leading manufacturers have added new models in the middle of line to give boat owners a greater choice of power selections.

Consider these developments:

The Gray Marine Motor Co., one of the nation's oldest manufacturers of marine engines, has increased the horsepower at the top of its 1963 line by adding a powerful new V-8 rated at 310 horsepower at 4,400 revolutions per minute.

Two brand new engines have been added to the 1963 line of the Crusader Marine Corp. Known as the Challenger Series, the new engines have all their accessories on the flywheel end of the motor, including, among others, alternator, starter motor and water pump. The new arrangement promises huge reductions in maintenance time.

Eaton Manufacturing Co.'s 1963 line includes two new models at 125 and 155 horsepower. All of the firm's V-8's include a drip collector nestled in the engine V. It confines excess fumes and fuel and draws them off to be consumed in the system. Eaton claims this innovation as an exclusive safety feature. The use of new lightweight alloys has also reduced weight of the new Eaton transmission to 50 pounds.

Use A Strong Line On Trailer's Winch

If you need a new line for your trailer winch, don't substitute clothesline or any other inferior quality line that will "suffice."

Check you winch every month or so, according to the amount of trailering you do. Don't take chances. A great deal of strain is placed on the winch line and if it becomes worn or damaged, it might snap when needed the most some day

Also, always use a good quality line; it will pay off in the long run.

Stern Drive Engines—

Fuel economy and more horsepower options are the big news in stern-drive power packages in 1963.

HERE ARE some of the new developments that promise to keep the inboard-outboards prominent in news of the boating scene over the next several months:

OMC Boats has boosted the horsepower of the engine installed in its 1963 line of boats from 80 to 88 horsepower. Known as the OMC- V-488, the new version of the OMC engine has an independent oiling system which is said to drastically reduce oil consumption.

New economy of operation is promised Shark-O-Matic 800 owners by engineers of The West Bend Co., producers of the 80-horsepower inboard-outboard engine and drive unit. Oil consumption has been reduced to permit the two-cycle power plant to run on a mixture of oil to gasoline of 48 to 1, 50 per cent less than previously required.

KIEKHAEFER Corp. is introducing a new 190-horsepower V-8 known as the MerCruiser 190 that will be coupled to the MerCruiser II stern-drive unit. Kiekhaefer is offering seven stern-drive power packages in 1963, including two Mercedes-Benz diesel engines of 39 and 100 horsepower. The remaining five engines are four-cycle gasoline powered and are coupled to MerCruiser I or II stern-drive units.

Eaton Manufacturing Co.'s Dearborn Marine Engine Division has boosted the top engine in the Interceptor line to 125 horsepower for 1963.

Gray Marine has announced that its four six-cylinder and 10 V-8 gasoline engines are available in "bobtail" versions for stern- or turbine-drive installations.

THE OUTBOARD CRAFT

The Emphasis Is On Economy In This Year's Boat Models

If Queen Isabella were financing a boating venture today, there would be no need to even consider hocking the royal sparklers, provided the lady checked the new 1963 lines of outboard craft.

Boat builders say there never has been a better time than 1963 for those who want to get into boating on a shoestring.

For example:

A BUILDER of aluminum craft offers savings of up to $300 on some models, savings attributed to improved production methods.

A nationally-known wooden boat builder now offers some of its models fitted out with "standard" grade marine items instead of its usual "custom" fittings—the savings to the dollar-conscious buyer are about 12 per cent.

A manufacturer of luxury-loaded fiberglass runabouts is introducing this year a new model stripped bare to the hull to tap the economy market.

A line of low-price aluminum models is being offered the dealers of a nationally-distributed line of aluminum and fiberglass outboard craft.

There's another kind of economy in the 1963 outboard fleet—higher quality for the same price.

ONE WOOD boat manufacturer who has held fast on the price line, offering precisely the same range in price as last year, reports that he has even added improved features to many models at no extra cost.

A fiberglass boat builder has so much faith in the quality of its hulls that it is offering what is said to be the first two-year warranty for defects in materials and workmanship in the industry.

Another major fiberglass producer says improved production methods have increased the strength of its hulls 30 per cent, while an aluminum boat producer tells how a new 1,000-ton capacity press is enabling it to market hull designs never before possible in its aluminum craft.

However, no one should be deceived into thinking that an austerity wave is about to break over the nation's boatmen. Luxury is there for the asking in the 1963 fleet, reflected in sports car styling, wide choices of color, seating arrangements and interior appointments, and, in a significant number of craft, wall-to-wall carpeting.

LAST YEAR, recognizing one basic human need, many boat builders installed back-to-back seats which convert into lounges at the twist of a wrist, providing weary mariners with a place to catch a cat nap or lap up the sun.

The trend toward offering these sleeper seats continues apace, this year paralleled by the installation of devices to meet another basic human need—eating. The 1963 crop of outboards sprout with pop-up, fold-out and drop-down tables and beverage holders for a fast snack afloat, as well as compartments for storage of some seagoing victuals.

The development of now-you-see-it, now-you-don't cabins aboard outboard craft started last year when a manufacturer introduced a boat with a forward cockpit with a snap-on roof. This year the same firm is back with a report that such an arrangement shifts passenger weight forward, leading to faster planning.

THIS IS THE YEAR FOR REALLY BIG INBOARDS

"Yes sir, this is the year I'm going to get that really big one."

Countless inboard boat fans start the new season each year with a declaration similar to this, to the extreme gratification of inboard manufacturers. One of the companies kindly explains what the boatman means by that "really big one": A boat larger than the one he already owns.

MOST OF those who inspect the gleaming 1963 inboard beauties are able to find a "big one" without difficulty.

The big, beautiful inboard cruisers offer their potential masters all the luxury of a fine hotel suite afloat, with carpeted salons, spacious master staterooms, up-to-date galleys (one model boasts an all-electric kitchen) and many other sophisticated luxuries.

While inboard builders offer the last word in luxury, an invitation to sea-going sybarites is not their only message for 1963.

The sportsman will find several models expressly designed for the pursuit of blue water fishing and, in addition, the flying bridge perched atop the pilot house, once the mark of the sport fishermen, is now an optional extra in many lines of cruisers.

THE ACTIVE boatman will also view with favor the new inboard run-abouts, sleek craft packed with power. Jet propulsion, no longer a novelty, is now available as standard equipment or an optional extra in many lines of inboard runabouts.

And what about the fellow who wants to get a "really small one" this year?

Well, one inboard craft measures only 78 inches long, an aqua kart which combines the joys of boating and the thrills of karting. The manufacturer, who says that the little fiberglass one-man craft has been clocked at speeds in excess of 50 miles per hour.

Safety Is The Principal Concern Of Survival Equipment Corp.

Life Rafts Are Among The Products Of This Sausalito-Based Enterprise

Safety of life at sea is the principal concern of the people at Survival Equipment Corp., located on the third floor of the Industrial Center Building in Sausalito.

The concern manufactures the Elliot inflatable life raft and is the only company in the United States with eight sizes of fully Coast Guard-approved life rafts.

THE ELLIOT raft was originally designed in England and has been sold under the Ministry of Transport approval there for over 30 years. Five years ago the English manufacturer of the Elliot decided to bring the raft to this country and apply for Coast Guard approval, which has since been granted.

The plant in Sausalito was open in the fall of 1958 with a handful of people, and has gradually grown to more than 60 employees.

Survival Equipment Corp. has developed many other products designed for marine as well as air safety.

An inflatable evacuation slide is manufactured which is used on commercial jet airplanes. These slides are jetisoned from the doors of the aircraft in the event of an emergency landing so passengers can "slide" safely out of the aircraft.

THE PELICAN and Penguin rafts are designed for the small boat owner and are completely automatic. They are packed in a fiberglass container which is handy for seats on board cabin cruiser or sail boat yet small and light enough to be easily carried.

Over a year has gone into the design of an inflatable surfboard and skindiver float which will be marketed very soon.

GENERAL MANAGER L. B. Clapham Jr. of the Survival Engineering Corp. inspects the 3,000-gallon inflatable fluid storage tank which is being tested with more than 12 tons of water at the Sausalito factory where it was manufactured.

Electronics Play Major Boating Role

A trend toward increased use of electronic equipment aboard today's boats has become evident.

Almost without exception, at least one piece of electronic gear is now carried. Usually such equipment is utilized to provide an added amount of safety while cruising.

IN MANY cases the equipment may be nothing more than a small transistor radio, receiving both standard broadcasts and marine radio weather information.

Radio telephones have also increased in popularity with many boatmen finding the new 25 watt sets ample for the distances they normally cruise.

Medium size cruisers and larger offshore yachts are fitted with radar and radio direction finders as well.

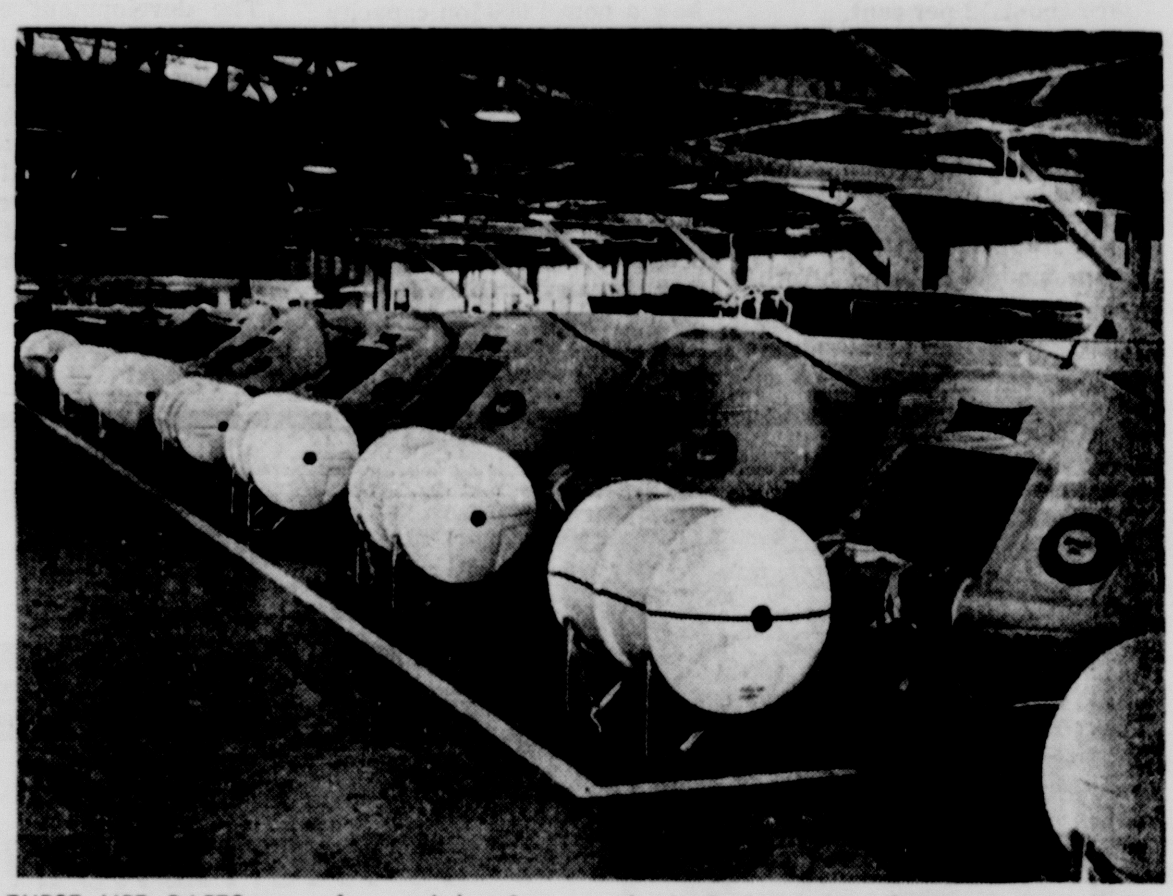
A trend to the used of two-way radio telephones is increasing. The purpose for such installations is simply added safety. One unit, usually between 25 and 50 watts is utilized for normal short range transmissions from one boat to another. A more powerful 150-watt unit functions during extended cruises where ship to shore transmissions become increasingly important.

With the addition of two or more radio-telephones aboard a cruiser added security is gained in the event of damage or malfunction of one set.

ANOTHER PIECE of equipment that's now found in popular use regardless of the size of a boat is some type of depth finder or sounder. The advantages of such a piece of equipment are obvious, both from a practical standpoint while entering a strange harbor to finding reefs when fishing.

This dual usage has given this type of equipment widespread appeal.

Additional navigational instruments and directional finders have all gained in popularity. With longer cruising ranges, found in today's boats due to more efficient designs and improved horsepower ratings, a cruiser can roam farther than before and reliable means for efficient and certain navigation is a must.



THESE LIFE RAFTS manufactured by Survival Equipment Corp. of Sausalito have been tested and approved for service by the U. S. Coast Guard. They will be deflated and packed in their fiber glass containers for shipment to customers throughout the country.

Just How Many Horses Do You Need In Bay Area?

If you want to buy an outboard boat to use on San Francisco Bay, how do you set about choosing it?

According to dealers for Johnson outboards, the most popular buys are the compact 10 horsepower and the two largest motors of the line, the 40 and 75 horsepower models.

THE TWO BIG ones deliver enough speed for any purpose. They are popular with those who like to water-ski in calm spots like Richardson's Bay, the McNears Beach area in San Pablo Bay, and the sheltered waters below Candlestick Point.

The 75 is suitable for boats of 18 feet and up, and the 40 can push boats of 14 feet or more. Both are available in standard electric starting models.

The 10 is popular with Bay fishermen. Powerful enough to cope with Bay currents, it can propel even a heavy boat to the fishing ground fast, and then provide a smooth, slow trolling speed. Supposing that it took an hour at full throttle to reach the angling spot, it would still consume only 60 cents worth of gasoline. It is also very popular locally as auxiliary power for sail-boats and as a motor for light run-abouts.

There are also the in-between motors, for those who want to get to the fishing grounds faster or water-ski more economically. Behind a light-weight 14-foot boat a 28 has power enough for good water-skiing and has proved popular for small to medium sized runabouts. In twin combination, it can provide a highly satisfying speed for day cruisers and big utilities.

Another intermediate motor is the 18 horse, a compact model that is fine for fishing, since it can deliver 20 miles per hour or more and then troll down to dead slow.

BOATMEN ON California's 325 lakes and reservoirs, and on the calmer streams, can get great economy from the two smallest of the Johnson stable — the 5½ and the 3 horsepower. Either of them can putter about such waters as the sloughs of the Delta area for hours on a negligible amount of fuel.

According to Thomas B. Kalbfus, an executive for the firm, "We notice an evolutionary trend in our customers, too. If they start with one of our smaller models or even with a used motor, we are almost as happy as if we had sold them the big 'Electramatic' V-75. Nearly every boatman starting with a small rig will trade up to a larger one eventually. In the San Francisco Bay area, fully 90 per cent of those with boats 15 feet or less plan to buy a longer one some time — with a more powerful motor."

Avoid Bad Weather

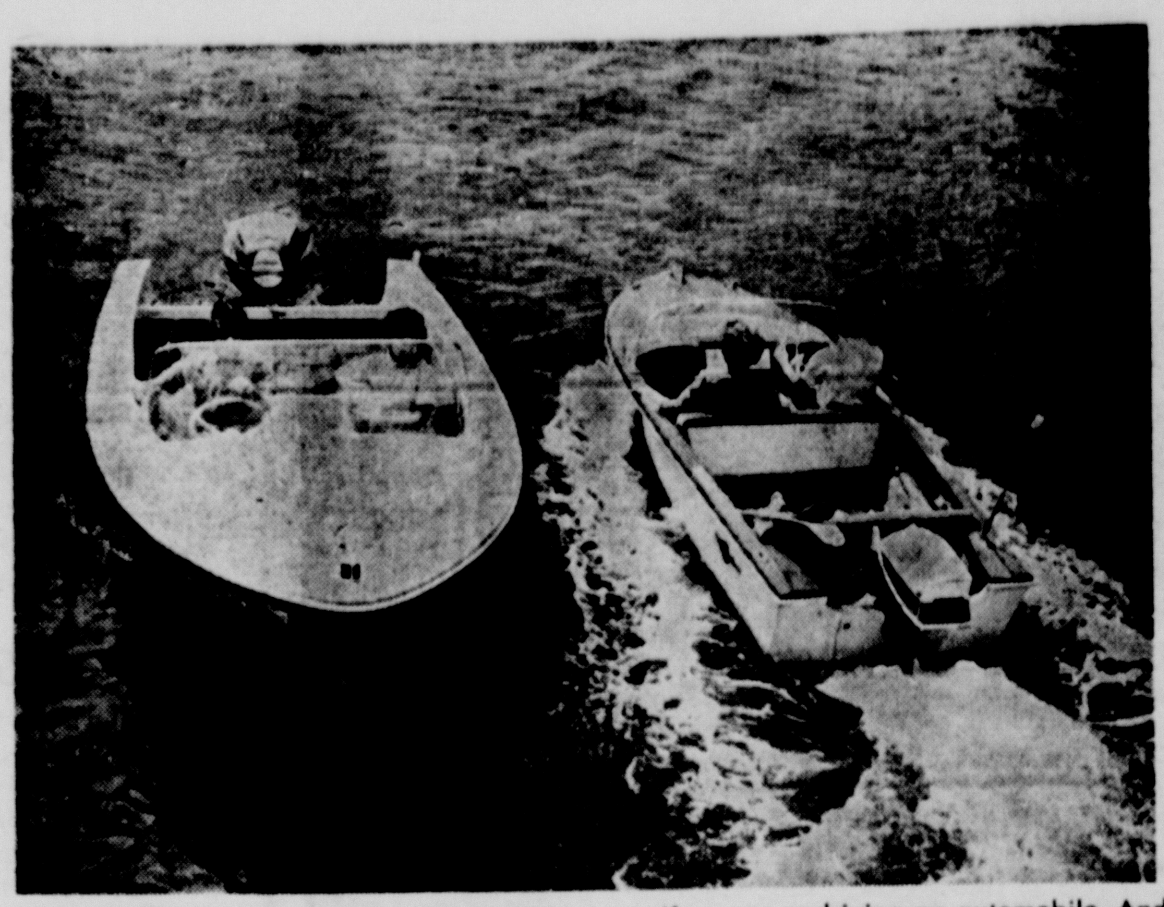
Boating is fun, but not in bad weather; so the good boatman never looks for trouble by going out in bad weather.



WHEN TWO BOATS are running in opposite but parallel directions and meet, the drivers should keep to the right. It is the same as if you were driving an automobile. And by the observance of such common sense regulations and practices, better boating is made possible for all.

To Prevent Theft Of Motor—

Captain Hook and the days of piracy are gone but modern day thieves still present a problem for outboard skippers.

Each year thousands of outboard motors as well as complete boating rigs are stolen. In many cases, the loss could have been avoided had a little extra precaution been taken by the owner.

THERE ARE several things a boatman can do to discourage theft of his equipment, say the people at Evinrude Motors who handle stolen motor complaints.

On most outboard motors holes will be found in the handles of the clamp screws used in securing the motor to the boat. If the clamps are tightened so that both handles point downward, a regular bicycle lock can be passed through the holes making it impossible to remove the motor without first disturbing the lock.

A boat stored outside and left unattended on a trailer is easy pickings for a thief. All he need do is attach the trailer to a car and speed off. If you store your rig outside, it's a good idea to lock it down in some manner. A heavy chain can be used to secure the trailer to some stationary object such as a tree or post. Another solution is to chain one of the wheels to the axle. Anything you can do to make it difficult to hitch the trailer without causing a commotion will help.

If your boat is kept in the water, it's a good idea to keep the area lighted at night. Many thieves are quite bold but most prefer to work under the cover of darkness. A light may be enough to keep them away.

INSURANCE won't prevent theft but it will make your loss less serious if it should occur. It's only good sense to have your rig fully insured for its current value at all times.

To establish a record of ownership the Evinrude people suggest that a new motor be registered with the manufacturer at the time of purchase. When buying a used outboard, make sure that the bill of sale, which should be kept, includes both the model and serial numbers of the engine. If you should experience the misfortune of having your equipment stolen, immediately report the theft to local law enforcement officers and to your insurance company.

LET'S TAKE A TEST ON NAUTICAL TERMS

Here's a test to see how well you know the terms of boating:

According to the Johnson Motors News Bureau, if you answer all 15 statements correctly you're a real "salt"; 11 to 14 correct answers indicates you've been traveling with a boating crowd! If you are correct on five to 10 of the statements, you're a beginner and better start getting hep.

Less than five right means you're a lubber (land lover)!

OK, here you go, circle the word you think is correct . . . and no cheating.

1. The side of a boat opposite that from which the breeze is blowing is called the (a) lee, (b) windless or (c) portside.

2. The extreme front of the boat is called the (a) peak (b) bow or (c) tiller.

3. A cork, rubber or plastic device hung over the side of the boat to prevent chafing and scratching when moored is called a (a) fender, (b) buoy or (c) cushion.

4. A kitchen on a cruiser is termed the (a) head, (b) hold or (c) galley.

5. The width of a boat, measured at the widest point, is known as the (a) gunwale, (b) beam or (c) plane.

6. When looking forward, the right side of the boat is the (a) starboard, (b) port or (c) abaft.

7. A nautical distress signal is (a) "Ahoy," (b) "dry rot" or (c) "Mayday."

8. The upper edge of the sides of the boat are known as (a) chines, (b) transoms or (c) gunwales.

9. The after part of the boat, the rear end, is termed the (a) stern, (b) freeboard or (c) hold.

10. A diary of events on the water is called the ship's (a) scroll, (b) log or (c) register.

11. The cross structure at the end of the boat, upon which the outboard motor is mounted, is known as the (a) aft-bracket, (b) flying bridge or (c) transom.

12. Nautical term for "rope" is (a) line, (b) cable or (c) binding.

13. Does a boatman (a) heave, (b) drop or (c) toss the anchor?

14. A measure of marine speed, a nautical mile, is termed (a) phantom, (b) cuddy or (c) knot.

15. A partition or wall in a boat is known as a (a) bilge, (b) binnacle or (c) bulkhead.

ANSWERS: 1-a, 2-b, 3-a, 4-c, 5-b, 6-a, 7-c, 8-c, 9-a, 10-b, 11-c, 12-a, 13-b, 14-c, 15-c.

Watch Boat's Stern When Leaving Pier

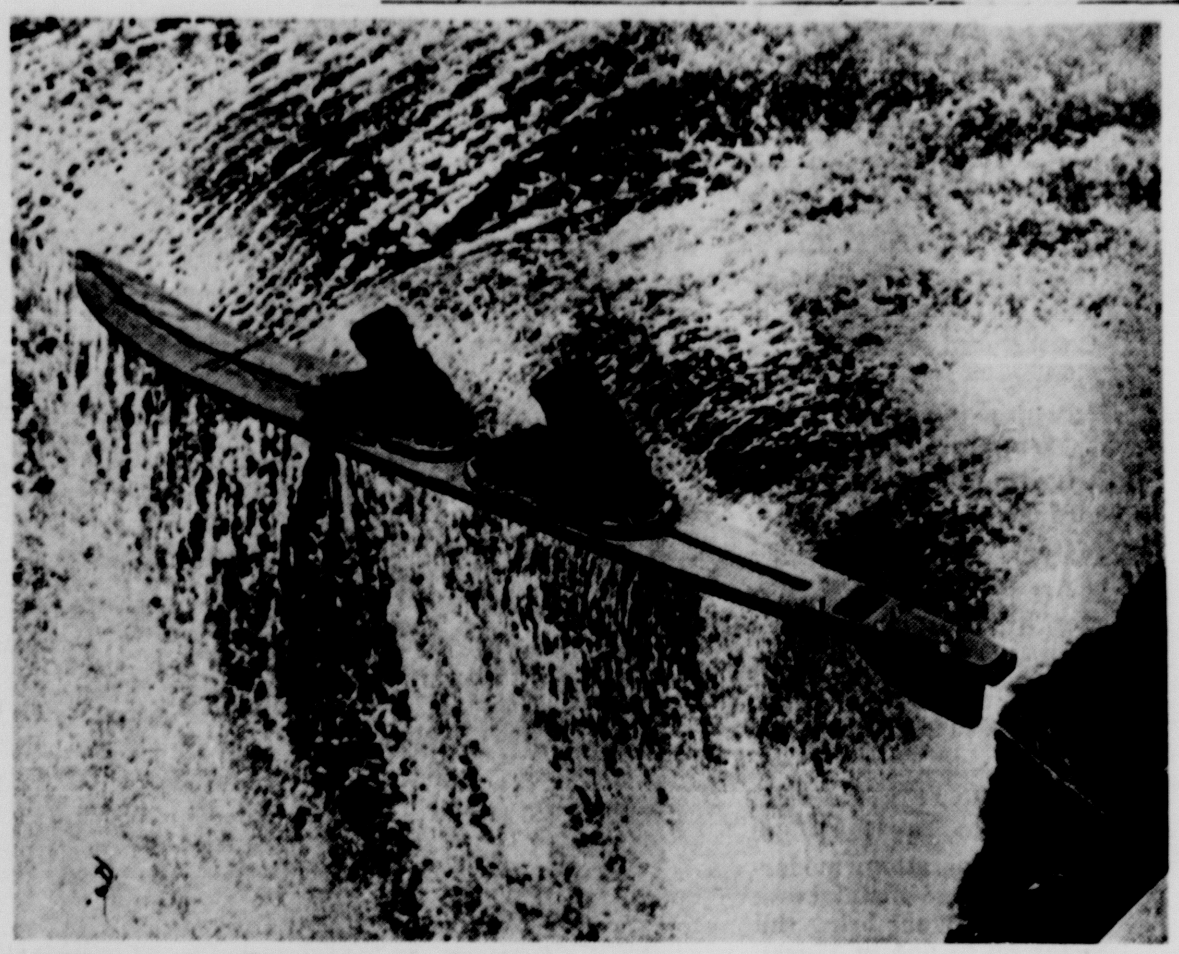
Unlike an automobile, the back end of a boat responds first to a turn of the steering wheel.

Keep this in mind when pulling away from a pier.

If the boat is snugged against the pier and the steering wheel is turned too sharply, the stern can swing into or under the pier. Either push the boat away from the pier before accelerating or leave the pier at a slight angle until the boat is clear.



MAHERAJAH SLALOM SKIS, manufactured in Sausalito at 1 Gate Five by Maherajah Water Skis, are popular with California's top slalom skiers—and for good reason. Wearers have won more than 2,000 trophies for competitive skiing and attained speeds of 99.4 miles per hour. Each ski is produced for the individual, considering the skier's weight, height, shoe-size, boat speed and power. Its manufacturers hail it as "a ski with superior control" that is not only best for competition but also "the best ski for every-day use."

YOU CAN HELP CUT BOATING ACCIDENT ODDS

Cmdr. Edward R. Tharp, chief, Pleasure Boating Casualty Section of the U.S. Coast Guard, states that the "average" boat operator faces the odds of one in 7,500 of having an accident, according to an analysis of mishaps reported to Washington.

As the "average" operator becomes more safety minded, his chances of an accident decreases, Commander Tharp reports. For instance, just by not overloading the boat, the odds increase to one in 8,000. Prudent operation, moderate speed and maintaining a proper lookout bring the factor up to one in 17,500.

Knowing winds and water conditions and avoiding storm conditions will advance the margin to one in 19,500 and if you have the occupants of your craft seated comfortable and properly where odds increase to one in 63,000.

Finally, if you could make all hands wear life preservers (if, he says), the chances of avoiding a fatal mishap is one in 210,000.

SAILS ON THE WATER are a familiar sight to Marinites—yet one they never get tired of. The onlookers get almost as much pleasure out of watching the graceful craft, large and small, as do the yachtsmen themselves. This scene, of course, is the beautiful Belvedere Lagoon, one of the finest spots for small sailing boats that can be found anywhere. (Independent-Journal photo)

THERE'S A world of difference between motorboating and sailboating. And yet the two groups of enthusiasts also share many things—mainly a love of the water and the outdoors and a devotion to good craftsmanship and seamanship. And each group is a stout defender of its own particular type of seacraft.

THE "FLOATING HOME," a modern, luxury-type houseboat intended for year-round occupancy, will be introduced by two firms in Marin next month. This illustration is an artist's conception of the "Balboa," a two-bedroom dwelling to sell for approximately $10,500 by Radec Industries, Inc. Other models range upward in price to $50,000.

New Luxury Afloat Due Soon In Marin

A new phase in luxury marine living will make its entry in Marin waterways next month—the "Floating Home."

Two dealers, operating entirely separately, will introduce their respective versions of this type of residence which goes beyond the popular conception of a houseboat.

Pacific Floating Homes, operating from 240 Redwood Highway, Sausalito, and Radec Industries, Inc., locally represented at Loch Lomond Marina, San Rafael, will display models offering all the conveniences of a land dwelling and designed to give years of occupancy without hull deterioration. Pacific expects to have its grand opening on June 1; Radec at about the same time or shortly afterward.

Models will be featured in sizes from studio and one-bedroom units to four-bedroom homes and duplexes designed for commercial marina motel accomodations. Prices range from $5,000 up to $50,000.

Both firms will bring in their prefabricated dwellings from out of the county—Pacific from Southern California on lumber barges towed to Marin; Radec from the East Bay towed to the site or by trucking in prefabricated sections and then assembling them on the site if towing is impractical.

Here's The Right Technique For Towing With Outboard

Should you want to tow another craft or a large object with your outboard boat, could you do it in a seamanlike manner?

The Mercury outboard people say that if you remember the following points, you'll be prepared for this eventuality:

Your boat's anchor line is the handiest rope aboard for emergency towing. It should be fairly stout. Don't ever economize by using clothesline or other light rope for the anchor, because it is too apt to break while you are anchored—or towing a friend who's run out of fuel.

PLANING-TYPE outboard boats usually tow handily and at a fast clip. Often, though, outboarders are asked to tow sailboats, rowboats and similar craft with displacement hulls. Such boats are characterized by a bottom which curves up and narrows from amidships aft. These hulls tend to get cranky when towed at too fast a clip, so tailor your speed to suit the tow.

Frequently, craft like canoes and tenders dart this way and that, especially when the tow line is attached to the top of the bow. The pull then tends to bury the bow in the water.

To remedy this, tie a loop rope around the hull about one-third back from the bow. Attach the tow line to the loop down under the keel. The pull will then tend to lift the bow, and the stern will follow like a "tail," keeping the tow straight.

SPEEDS WILL be very low when you are pulling swimming rafts, logs or similar objects, and steering control may be limited. Try adapting a method used by many river towboat captains.

Go alongside your tow and make your boat fast to it, bow and stern. The boat and tow then become one unit and your propeller thrust can be used to steer both, usually more effectively.

Night Precaution

When boating at night, extra lights, entirely independent of your boat's electrical system, are handy to have.

A KIMBALL PRODUCT

Marin Is Home Of Best Selling Water Skis Of Fiber Glass

Marin's role as a boating and water sports center is widely known around the world. And, of course, it's an old story to Marinites, who frequently take their recreational advantages for granted.

Less well known, however, is the fact that Marin also boasts a factory where the world's largest-selling brand of fiber glass water skis is manufactured.

Kimball Manufacturing Corp., located for the past five years in a sprawling factory at Harbor and Mill Streets in San Rafael, has led the way to maintenance-free water skiing with its pioneering developments.

The idea of manufacturing a pressure-molded fiber glass ski was the result of a rare collaboration. William R. Kimball, president of the corporation, and Don Ibsen, considered by many to be the inventor of modern water skiing, put their minds and their experience together to put an end to a troublesome chore.

Ibsen, who has been skiing since the mid-20s, felt that there ought to be a high-quality ski on the market which would eliminate the disadvantages of wooden skis—annual maintenance, fracture, delamination.

The sport had, he contended, too long suffered from wooden skis that became so heavy that it was hard to ski on them.

In 1955, the first Kimball skis were made. Since then, the ski has been completely redesigned. The greatly increased horsepower of today's in-and-outboard boats has necessitated a product that is hardly comparable to those made eight years ago.

The early Kimball models were soft, flexible, and noted for their gentle easy-going ride. Today's models, while still primarily designed for the average skier, are geared to high-performance, high-speed skiing.

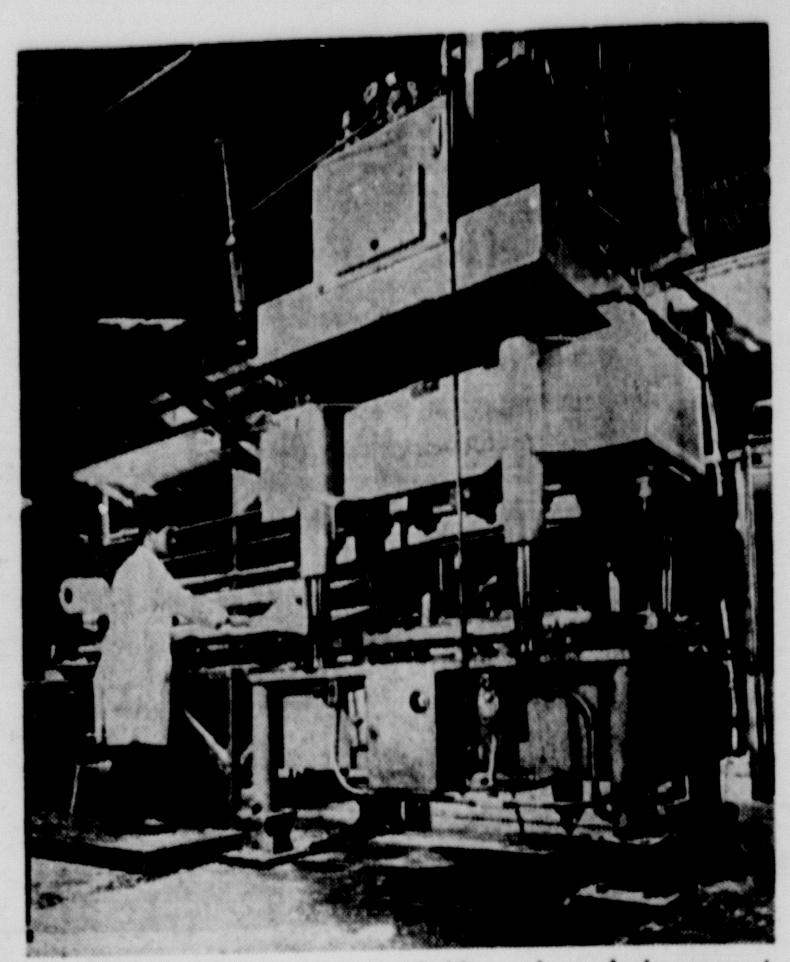
Models which Kimbal presently manufactures are of full rocker, banana-shaped design. Kimball engineers, guided by Ibsen and a panel of world-champion skiers, have proved that the present design offers a unique combination of easy maneuverability and high-speed performance. The wide array of patterns and models includes slaloms and popular combination pairs.

During 1962, in order to further strengthen its position in the marine field, Kimball purchased Futurity, Inc. —maker of a famous line of ski hitches and anchors.

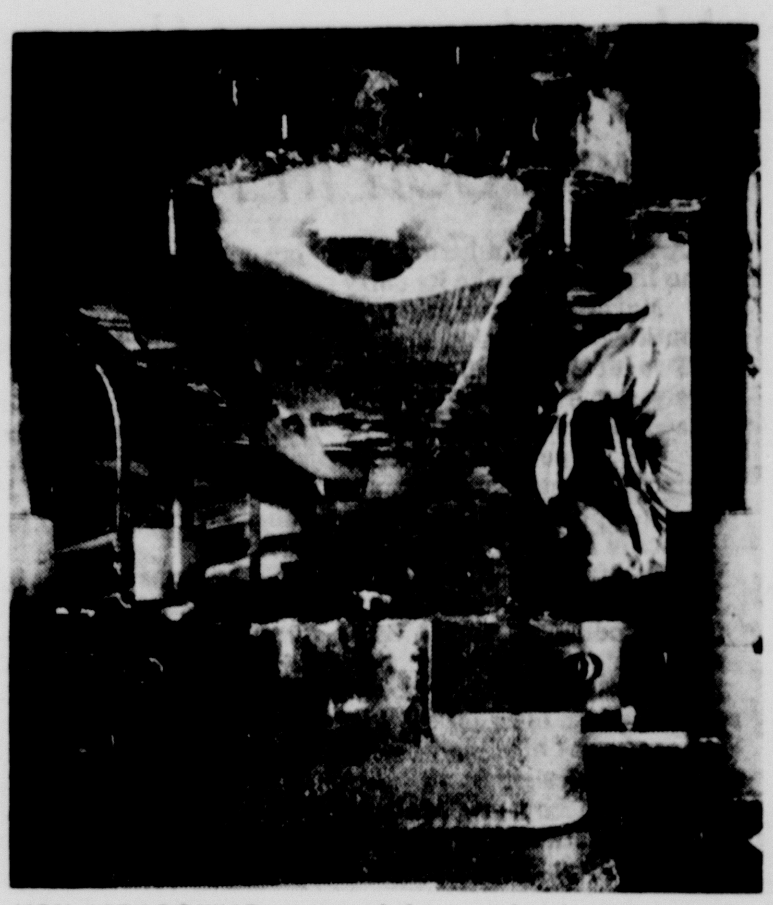
Futurity hitches are a unique product, since they bring a Water Ski Assn.-approved and required tournament product to the marine market at a popular price. The Futurity hitch extends the rope above the motor and, as such, out of the water and safely out of reach of the propeller. The tilting hitch is also unique in that it can work as a motor-lift by using the weight of the top of the motor as a counter-balance.

The anchors made by Futurity are of non-fouling type, sold at leading marine and sporting goods stores in every part of the country.

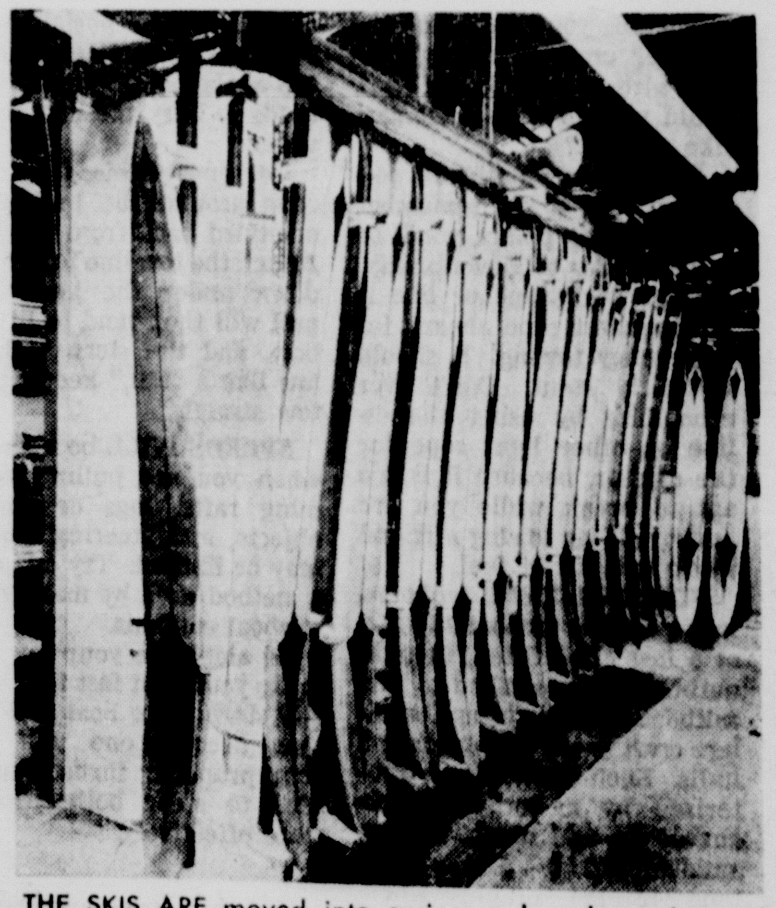
New recognition has just come to Kimball and its products with the announcement that the concern's water skis have been selected for exhibit this year under U.S. Department of Commerce sponsorship at trade fairs to be held in Rio de Janeiro and in Sydney, Australia, as "representative" of the work of American industry.



"A SANDWISH," consisting of fiber glass, balsa wood flotation core and resins, is squeezed and cured under steam heat into its permanent shape by this 100-ton press in the Kimball Manufacturing Corp. plant in San Rafael. It is part of the process in the production of fiber glass water skis.



YOU ARE LOOKING at one of the "sandwiches" inside the mold, showing the paper overlay which is molded into many of the Kimball skis to create an imitation wood finish. The skis remain and cure in the mold under tremendous pressure for four minutes.



THE SKIS ARE moved into curing racks where the end result will be handsomely-decorated and almost indestructible skis. The process used is similar to that employed by production molders of automobile bodies.

Anchors: A 'Must' For Boat

A rock tied to a clothes line and dropped over the side will do a pretty fair job of holding a small boat in calm water. But as the size of the boat and the turbulence of the water increase, so does the need for a better method.

An anchor, of course, is the answer.

AN ANCHOR is one of the most useful pieces of equipment a boatman can own.

Anchors are made in various size, shapes and weights to be used with different boats.

Most popular with outboard boatmen are the mushroom and Danforth types. Mushroom anchors resemble an inverted mushroom and are used as permanent moorings. Lightweight Danforth type anchors have pivoting flukes which exert tremendous holding power. They are preferred by most boatmen.

"HOLD IT!" her instructor tells this pretty mariner. You don't heave an anchor—you lower it. And first you get your foot out of the line. And please, lady, don't stand on the gunwale. It is not only important that you have an anchor aboard, but also that you learn to use it properly.

JUST AS important as having the right anchor is knowing how to use it. When anchoring, first check to be sure the bitter end of the line is attached to the boat and the line is not tangled around your feet or gear. Select the spot where you want to anchor and then approach it into the wind or current, whichever is stronger. When over the spot, lower the anchor, don't heave it.

After the anchor has caught the bottom, play out additional line until the ratio of length of line to depth of water is about six to one. In rough seas, it's best to increase the ratio. Keep the engine running until the anchor is set. If it doesn't catch the first time, try again. Anchors are set quite easily in mud or sand. On rock bottoms, it may be necessary to drag the anchor some distance before it catches.

DEPENDING upon the type of bottom, retrieving the anchor can sometimes present a problem. The easiest way is to run the boat to a point directly above the anchor and then give the line a good straight pull. If it doesn't break loose, attach the line to the boat and utilize the pulling power of the motor at a slow speed.

Keep your anchor in a place where it can be reached conveniently.

The Marine Paints Are Durable

New and better marine paints have resulted in finishes which are more resistant to mildew, barnacles, rot and marine growth plus weathering from being in the water.

But of utmost importance is the refinishing which is necessary to maintain your boat properly as well as producing a smoother finish to enable your craft to move through the water efficently.

You can sand your boat by hand, use power tools or there are a variety of commericial products on the market—some of which make revolutionary claims as to ease of working the wood and production of excellent end results.

On bottoms consideration must be given to the amount of marine growth present. If this is not too heavy, you may not want to sand through to the bare wood. It is desirable to use a respirator because dust created from bottom paints is injurious.

The number of scars, nicks and chipped or peeled paint areas also must be determined on topsides before a decision is made to go down to the paint-free wood. If mars are neglible, it may not be necessary. This same procedure applies to decks.

On brightwork it usually is not necessary to remove all varnish. The main thing here is that more than one coat is desirable to get the finish protection desired.

A goodly number of sailors prefer to leave polishing of the propeller to a boat yard but there are some with experience who do the job themselves—especially if nicks and gouges are at a minimum.

Pitch Of Propeller Can Mean A Lot In Boat's Performance

It Is Seldom Seen, But The Prop Is An Important Part Of Motor

Propellers, seldom seen when a boat is in the water, are one of the most significant parts of outboard motors.

This rather simple part has the important job of converting the energy produced by the powerhead to power in the form of thrust necessary to propel the boat.

MODERN outboards are certified to develop their rated horsepower at a specified number of crankshaft revolutions per minute. Within certain limits, if the engine does not operate within its recommended rpm range at full throttle, it is likely that the propeller is not properly matched to the load it is being required to move.

Failure to select a propeller of the correct pitch can cause poor performance, a great deal of irritation and even damage to the motor. Pitch, incidentally, indicates the distance that the propeller would move ahead through the water in one complete revolution, assuming there was no propeller slip. For instance, a propeller with a 12-inch pitch would theoretically move ahead 12 inches in one revolution.

Take the case of the man who last spring purchased a new boat. He had been operating a 40 horsepower on a 15-foot boat and getting good performance. But he decided he wanted a little more room, so traded it in on an open-cockpit 16-footer of lapstrake construction — a boat considerably heavier than the one he had been using.

HIS FIRST use of this boat came when his family went camping with another family group. He was somewhat disappointed, but not too concerned, when his speedometer registered only about 23 miles per hour at full throttle with three people in the boat. He became alarmed when he had difficulty pulling an adult water skier from a deep water start, and then could pull the skier at a top speed of only 20 miles per hour.

Following his vacation, he took the rig to his marine dealer and recounted his experience. The dealer first checked the prop to see if it was properly balanced. Finding nothing wrong with the balance, he put the rig in the water with two passengers. At full throttle the speedometer indicated 23 miles per hour and his tachometer indicated the motor was turning only about 3700 rpm. As the engine develops its rated horsepower at 4,500 rpm, he knew the propeller was not correct for the load.

The dealer then put a lower pitch prop on the motor and immediately top speed jumped to near 29 miles per hour and the rpm moved close ot 4,500. To make sure the pitch was not too low at minimum load, the dealer took the boat out alone. Although top speed increased by slightly over one mile per hour, the rpm's did not increase significantly.

From these facts, a valuable lesson may be learned. If your motor does not rev up to within the recommended operating range, it is likely you are using a prop with too much pitch. You are trying to push too heavy a load too fast. Undue strain is placed on the motor if it operates below recommended range at full throttle. It will also fail to develop the rated horsepower you paid for when you bought the engine.

AT THE SAME time, a propeller acts as a governor on engine speed. If you are using a propeller with too little pitch, it is possible your engine will turn over faster than the recommended safe operating range.

The only certain way to test engine speed is by use of a tachometer. If, under normal load with the proper tilt angle and transom height the motor turns faster or slower than the manufacturer's specifications, the propeller is wrong for the rig. If the motor turns too fast, you need a prop wth greater pitch to reduce the rpm. If it turns too slow, you need a propeller with less pitch.

A marine dealer is the best qualified man to help you check your propeller.

A PROPELLER in this condition can cause many headaches. Bent or badly-nicked propellers should be repaired, repitched or replaced.

Some Dos And Don'ts For Plastic Windshield Care

Wrap-around plastic windshields—popular with many owners of small craft because of their post and frame-free visibility—must be cleaned often and correctly because they impair vision if they are dirty and scratched.

Plastic windshields develop a static charge and attract dust with heavy deposits especially common after a trailer trip over the highways.

Spray dries and leaves highly abrasive salt specks on tidal waters and silt-laden droplets create pumice-like spots when cruising on muddy rivers. Sand gets on the foredeck near beaches and grains of it can adhere to the windshield if wet.

Here are some "do's" and "do nots" for your windshield's protection:

DO NOT—Wipe off dust with any handy piece of cloth because this eventually will put countless tiny scratches into the surfaces.

DO NOT—Use common cleaners intended for home and automobile glass because they could dull the surface permanently.

DO—Rinse off heavy coatings of dust, salt or silt with plain water and follow up with a gentle washing with mild soap and soft cloth.

DO—Purchase scratch-removing compound or a plastic cleaning kit at a marine store to insure a good job of restoring your windshield. Some of them contain agents to minimize formation of static charges and some also leave protective films.

DO—Install transom lift handles on your dashboard so that passengers can hold on instead of grabbing the windshield when boarding.

There's A Right Way To Launch Your Boat—And Here Is How

It doesn't take a bottle of champagne to launch your outboard. Better use is made of a keen sense of direction and a guide standing at the rear of the trailer to call out instructions.

Here's how to do it, according to the National Safety Council:

1. Back slowly at a right angle to the launching site. Remember that when you want the rear of the trailer to turn one direction, steer your car the opposite way.

2. If the site is natural or unimproved, pick a sloping spot hard enough to give your tires a lot of traction.

3. When you are a few feet from the water's edge, remove the rear tie-downs from the boat. Tilt the motor up and unlock the bow winch, but keep the boat snubbed tight.

4. Back again until the trailer wheels are an inch or two in the water. Set the hand brake and put the car in gear, ignition off. Now give the boat a firm push down the trailer.

DON'T BE one of those landlocked sailors who scuttle their boat before they get it to water. Be sure your boat, trailer, and car are matched and that you have an adequate well-designed hitch.

Use a safety chain, which is required by law in most states. Check your hitch and tie-downs whenever you stop for gas. If you park for a long time, loosen the tie-downs to relieve strain on the boat.

Don't permit yourself to become distracted when towing the trailer and forget it's fastened on behind you. Drivers have been known to do this, then back up and damage boat, trailer and automobile by sharply jackknifing.

You have extra weight and length of boat and trailer while driving, so make sure you have extra room when you have to pass, and plenty of space in which to stop. Give other drivers clear arm signals if your signal lights are hidden by the boat.

WHEN BUYING a trailer for your boat, match it to your boat and your car. Check the Outboard Boating Club of America weight capacity rating, and if your boat comes within 100 pounds of it, get the next larger trailer. You'll probably load your boat with a motor, luggage and extra gear.

Often overlooked on small trailers is wheel alignment. If the wheels are not properly aligned, tire wear increases. Worse yet, out-of-line wheels cause the trailer to swing from side to side to take up more than your share of the road.

Equip your trailer to meet the requirements of your state laws and those of any other states in which you will use it. The Uniform Vehicle Code recommends the following:

At least one red light visable for at least 500 feet to the rear of the trailer.

Trailers weighing up to 3,000 pounds gross should have two reflectors, one on each side. Those weighing more than 3,000 pounds should have additional clearance and side marker lamps. All trailers should have a stoplight if the towing car's stoplight is obscured.

TRAILERS OF more than 3,000 pounds should have brakes adequate to control their movement and which can be operated from the towing vehicle. Brakes should work automatically should there be an accidental unhitching.

All new boat trailers weighing more than 1,500 pounds loaded should have brakes on all wheels.

WHITE STILL FAVORED FOR BOATS

White remains the most popular hue with boats among boating enthusiasts throughout this country.

The annual marine paint color preference survey by C. A. Woolsey Paint and Water Color Co. has disclosed a slight increase in the use of color on boats on the nation's waterways. But white remains the strong favorite, with just under half the volume of topside paints being white of varying degrees of luster.

Black has declined in favor. Greys, blues and greens remain the three most popular color families. Such "warm" colors as shades of sand, yellow and coral are the least chosen.

In Foul Weather

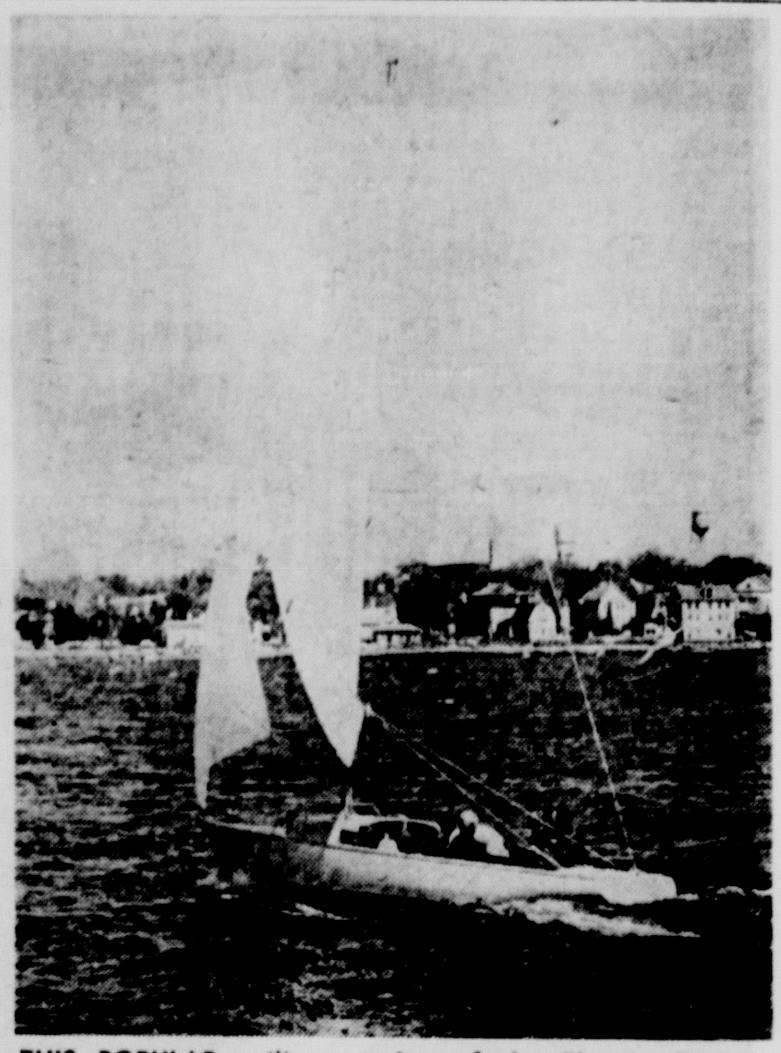
Heed nature's warning and put for shore when signs of a storm appear. But, if you should be caught in open water, steer your boat into the waves and reduce speed. Keep the center of gravity low by having passengers sit on the floorboards.



THIS POPULAR sailing version of the Electric Cruising Sloop is handled by the Mariner Yacht Sales Inc. of Sausalito where a demonstrator is available. There will also be a rental unit this summer.

Anyone Who Loves Water Can Learn To Ski Well

Any water skier will tell you the easiest way to experience the free-wheeling thrill of flying is to skim lightly over the top of the water on a pair of five foot boards with foot bindings.

For sheer exhilaration, a feeling of complete cleanliness, and the thrill of swiftness multiplied several times actual speed, nothing holds more fascination than water skiing.

THE MOST captivating thing about water skiing is that anybody can do it, says Tom Dorwin, water ski advisor for Evinrude Motors.

He says the degree of accomplishment depends upon the individual—his determination, natural rhythm and early instruction. However, the only ones who fail to get up and ride the skis are those who really don't want to.

Anyone who loves water, speed, fun and a thrill will want to try water skis. Learning the fundamentals for pure family fun is easy.

Progress into competitive water skiing, with its tricks, jumping and slalom is another problem, Dorwin says.

All you need to water ski is a boat, fitted with a motor of 18 horsepower or more, a tow line, a pair of water skis, and a water ski belt.

SELECT SKIS that are of proper size. In general, skis that are five feet in length are best for those weighing up to 120 pounds, and five and one-half feet in length for those over 120 pounds. The bindings should fit the foot snugly but comfortably.

Dorwin, as most instructors, favors the dry land instruction preliminary to the actual water attempt. With a little practice on land the beginner will feel more comfortable when in the water, with the skis quite difficult to control on the first attempt.

Wet the bindings and feet at the water's edge and slip the toes into the front binding first. Then adjust the heel until it fits correctly.

NOW SIT down on the skis with a tow bar in hand. The instructor will grasp the tow rope and simulate the pull of the boat and motor against the tow. Skis should be about six inches apart. The knees should be tightly doubled up, with the arms around the knees and straight out in front of you.

The instructor will pull you into a standing position several times. Let him do the work—just let your body come up as he pulls.

This is the way it will be when you get in the water.

After a few such lessons, don a water ski belt or jacket and you are ready for the water. Even if you are a good swimmer, you should wear a floatation device, Dorwin insists.

YOUR START will be made in water that is at least hip deep.

Dorwin prefers to ride with the beginner the first few times so he can steady the novice as he comes out of the water. This is the critical point in learning to ski. Once up, riding is easy.

The driver will take the slack out of the tow lines, which are of exactly the same length for safety's sake. As the slight pull of the motor in gear steadies the beginner, word to "Hit it!" is given. Letting the boat do the work, just as the instructor did on land, you will glide to the top naturally. Then stand up and ride!

KEEP THE arms straight, the knees slightly flexed to absorb the shock of slight bumps, and the body leaned back against the pull of the tow boat.

If you just ride behind the boat a few times you will feel perfectly at home on the skis. Then you can start crossing the wake and some of the other activities that make the sport more enjoyable.

Before you start you should review a set of hand signals with the observer in the boat, as this will be your only means of communication once under way. On him and the driver rests the responsibility for a safe ride. An experienced driver will give you only short rides when you first start.

Watch Your Step

When boarding a small boat, step to the center of the boat and not on the gunwale. You'll stay drier that way.

AS BOAT ACCELERATES, instructor and skier begin to come out of the water. Note that student is still in crouched position, knees doubled and arms straight, letting power of the boat pull her up.

NOW THEY'RE UP and running, with the pupil doing fine. She keeps her knees slightly bent, arms straight, and leans back slightly against the pull of the tow rope.

WITH A LITTLE PRACTICE, anyone can become an expert boat trailer handler. The important thing to remember when learning is to take it easy—don't try to back up too fast. When launching, it's a good idea to have another person direct you onto the ramp. Properly used, trailers are a tremendous boon to the boaters.

Boat Trailering Just Takes Practice

Boat trailers have played a big part in the growing popularity of outboard boating.

With a trailer, outboard skippers can enjoy boating on many different waterways whether they be near or even hundreds of miles away. A trailer also eliminates the need to rent a mooring slip. The rig can be brought home after each outing and stored in the owner's garage or back yard.

DESPITE THE many advantages of trailer boating, some boatmen are a little reluctant to give it a try. Some have the notion that trailering is a real chore. Not so.

If you've never pulled a trailer or are not the expert you would like to be, follow these suggestions:

Practice makes perfect. Hitch the trailer to your car some quiet Sunday morning and drive over to a large, empty parking lot. A shopping center is ideal. Spend some time getting the feel of backing the trailer. Try to back in a straight line for 50 feet or so. Then try to back into a marked parking space.

It won't take long to get the hang of it if you remember one point—turn the car wheel in the opposite direction from the way you want the trailer to go. The simplest way to do this is to get into the habit of gripping the steering wheel at the bottom, and from that position, turn it in the same direction you want the trailer to move. Sounds a little confusing, but by turning the steering wheel left when it is held at the bottom, you're actually turning the car wheels right and vice versa.

AFTER A short practice session you'll be ready to give it a try at the launching ramp. Perhaps your biggest problem will be the tendency to over steer which can cause the trailer to jackknife. Don't let it bother you. Just pull ahead and try again. Even an experienced trailer handler may have to make a couple of tries on a bad day.

Just before you back onto the ramp, loosen the trailer tie-downs, tilt up the motor and check to see that the drain plug is inserted. It's easier to do this before the trailer is backed to the water's edge. When the trailer is in launching position attach a mooring line to the boat, unhook the winch line and shove the boat off the trailer.

WHILE YOU'RE parking your car, either have someone hold the line or tie the boat to a pier where it will not interfere with other boats being launched. When others are waiting to use the ramp, get your car out of the way as quickly as possible. It's only common courtesy, the same as you would expect from other boatmen.

When You Ski, Keep Line Neat

When water skiing, make certain the tow line is free of knots.

It is estimated that a simple knot in a tow line decreases its strength up to 45 per cent. Back splice or whip the ends of the line to keep the ends from fraying.

If you construct your own tow lines, make certain that the yoke off the tow handle is no more than 11 inches deep. In other words, the two ends of the rope attached to the tow handle should meet in a single line not more than 11 inches from the handle.

This eliminates the possibility of accidental entanglement in the tow line.

Drain Plug Important

Even the most expert boatman has had the experience of launching his craft minus the drain plug. It is not only embarrassing, but sometimes damaging. The Evinrude Boating Foundation suggests that you replace your drain plug before you leave home, rather than at the launching site where you will likely be in a hurry and occupied with other things.

Boatman Should Be Careful He's Well Protected

Like an automobile owner, the boatman should have insurance to protect himself on two counts — property damage or injury he may cause to others and damage or injury he may suffer himself.

Of the two, the first, which is referred to as bodily injury and property damage liability insurance, is most important.

MANY BOATMEN are automatically covered for liability, at least to some extent, under their comprehensive home owner's policies. But since the coverage varies with different insurance companies, types of policies and parts of the country, it's wise to know for sure just how much coverage you have rather than assuming you have enough.

Your insurance agent can quickly explain the coverage and suggest an additional policy if it is needed.

Insurance on your own equipment is also important. Contingencies most often covered are fire, theft, collision, sinking, stranding and loss of motor overboard. These and other perils are covered in all risk and comprehensive policies, the type most often purchased by boat owners.

The annual premium for such coverage is usually about four per cent the declared value of the equipment. Other types of lesser coverage are also available. Some insurance policies carry a deductible clause stating that the owner must pay for damages which do not exceed a certain amount, usually from $25 to $100. As a result, premium costs are reduced.

COMPANIES dealing in boat insurance realize that the equipment is not always used the year round and it is on this premise that premiums are established. If insureds would limit their coverage to only the most active part of the season, premiums would have to be prorated and raised accordingly. This being the case, no significant savings can be made by canceling your policy at the end of the season. For the little extra cost involved, it's far better to keep your rig fully insured at all times to protect it against such perils as fire, theft, and windstorm that can occur at any time.

Significant premium savings can be made, however, by insuring your equipment for only its current book value. Depreciation must be taken into consideration for, obviously, a rig worth $2,000 five years ago will be worth considerably less today. In the event of loss, insurance companies will pay only the actual cost of repairing or replacing the equipment. You'll be money ahead if, when you renew your policy each year, you insure your equipment for only its current value.

SINCE INSURANCE is a detailed and sometimes confusing subject it's best to consult a qualified insurance agent whenever you have a question. Have him explain the different types of coverage available and choose the one best suited to your needs.

Being properly insured will give you peace of mind and make your boating even more fun.

CAR TOP BOATS have a number of advantages. For one thing, they are inexpensive. They are easy to handle, and can be launched almost anywhere. Car-toppers offer an excellent way of getting started in boating.

OUTBOARDS DON'T STEER LIKE CARS

When you are getting away from a pier or float, don't spin your wheel so far in one direction that the stern swings sharply against the obstruction, says Everett B. Morris in the Evinrude Boating Foundation publication, "Outboard Boating Skills."

Morris says to remember that outboard boats do not steer like automobiles or bicycles, which follow their front wheels. In boats, the stern responds to the steering impulse first and in the opposite direction from that which the bow is going to take. So, when you are in close quarters, give your stern room enough to swing when you turn.

Keep Close Check On Trailer Tires

Many a boat trip has been ruined by trailer tire problems caused from underinflation or overloading.

Tire experts strongly recommend that boat trailer tires be checked thoroughly before towing the family boat away on a trip.

Trailer tires need much higher inflation than passenger car tires. Underinflated, tire treads wear excessively; high internal heat and dangerous trailer sway are created.

Boat owner are also cautioned against overloading since boat trailer tires are manufactured in various sizes and ply ratings depending on the specified load a trailer is expected to carry.

Take Plenty Of Line Along

Before leaving on your next cruise, the Evinrude Boating Foundation suggests you make up a spare line or two and take it with you.

A bow, stern or anchor line may either be lost or used for some other purpose . . . so extra line comes in mighty handy.

To prevent unnecessary grief enroute, make a check of all lines before leaving on a cruise. A little extra work before the cruise will save a great deal of time—time that could better be spent enjoying your cruise.

Boat Shows Draw

Americans are boat show conscious. Over 100 boat shows are held in the United States each year.

Decorating To Match The Sea

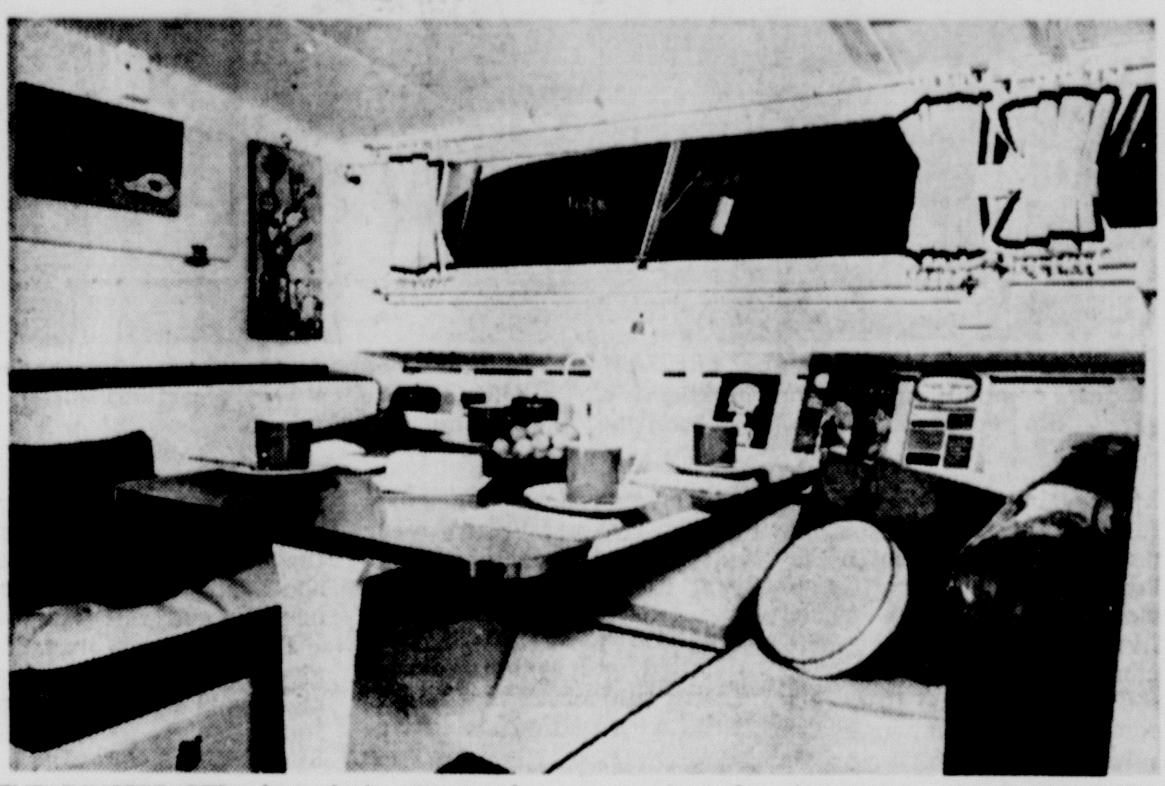
The interior decorator has "invaded" the realm of boating.

The increased influence of women in the boating world has been cited as one reason why horsepower ratings and cruising ranges now share the spotlight with "this year's colors," especially in the luxury class.

Also indicative of the trend toward "co-ordinated living" are the 36-foot Pacemaker cruiser and matching boathouse decorated by Jerome I. Manashaw and shown on this page.

Manashaw relied heavily upon vinyl-coated fabrics by Interchemical Corp. in colors matching the sea and sky—blue, white and olive green.

What he had in mind, Manashaw says, was the desire of more and more of today's "sailors" for charm and warmth of on-board living as against the once popular prospect of "roughing it."



THE DINETTE SET aboard the Pacemaker cruiser can provide any homemaker with clues for clever decorating of small areas. Designer Jerome I. Manashaw used a simple color combination of white and bright blue accented with olive green. The seating, for dining or, with table folded away, for lounging, is covered in a blue and white patent vinyl. Headlining is a durable white vinyl fabric. The dinette table top is blue, and the white drapery boasts blue trimming. Paintings are by Kenneth Cox.

THE MAIN CABIN of the Pacemaker also featured the "colors matched to sea and sky" — blue, white and olive green — that Manashaw used throughout the cruiser and the matching boathouse. A delightful vinyl print, "Dizzy Daisy" by Quaintance, lends fun and charm to boat and boathouse alike with no fear of fading or foul weather. It covers the entire sofa including storage drawers, as well as the lounge chair and pilot seat on the opposite side of the cabin. The print drapery is a matching fabric trimmed with blue fringe. The small forward stateroom, visible through the doorway, is also brightened with this vinyl print. In the cockpit area of the boat, casual seating is afforded by a white captain's chair with a blue striped fabric. The handsome companion piece is a pedestal table from Alladin Plastics. To make the cabins appear more spacious, white is used throughout as headlining while bulkheads and woodwork are painted white. The deck, from stem to stern, is uniformly carpeted in bright olive green.

I thought we couldn't AFFORD a BOAT, but OWENS MARIN Proved I was wrong!

"They helped us select a boat within our budget, arranged for financing on easiest payments and got us started on the greatest summer fun my family ever enjoyed. Let them do the same for you!"

30' Yacht Express

Owens' surprise for 1963 . . . the all new "Barbados" 30' Yacht Express! Offering yachtsmen true boating luxury, this twin-screw, 6 sleeper has solid Philippine mahogany double planking. Its FLD (full-length dihedral) hull provides less roll than round bilge types . . . and added seaworthiness in all waters.

A HAVEN FOR RELAXATION was provided in the boathouse where a nautical approach was taken in decorating the "for fun and family" room. One wall and the ceiling are covered with the daisy vinyl print while the remaining walls are bright blue. The same blue fabric lends color and durability to the tufted-back chair, while the sofa, upholstered in white, provides a crisp contrast. A novel cocktail table "stand-in is a homemade trunk adorned with brass tacks and hardwares. Free-standing firepot stairway, fitted corner windows and a dining set (to left outside of photo) complete the room's features.

A Fast Growing Sport—

SCUBA Diving Is Attracting New Thousands

SKIN DIVING is one of the fastest growing sports in the country. Most divers prefer to operate from a boat, for it allows them to get out into more interesting waters and serves as a convenient rest place between dives. The skin diving flag in front of the boat is designed to warn other boatmen that a diver is in the area. Boatmen should stay at least 100 feet away from the flag.

Historical mention of skin diving dates back to several centuries B.C., but it has only been in the last decade or so that the sport has come into its own.

Today it is one of the fastest growng water sports in the world.

MOST beginners start out with basic skin diving equipment which includes the face mask, snorkel and fins. Often a spear gun or underwater camera is added to make the sport more exciting. With this equipment, underwater enthusiasts can have unlimited fun and adventure.

The next step is SCUBA diving. The word SCUBA comes from the first letters of Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus. In this phase of the sport, more elaborate equipment is required. In addition to extra equipment the diver should have thorough training before attempting to SCUBA diving course. Such courses have become quite popular and are now offered in many cities throughout the country.

Basic SCUBA diving equipment consists of one or more air tanks, a regulator assembly, face mask and fins. To this may be added suits of either the wet or dry type, weight belts, spear guns, and underwater camera and numerous other pieces of equipment depending on just how far the diver wants to get into the sport.

SKIN AND SCUBA divers usually operate from a boat which allows them to get into more interesting water and also provides a convenient resting place between dives. Most divers make use of the skin diving flag, a red flag with a white diagonal stripe, and either fly it from a staff on the boat or attach it to a bobber floating in the water. It is designed to warn other boatmen that skin divers are operating in the area and that they should stay at least 100 feet away.

ALL SKIN divers should follow a few simple rules.

First and most important, never dive alone. Have a dependable "buddy" with you. Be familiar with the waters. Know the sea life in the area and the influence of tides and current. Have a boat or other operating base where you can go to rest. Be in good physical condition and know your limitations. Don't try to overdo it. Have a skin diving flag clearly visible to let other boatmen know you are in the water. Do not dive in areas where others are fishing from boats or the shore.

Diving is a sport that attracts thousands of new enthusiasts each year. Although it is not difficult to learn, it does require training and instruction. Before giving it a try, be sure you are qualified.
